ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The Stock in Demand.

Fortunately for all concerned, the flowers most popular for St. Valentine's uses are those most abundant at this season of the year. First of all comes the violet; nothing else equals it in popularity for this date. Second choice is the sweet pea, with, of course, a certain proportion of the customers using cattleyas instead of the less expensive flowers. With the violets go gardenias and valley.

Violets are just coming into the spring crop in the early part of February, so that a large supply is assured. With many growers the winter-flowering varieties of sweet peas are just coming in, so that these also will be abundant. Cattleyas by the middle of February will not be so plentiful as they have been through January. The crop of Cattleya Trianæ is passing, but it is a misfortune rather than a benefit to have cattleyas too plentiful. A great many flower buyers select orchids merely because tney are orchids and are thought to be something exclusive and out of the ordinary. When you cheapen the price of the orchid it loses its value in the eyes of a good many people. Gardenias are now in much heavier supply than they were a year or two ago, for there are many more growers producing them. Of valley there usually is an abundance. Therefore the retail florist can go ahead with his St. Valentine's day preparations with the assurance that there will be good supplies of the most popular flowers and an unlimited supply of bulbous stock to fall back upon should the season's specialties, and the staples, fail to satisfy the demand.

Accessories Are Essential.

Practically all the St. Valentine's flowers go out in one of two forms. Either they are sent merely as boxes of loose cut flowers, or they are made up in the form of corsage bouquets. It is as important to have the accessories as it is to have the flowers. Of prime importance is the stock of boxes of appropriate size and shape, but of almost equal necessity is a stock of such materials as corsage shields of more or less elaborateness, appropriate ribbons and ties, with large, fancy-headed pins or clasps—no use sending out a corsage without some means for the recipient to attach it to her costume.

PLANTS FOR VALENTINES.

Plantsmen Not to be Denied.

It is only in recent years that St. Valentine's day, February 14, has come into any prominence as a special flower day, but in the last two or three seasons it has come strongly to the front. People of mature years and refined taste have found the youthful practice of sending valentines again opened to them by the ingenuity of the florist: To a grown man the tissue paper gewgaw with the amorous verse was an impossibility, but nothing could be in finer taste than for him to send each of his lady friends a box of flowers on St. Valentine's day.

The moment enterprising florists began to advertise to call attention to the appropriateness of the use of flowers as valentines, the business began to grow, until now February 14 is one of the special flower days for which preparations must be made if one is to take full advantage of his opportunities.

When the retailer began to push for St. Valentine's day business, it was all cut flowers. At first the sales mostly were boxes of loose cut flowers, and they probably still are, but corsage bouquets soon came to be the specialty of the day. Most of these were made of violets, but sweet peas are only slightly less popular, with orchids appealing to the class of trade that is willing to spend more money. All these call for the use of cut flowers, and St. Valentine's has been a cut flower day.

But when any day develops a special demand for the retail florists, plants are not for long to be denied a share of the extra business.

Some Simple Plant Arrangements.

Last year it occurred to some of the St. Valentine's Day Baskets Arranged by Jacob Schulz, Louisville.

retailers who grow their own plants that if the public will buy boxes of cut flowers to send as valentines, baskets of plants can be sold for the same purpose, just as at Christmas.

Now, the public expects its Christmas plants to be hung with Christmas bells, or tied with ribbon of the Christmas hue; and by the same token, the Easter plants are known for what they are because here and there peeps an incubator chick or duckling. So to make a St. Valentine's day plant just that and nothing else, to make it carry unmistakably the sentiment of the day, what more natural than to trim it up with Cupids, darts, or little hearts?

Those who tried it last year found it added materially to their sales.

Appreciating the value of an air of seasonableness in the stock of the retail florists, the supply houses always are quick to provide for their customers the trifles that go to make plant decorations timely and this year all the leading houses are offering inexpensive novelties for use at St. Valentine's day.

CORSAGE MATERIAL.

The sales for St. Valentine's day made a big jump forward when the retailers began to feature corsage bouquets for February 14. Of course the greater part of the sales still are the everyday boxes of loose cut flowers, but the advertising of corsage bouquets has helped sales all along the line by attracting attention to the appropriateness of all kinds of flowers for use as valentines.

The big city stores now use many thousands of violets for St. Valentine's day, almost as many as at Christmas. It is the result of push and publicity. For the better class of trade the violets are made up in corsage bunches of from 100 to 300 flowers. The violet foliage is used, backed by a shield of more or less elaborateness, according to the price charged. In the center of the bunch of violets there may be one fine gardenia or three or four spikes of valley, set so that the gardenia or the lower bells of the valley are just above the violets. The stems of the violets ordinarily are wrapped in violet or green foil, but the best workmen use ribbon. It is surprising how quickly they wrap and fasten the ribbon and attach the shield. Then comes the tie, which may be one of the ready-made affairs now offered in infinite variety by all the ribbon and supply houses, or it may be a bow of wide ribbon off the bolt. The box is lined with white tissue, not wax paper, for there is little moisture. With the advent of the better grades of boxes, the wrapping of the boxes has been discontinued; the box is too fine to conceal. The tag-makers now supply special designs for St. Valentine's day tags.

Next to violets, sweet peas are the most popular corsage flowers. It takes a more skilled worker to make a good bunch of peas than it does of violets, for the violets ought literally to be bunched, while the peas should be more loosely arranged. While adiantum is only occasionally used with violets, it is the usual green with sweet peas, although many retailers now are using the so-called Mexican ivy instead; indeed, the growing popularity of this native of the Santa Cruz mountains is cutting into the market for and price of the greenhouse green. For a tie for the peas a special ribbon should be in stock; narrow and light in effect, with colors to match the several colors of peas that are used from time to time.

The cattleya is the king of corsage flowers. With the requisites that go to make up bouquets of the other flowers, the worker has everything he needs with cattleyas. These should have the green that is added kept well to the back, so that neither the size, form nor color of the individual flowers will be obscured. The Mexican ivy, though a somewhat coarse green, has come to be largely used with cattleyas, because it does not wilt down the way adiantum is apt to do.

Rugby, N. D.—N. P. Lindberg reported, under date of January 22, that for a few weeks there had been real winter here, with the temperature as low as 46 degrees below zero. Still, business was fair and the stock in the greenhouses was in good condition.

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleya Trianæ.

Cattleya Trianæ, being now in good crop, wants the cooler end of the house while open. It requires or prefers a little more warmth than C. labiata while growing, though both do well together. All cattleyas must be watered sparingly at this season, but when watering is done, soak them well and do not merely dribble a little on the surface. The buds will soon show in the sheaths of C. Schroederæ. Keep these at the warm end of the house. No shade, except for plants in flower, and some air every day, should be the motto for cattleyas.

Odontoglossums like a sunny house in winter. They want no shade before the middle or end of March. Lean-to north houses, often recommended, are useful for summer, but valueless in winter, when the plants want sun. Be it remembered that the growth is mainly made in the cold months, and if it is made in a sunless structure the plants will not stand the summer heat nearly so well as those which have had the foliage bronzed and toughened by the winter sun. Wrap a little cotton-wool at the base of all spikes as they appear, as a protection against snails, especially where sphagnum moss is used.

Miltonias.

Miltonias like a little more warmth than odontoglossums. If in the same house, give them the warmer end; 52 to 55 degrees at night should not be exceeded. They do well at the cool end of a cattleya house. Water carefully. Examine new growths; sometimes the sides of the leaves in new growths get caught and want releasing with a knife. Give full sun, and if the day is warm and bright a light spraying will do them good, being sure, however, that they are dry before night.

Sophronitis Grandiflora.

The brilliant little orchid, Sophronitis grandiflora, which has proved of so much value in hybridizing, is still in flower, the flowers being carried on the new growths. It grows well in small, shallow pans in a cool house and lasts a long time in bloom.

Calanthes.

As the calanthes pass out of flower, store the pots or pans away on a shelf in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees, and keep them perfectly dry at the roots until they show signs of activity at their base. Then shake out and start in a brisk heat in flats of sand.

Dendrobiums.

Dendrobiums of the nobile type will mostly now be showing nodes and some are already flowering. While in flower they like shade and a temperature not below 50 degrees. If moved at once from a temperature of 65 degrees to one of 50 degrees, they will wilt badly; let the change be gradual. D. Phalænopsis Schroederianum and D. formosum giganteum, now done flowering, are benefited by a season of rest in a rather cooler house, after a few weeks of which any repotting or rebasketing is in order. D. nobile and its many hybrids are easily propagated from mature bulbs which have flowered. These, if cut off, laid on flats containing some sand and sphagnum and occasionally sprinkled, will soon develop numerous growths in a warm, moist house, which can later be placed several together in small pans or baskets.

Cypripediums.

The cypripediums are now in their full glory, and what a superb show a collection makes! They are fully as useful as cattleyas, besides being far more durable and of easier culture. These, being terrestrial orchids, have no real period of rest, and a severe drying will cause loss of foliage. Keep a decidedly moister atmosphere for these than for cattleyas and the atmosphere can be closer and warmer. The bulk of these succeed well in a mixture of fibrous loam and fern fiber. As the insigne section passes out of flower, any needing repotting can be shaken to pieces. The plants will not flower much the first year after repotting.

Lycaste Skinneri.

The grand old orchid, Lycaste Skinneri, does well at the cold end of a cattleya house. The growths are now made up and numerous flower spikes are starting to open. There are few orchids more attractive than L. Skinneri when well flowered and the blooms keep in good condition for eight to ten weeks. There is a pure white form which is particularly beautiful. This orchid should now be kept tolerably dry. It grows well in pots in a mixture of fern fiber and fibrous loam, surfaced with fresh sphagnum.

THE CROSS OF ORCHIDS.

Last week Chicago retail florists, or at least those who conduct the leading stores, had about as heavy a run of funeral work as ever has been experienced in one day. A midnight collision cost the lives of four high-up railroad officials, whose funerals all were held January 25, either in Chicago or in its suburbs. The prominence of the men and the nature of their deaths resulted in a call for funeral work which has not been equaled in recent experience, if ever. Not only were the designs of unusual number, but for size and cost many were notable. Probably the largest and most expensive of the lot is shown on page 13. It was a cross of orchids and valley, made by the Fleischman Floral Co. for the Illinois Central railroad and sent to the funeral of J. T. Harahan, ex-president of the Illinois Central. The design stood over six feet high, and Cattleya Trianæ and valley were the only flowers used. It is reported that the Fleischman Floral Co. received $500 for the design.

BLOOMS DO NOT OPEN.

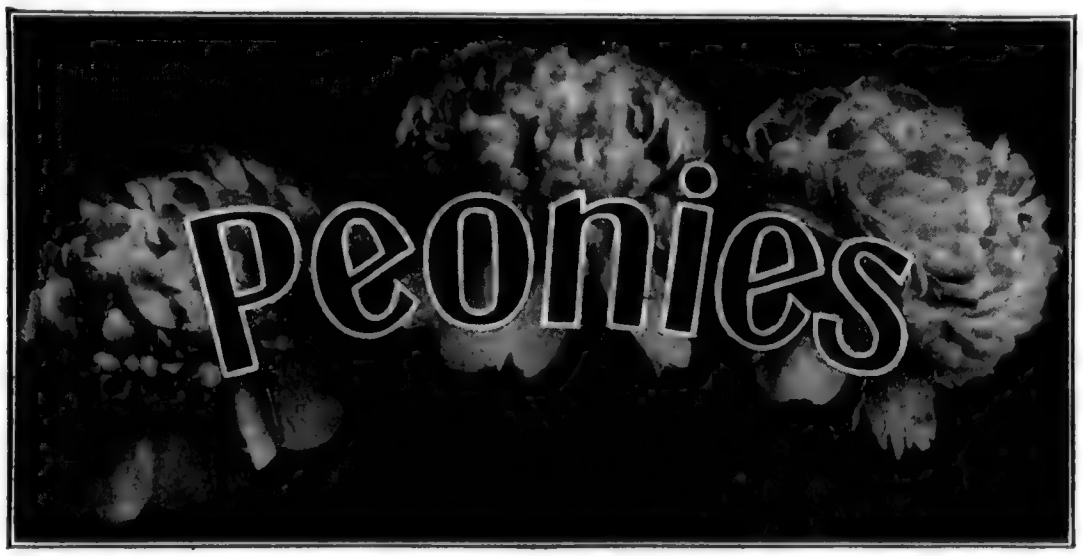
Will some one tell me how I can get my carnations to give me some flowers? They have lots of buds, but it takes them too long to open. I have 160 plants and I can not get a dozen blooms from them in a week. The soil is composed as follows: First, a layer of manure on the bottom, so the soil would not go through the cracks; then leaf-mold; then good soil; then a little manure, well rotted; then soil, and, last, a little manure again, but remember, this is done in layers, not mixed up. I have three varieties. The light pink ones have not given me a half dozen blooms so far. The Rose-pink and White Enchantress have been a little better, but not as they should be. There are no bugs that I can see.

Is there anything that I can feed them with to make them bloom? Please tell me, if my soil is not right, how to fix it for next year. What kind of fertilizer is the best to get for greenhouse work, for carnations, geraniums, bedding plants, cabbage and tomato plants, to hustle them along in the spring? I have been looking around among some of the big greenhouses and examining their stock; mine does not look as theirs does. I am new in this line, though I have tried it for two years. My house is 15 x 40 and is heated with hot water. F. W. G.

If your plants look thrifty and, as you say, carry lots of buds, there may not be anything seriously wrong with them, except that the crop is late in coming in. You may have planted them late to begin with, or the plants may have been slow in getting into active growth, for some reason which

Five-hundred-dollar Design by the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, for the Funeral of J. T. Harahan.

I can not give at this time without more data. Your soil is not prepared properly. For next season leave out the leaf-mold, and mix the soil and manure thoroughly early in the spring, before you want to use it. You will not need a great deal of fertilizer, aside from good cattle or stable manure. With these and a good loam you can prepare a soil in which any plant will thrive. A light addition of pulverized sheep manure will sometimes help to boost things along, but do not overdo it.



Growers too frequently harbor the idea that fertilizers are for the purpose of starting weakly plants into a strong growth. No greater mistake could possibly be made than this. A plant must be in active growth before it can assimilate any great amount of food, and almost any fairly good soil will contain as much food as a weak plant is able to take up. When the plant gets into active growth and is making progress toward robust health, then a stimulant will cause it to spring forward more rapidly in its growth. Fertilizers should be considered as supplemental, and not of a curative nature. In other words, you can not cure a sick plant by dosing it with fertilizers, but you can make a healthy, strong plant grow faster and stronger by giving it extra food. Furthermore, a well prepared soil is worth more than all the fertilizers you can put on afterward.

REMEDY FOR RUST.

Referring to an inquiry in The Review of January 25, regarding carnation rust, to which A. F. J. B. replied that "there is no known remedy that will destroy the rust without destroying the parts affected," the Aphine Mfg. Co., Madison, N. J., calls attention that Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass., has had excellent results in the use of Fungine as a cure for rust on carnations. He used one part of the fungicide to forty parts water.

FERTILIZER FOR PEONIES.

I should like to get a little information concerning the culture of peonies. What is the best fertilizer and how should it be applied to the best advantage? How are wood ashes, if worked into the soil around the roots? I begin cultivating just as soon as the ground is in condition for it in the spring and continue to cultivate until July; then I let the weeds grow, burning them off early, before the buds are through the ground. I have practiced this for the last two years, with good results. J. W. D.

Well rotted cow manure, applied to the plants late in October, is probably the best fertilizer for peonies. Being strong feeders, they require rich ground and this should be thoroughly enriched before they are planted. Bone and wood ashes, applied in early spring and scratched in about the plants, are helpful. E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., in a lecture in Boston last May, recommended a good potato fertilizer, rich in potash, as being good for peonies; this, of course, would be applied in spring. I do not approve of allowing weeds to grow, as they only use up food which the plants should have. C. W.

STORING PEONY BLOOMS.

I am interested in storing a few peony blooms for Memorial day this year and would appreciate information through The Review on the following points: At what stage of development should the flowers be cut? How should they be packed? At what temperature should they be held and how treated while in storage? How long can they be held in salable condition? W. L. L.

Success in storing peonies is easier to describe than it is to attain; all there is to do is to cut the flowers just as they are ready to open, bunch and wrap them carefully, put in pails of water and stand in the apple temperature of any public cold storage warehouse. Theoretically, then, the peonies should keep in prime condition for a couple of weeks, some varieties considerably longer. But the fact is they don't do it, except for the few, who have acquired their ability through long experience and close observation. The average peony grower has found his flowers to be worth as much the day they are cut, no matter when it is, as they are worth after being put in storage to await a special demand. Holding the stock may be worth trying in a small way, but don't risk too much at the start.

Apparently the first detail to observe in storing peony flowers is to select the right varieties to grow. As a keeper there is nothing beats the old Queen Victoria, but the flower is far behind the times in the matter of quality. Some of the finest varieties, however, have faults that destroy their value for storage and shipping. Then, too, the peonies have to be well grown. The stage in which to cut depends on the variety; some will not open if cut too soon, while others soften and drop if not cut right. Also, the stage in which to cut depends somewhat on weather conditions and time of day in which the work is done. Most varieties should be cut just before the bud breaks. Thirteen identical buds should go into each bunch, after being given a drink. The lower foliage should be pulled off and the stems cut to even length. With as little delay as possible they should be wrapped tightly, placed in water not deep enough to reach the paper, and be placed in a room kept just above freezing. The peony specialists keep Queen Victoria under such conditions for as much as four to six weeks, but peonies are not like wine; beyond a quickly reached point none of them improves with age.

SOIL FOR DAHLIAS AND ASTERS.

I have some soil which I am planning to use for the growing of dahlias and asters and I should like to know whether the soil is suitable for such a purpose. The soil was removed from a small lake about four or five years ago. It contains sand about the size of buckshot, besides decayed leaves, and has grown several heavy crops of corn, but early planted vegetables do not ripen in it as soon as those planted in other soil. A. H.

This muck-like soil, which has grown good crops of corn, should grow equally good asters and dahlias. It is in itself rather light and would produce earlier crops were it mixed with loam, either sandy in nature or of a rather stiff and retentive nature. The great trouble with this soil is that it dries out badly in summer unless well mixed with some other material, and when once it gets quite dry, it takes a lot of rain to wet it. When it is well incorporated with other soil, however, and has been in use a few years, it makes good soil. There is no reason why your dahlias and asters should not do well in it if you manure it liberally, and, as soon as the ground is open, plow it deeply. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Antirrhinums.

While it is as yet too early to sow snapdragon for planting outdoors, this is an excellent time to make a sowing for indoor culture to bloom for Memorial day. While white, yellow and pink are the best colors to sell in winter, it will be well to use some of the higher colors to flower at the end of May, these selling much better than the light shades. If you have a batch of plants blooming now, you can also secure an abundance of good cuttings from the flowering stems to perpetuate any extra good strains. These, if rooted in a carnation cuttings bench, potted and benched, will also come in useful for Memorial day trade. Antirrhinums are rather heavy feeders and plants now in crop will be benefited by a mulch of sheep manure and liquid manure once a week. Keep the plants carefully supported, for once the stems become bent they are practically useless.

Bouvardia.

Those useful winter-flowering plants, the bouvardias, will now be over for the season. All are readily propagated from root cuttings. This means cutting up the thickest pieces of the roots into short lengths and covering them with sand in the warmest propagating bench at command, where they will soon start to push up little growths. B. Humboldtii corymbiflora propagates easily from soft wood cuttings, which can soon be obtained in quantity by simply heading back a few old plants and placing them in a warm house to break.

Genistas.

Genistas started now will flower before Easter, but where nice flowering pot plants are in demand they can be used for some weeks prior to that time. Do not give them a warm house; the cooler they are grown, the better. The absolute maximum night temperature should be 50 degrees. If cuttings have not yet been put in, place a batch in the sand now. The small side shoots, rubbed off with a heel, are the best and root more quickly than those cut through with a knife. They root readily in a carnation cutting bench.

Spiræas.

The Easter spiræas, or astilbes, should now be placed in a warm house. If they have been potted up for some time they will have made quite a few roots, even in a cold pit, and will now start into growth quickly when given heat and moisture. The old S. Japonica, as a pot plant, is now almost entirely superseded by the improved forms, such as Gladstone, astilboides floribunda and grandiflora. These take a few days longer to force into flower than S. Japonica. Queen Alexandra, while it can be forced into flower for Easter, is never seen in its best condition so early. It will pay much better to hold it for Memorial day trade, when its flowers realize double the price of the white varieties. All these spiræas enjoy heat, moisture at the root, feeding when once potbound, and as the foliage is easily scorched be sure to go lightly on fumigating where they are growing.

Rhododendrons.

Any rhododendrons intended for Easter should now be placed in a cool house and allowed to develop slowly. This is a much better policy than giving them a sweltering heat and copious syringings. Of course, they can be forced open under a few weeks of this treatment, but the flowers have no staying qualities. The new varieties, Pink Pearl and White Pearl, while rather high priced yet, are the best sellers in the market at Easter to critical customers.

Azaleas.

The Easter azaleas need not be subjected to any real forcing yet. They are better, however, in a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, in which the bulk of them will flower on time. Any which seem a little backward a month hence can be given a warm house, where they can be freely syringed and pushed along.

Azalea Mollis.

The beautiful Azalea mollis is a good seller, not alone at Easter, but for many weeks before that date. There are few plants which make a store window look more attractive than Azalea mollis in its exquisite shades of color. At this season it does not take over five weeks to force it into flower, and anyone who has a demand for nice flowering plants should place a few in heat weekly. For Easter it is early yet to start the plants, unless they are placed in a moderately cool house. It is much better to develop the flowers in a rather cool house, as they will then have a great deal more substance.

Lorraine Begonias.

Lorraine begonias which were headed back after the Christmas holidays and have been kept in a warm house are now giving a good crop of cuttings. These should be placed in the propagating bench once a week. Of course, there are still several months left in which to root these popular winter flowering begonias. Cuttings rooted even as late as early July will make nice little plants. Such as are rooted this early can be grown along to specimen sizes, if so desired. Do not overlook the newer Glory of Cincinnati, which is going to give Lorraine a much closer rub for popularity as it becomes better known.

A St. Valentine's Day Basket ot White Lilac.

Lilacs.

For Easter it is possible to start lilacs March 1 and flower them in four or five weeks. A far better plan, however, is to place the plants in a cool house now and allow them to develop more gradually. Treated thus they will have excellent foliage and the flower trusses will be firm and of a texture impossible in hard forced plants. The cool plants look better and are not wilted down, as are those which it has been necessary to rush into flower within a month. At this season, when cut lilacs are in demand rather more than the plants, a warm, dark cellar can be used until the flower trusses are half grown. Then gradually move them to light, or they will be soft. Charles X, Marie Legraye and Mme. Lemoine are three excellent forcing varieties.

Acacias.

Acacias are popular Easter plants. They should never be placed in a warm house, being like ericas, purely cold house subjects. It is generally unnecessary to attempt to forward the flowering of any of these for Easter, unless it comes unusually early, as will be the case in 1913. The variety most in evidence at the stores is A. armata, also called paradoxa. This may even need a little retarding to keep it in good shape, for once the little circular flowers start to turn brown, the plants are to a large degree rendered unsalable. Cuttings of A. armata can now be rooted in sand in a cool house. There is no trouble in rooting this variety, and in two or three years they will make nice salable plants.

Burlington, Vt.—John Wilson has been elected chairman of the board of commissioners having charge of the three cemeteries and will no doubt do much to beautify these peaceful resting places.

AZALEAS AFTER FLOWERING.

On page 59 of The Review of January 18, C. W. answers the question of V. A. A. regarding the treatment of azaleas after they have finished blooming. Now will C. W. give us some further information about the potting of the plants? We have some that we keep for customers from the time they quit flowering until they bud again. Should they be treated as C. W. states and repotted each fall? E. F. V.

When azaleas are carried over the summer in pots, which of course should be plunged to their full depth, they do not require potting each year. We have carried large sized plants over for five and six years without repotting. They are treated to weak liquid manure and soot water through the growing season. It is, however, an advantage to plant out azaleas after flowering, if they can be placed within easy reach of the hose, as they make better growth than when kept in pots. The pot-grown plants, however, will flower a little earlier. C. W.

TULIPS AND HYACINTHS.

What is the best way to treat tulips when brought in from a coldframe in flats; also hyacinths, etc.? M. M.

Early in the season it is better to place tulips and hyacinths in a dark, warm location when first housed. If you have no such place you could invert pots or pans of similar size over those brought in, plugging the hole in the bottom to exclude light. A few days of this treatment helps to lengthen the stems, something necessary early in the season, but after the middle of February the plants should have sprouted sufficiently to go into full light at once. Narcissi in variety should not require any drawing up, but could go into the light at once. A common practice is to stand the pans or flats under a bench in one of the houses for a short time, to assist in drawing up the stems. A cellar with some fire heat in it also answers finely for the same purpose. C. W.

STOCKS FOR EASTER.

We have a house, 16 x 200 feet, planted to stocks; La France and Silver White are the varieties, I believe. They were grown in pots and then planted in a bed, not a bench, about 8 x 10 inches apart. Should they be staked up? About what temperature should they be in, night and day, to get blooms by Easter? They are a new crop to us, so any information regarding them will be much appreciated. E. F. V.

For an early crop of stocks, benches would have had some advantages over solid beds. Stocks rather resent a high temperature and your night temperature should not exceed 48 degrees until the flower spikes start to open, when you can raise it a little, but it is better not to go above 52 degrees at night. The plants should not require any staking. A certain percentage will come single; as these have little commercial value, they should be pulled out as soon as they are detected, in order to give more space to the doubles. Any attempt to force the crop will only result in failure, as stocks will not stand such treatment. Ventilate freely; never syringe the plants overhead; fumigate every ten days, and keep the soil moist but never saturated. A scratch over occasionally will help to keep it open and sweet. W. C.

SAMPLES OF VIOLETS.

I am sending you a bunch of single violets and should like to know the name of the variety, as it is free in blooming and a pretty color. I am also sending a couple of California violets. We have grown this variety for ten years. One plant has changed; it is a little darker, the petals are broad and the stems are darker and shorter. Do you think this will change back or will it be a new variety? The leaves are not perfect, but are round and broad. J. G.

The flowers arrived somewhat frozen and can not be accurately named. The variety you send a small bunch of is not Princess of Wales, La France, Baron Rothschild or Kaiser Wilhelm, being smaller and a little darker in color. It most resembles Luxonne, a variety which attained considerable popularity a decade or more ago. The plant of California which sported will probably not revert, and if you consider it an improvement you should propagate all you can of it. None of the violets you forwarded are in any way to be compared with Princess of Wales, which is the single violet par excellence. If you once give this sort a fair trial you will soon discard such varieties as California, Luxonne or Governor Herrick, which are simply not in the same class, either for freedom of bloom, size, length of stem or general excellence. W. C.

ANTIRRHINUMS IN POTS.

We have about 500 antirrhinums in 2¼-inch pots, from seeds sown in September. They are about eight to ten inches high, with single stems. Any advice would be gladly received. E. F. V.

The antirrhinums must not be allowed to become too much rootbound in the pots. If you have any vacant bed or bench, plant them out ten to twelve inches apart. Pinch back the single shoot they now carry. This will result in the plants breaking freely from near the base. If you have not a bed unoccupied now, give them a shift into 3½-inch pots and loosen the ball a little with a pointed stick if much matted. Antirrhinums make a profitable winter and spring crop and are becoming increasingly popular. They like a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, not higher. Your plants would not flower for Easter, but should bloom freely during May. You will find frequent notes on these plants in the cultural columns of The Review. C. W.

FORWARDER IN TROUBLE.

Indictments, charging false representation of contents of packages delivered to the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for transportation in interstate commerce, were filed January 22 in the United States District Court at New York against four Chicago forwarding agents. Each is accused of violating section 10 of the Interstate Commerce Act of 1889 (amended June, 1910), the penalty of which is a fine not exceeding $5,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both.

One of the men indicted is August Bontoux, president of the International Forwarding Co., which concern handles large quantities of bulbs, nursery stock and other imports for florists all over the country. Mr. Bontoux is charged with having shipped 8,500 pounds of natural flowers, or immortelles, as millinery goods not otherwise specified, at a rate of 75 cents per hundred pounds, whereas the regular prescribed rate on natural flowers is $1.50 per hundred pounds.

While it may be open to question if immortelles are millinery goods, the average florist will consider that classifying them as natural flowers is probably just as far from the intent of the men who made the railroads' rate sheets. Possibly Mr. Bontoux may have a good defense, if he can show that immortelles are used by milliners, in that they are not "natural" flowers because they are not in their natural condition; they have at least been dried and most of them also have been colored.

MORRISTOWN, N. J.

The Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society held its annual banquet Wednesday evening, January 24, at Piper's hotel. The society is 16 years old and growing fast, with a comfortable surplus in its treasury. Messrs. Duckham, Totty, Stokes and Herrington were the dinner committee and it was a banquet worthy of the name. The attendance was 125 and the decorations were especially munificent, Carnation Wodenethe holding the center of the stage.

Charles Weathered, of New York, was toastmaster and acquitted himself with the ability and honors that crown a quarter century of experience. There were visitors from all parts of Long Island and eastern New York, every society sending its representatives. The music and addresses were of unusual excellence. The singing of Will McDonald, of Yonkers, was especially appreciated.

The oration of the evening was made by Dr. Whitmore, of Red Bank, his subject being "The Cultivation of Flowers and Their Influence Upon Society." The toasts were: "The Morris County Society," responded to by William Duckham; "The S. A. F.," by John Young; "Financial Supporters," by Dr. D. H. McAlpine; "The Honorary Members," by Robert D. Foote; "The National Flower Show of 1913," by Charles H. Totty; "Morristown," by Mayor A. S. Pierson; "Gardening," by A. Herrington; "The Rose Society," by F. H. Traendly;

"The National Gardeners' Society," by M. C. Ebel; "The New York Florists' Club," by Walter Sheridan; "The Horticultural Press," by J. A. Shaw; "The Local Press," by J. E. Clarey. Other speakers were J. McIntosh, of Tuxedo; B. Wyckoff, of Elberon; William Turner, of Red Bank, and I. S. Hendrickson, of Floral Park. Other visitors were E. W. Neubrand, of Tarrytown; William Scott, of Elmsford; W. G. Badgley, of Summit; John Lager, of Summit; Robert Schultz and William Tricker, of Madison, and Messrs. Rickards, Sperling and Bunyard, of New York. J. A. S.

BLACKISTONE'S NEW STORE.

The illustration on this page shows the new Blackistone store in Washington, decorated for the Christmas season. The decorations were arranged about December 15 and left up until after New Year's. Mr. Blackistone believes that the best way to encourage others to decorate and to get the Christmas spirit is to show a little enterprise one's self. Contrary to the usual custom, this store did not sell any Christmas trees. This was left to the market men and smaller stores. Only high class business was catered to. The sales were about twenty per cent ahead of last year. H. C. H.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There has been little change in market conditions or values during the last week. This week opened with a storm of snow and sleet, limited shipments and light demand. Prices remain firm, but with the promised warm wave and sunshine the older wholesalers predict a February slump and say that accumulation has already begun.

The American Beauty, which was never overabundant, last week reached holiday prices. Other roses, especially the novelties, were firm at current quotations. Of Killarney there is never a shortage and tremendous shipments are anticipated soon.

Carnation shipments are heavy, the quality of everything perfect, but values seem to have reached their limit for the season, and only the prize-winning novelties command fancy figures. The usual winter deluge of violets has begun. Prices have held barely steady, but with the temperature again permitting the street merchants to offer them to the public, no great drop is anticipated. Gardenias are abundant and the best are selling below the values of other years, few now going above $3 per dozen. The cheap grades go to the street and the department stores. Valley remains stationary, the best holding at $3 per hundred. The orchid shipments are large and in great variety. All the prominent wholesale houses are now handling orchids, demonstrating the widening of the demand, as there is never a serious surplus for long. Lilies are plentiful, and a few selected ones command $10 per hundred, the general quotation for the best seldom going above $1 per dozen. The supply of jonquils increases daily and it will not be long before the shipments from the sunny south begin. There is no scarcity of sweet peas, lilacs, narcissi, hyacinths, daisies, mignonette and freesia. Of the last named, the finest Purity ever seen here is now arriving.

McKinley day was well advertised and a somewhat better carnation clean-up than usual was made, but the creation and maintenance of sentiment in New York is a problem that still awaits satisfactory solution.

The Saturday Show.

The Horticultural Society of New York held a successful exhibition of orchids and carnations at the Museum of Natural History. The members of the orchid section of the society held their regular session, followed by an interesting stereopticon lecture by C. A. Darling, on "Grapes and Grape Culture." The blizzard and extremely cold weather interfered with the attendance.

The awards included a silver medal to Scott Bros., for William Eccles as the best vase in the show. The other carnation awards went to J. T. Burns, gardener for Miss C. A. Bliss; James Aitchison, gardener for Mrs. M. I. Borg; Thomas Aitchison, gardener for Henry Siegel; R. Bottomley, gardener for W. H. Fischer, and Alex. Mackenzie, gardener for Percy Chubb.

The principal orchid exhibits were from C. G. Roebling, Trenton, N. J., James W. Goodier, gardener; Mrs. F. B. Van Vorst, Andrew Anderson, gardener; F. V. Burton, William Cordes, gardener, and Clement Moore, J. P. Mossman, gardener. Lager & Hurrell received a bronze medal for Lælia anceps Lageriana.

Special prizes were awarded to the William Ziegler Estate, A. Bieschke, gardener, for a vase of freesia hybrids and one of Marguerite Mrs. Fred Sander; to Percy Chubb, for bunch of violets; to Mrs. F. A. Constable, James Stuart, gardener, for a vase of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, and to Mrs. Myron I. Borg, for vase of stocks. C. G. Roebling received a certificate for Cattleya Trianæ Helen Roebling.

Various Notes.

The New York Florists' Club will meet at the usual place Monday evening, February 12. This will be carnation night and doubtless all the new varieties will be on exhibition. Growers may ship their stock in care of Traendly & Schenck, 131 West Twenty-eighth street, and it will be properly cared for and staged by the exhibition committee, of which I. S. Hendrickson is chairman. R. Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., will be present and will give a stereopticon lecture on his travels in the southern states. J. H. Pepper will illustrate the Detroit convention and J. A. Shaw will talk about Bermuda, with lantern slide accompaniments. The dinner committee has decided to have the celebration of the silver jubilee Saturday evening, March 23, at the Park Avenue hotel, on East Thirty-third street. Tickets are $5.

The Plant Growers' Association celebrates this week Thursday, at Mouquin's, and Secretary W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., says that notwithstanding the exclusive character of the occasion he expects an attendance of 100.

W. E. Marshall is making a western trip and was last heard from at Omaha, Neb.

The Beechwood Heights Nurseries has opened a salesroom at 113 West Twenty-eighth street for the disposal of its gardenias and orchids. The salesroom is in charge of William J. Sheehan.

The Burnett brothers are frequently represented at the gardeners' banquets by their musical children, both boys being artists on the piano and violin.

President Farenwald, Secretary Hammond and Messrs. Pierson, Simpson and Traendly met January 24 at the office of Traendly & Schenck to arrange the American Rose Society's schedule on plants for the National Flower Show of 1913.

Nassau County Horticultural Society celebrated its sixth anniversary Thursday evening, January 25, with an attendance of nearly one hundred, half a car of New Yorkers among them. A visit to Oyster Bay in the afternoon by Messrs. Ebel and Shaw found both Teddy and John Ingram at home, the latter just recovering from quinsy. Mr. Ingram is the only florist in Oyster Bay. He is an orchid expert, making this his specialty, and has over a thousand fine plants in his houses.

A. Moltz has leased the entire second floor of the Coogan building and has sublet nearly all of it. He will occupy the same office and store he has held for the last year and will handle all kinds of cut flowers as usual.

J. Austin Shaw.

Wertheimer Bros. say the spring season is opening up most promisingly. Reports from their ten traveling men are to the effect that the florists' trade throughout the country is in a prosperous condition.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers will hold its monthly meeting at the Astor House February 6 at 3 p. m.

Judge Hough has dismissed the petition in bankruptcy filed January 16 against A. Moltz & Co., 55 West Twenty-sixth street, on consent of creditors. Mr. Moltz claimed the firm is solvent; the partnership is to be dissolved and he will assume all the debts. Maurice L. Glass was the other partner.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The automobile show and the January commencements had a vitalizing influence on the business of last week. Few cities can boast of graduations of public schools semiannually, as Rochester can, and flowers as graduation gifts are always in evidence. Business in general was much brisker than in the previous week, because the weather had moderated considerably, so that shippers were about in greater numbers.

Roses were extremely scarce last week and the prices were almost doubled. Fancy Tafts and Killarneys went for $4 and $5. Beauties brought $10 and $12; Richmonds, $3 and $4. The Mrs. Aaron Ward roses were all quite short-stemmed and they went for $2.50 per dozen, as did short Killarneys. It was necessary to draw on the Chicago market for special orders of Perle roses.

Carnations are plentiful and of splendid quality. Cattleyas are still flooding the market and are cheap, to say the least. Easter lilies and callas are bringing good prices, because they are scarce.

The display in all the florists' windows consists of spring flowers, both plants and cut blooms. Pussy willows are in great favor at present and add artistic touches to baskets and plants. Violets are falling off in supply, but the demand is still firm.

Various Notes.

S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, N. Y., was in town on business last week.

At the regular meeting of the park board, held January 25, Alexander B. Lamberton was again chosen president of the board. William C. Barry was made first vice-president; H. F. Atwood, second vice-president, and John E. Durand, third vice-president.

Charles Sharpe, of H. E. Wilson's, entertained his parents, from Hornell, N. Y., last week.

Miss Nettie Mahr has been assisting at the store of the Rochester Floral Co. for a few days.

Word has been received from the Misses Bradstreet, who are in Daytona, Fla., that they have had cold weather in the southland.

Harry Brush, of George B. Hart's commission house, has returned from New York city, where he had been spending a few days.

Mr. Weller, of Salter Bros., did a pleasing table decoration of spring flowers at the Powers hotel recently.

Mrs. E. R. Fry made a high score at the bowling club last week. It was 340.

George Arnold gave two talks at the Farmers' Institute in Geneseo, N. Y., not long ago.

James Bishop, who had a paralytic stroke last week, is improving slowly but surely.

The Julius Roehrs Co., of Rutherford, N. J., is shipping some fine cattleyas to this city.

William C. Barry was again elected president of the Western New York Horticultural Society, after having acted in that capacity for twenty years, and John Hall was elected secretary and treasurer, at the convention which took place in this city January 24 to 26.

George Kramer has discontinued his activities with S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, and is again residing in Rochester.

George J. Keller has begun cutting his crop of myosotis and it is bringing a fancy price.

F. C. Wallace, of Canandaigua, was in town last week.

Visitors: R. J. Irwin, New York city; Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have had several successive days of severe cold, which as usual has had a somewhat depressing effect on business, and, with the exception of roses, there is an oversupply in nearly all lines of stock. Roses continue to clear out in short order, white varieties moving almost as well as the colored ones. Prices on Beauties hold up well and these are not at all plentiful. Antoine Rivoire or Prince de Bulgarie is a good selling rose and many more could be disposed of. Radiance also takes well; all the yellow shaded roses are also in good demand. Carnations are in oversupply and prices are about the same as a week ago. The quality leaves little to be desired. Violets seem to be opening slowly and are not in large supply, but ample for the demand. Sweet peas were surely never seen in such numbers in midwinter, nor of finer quality. The supply far exceeds the demand, however.

Prices on bulbous stock have been practically cut in two. Golden Spurs which were selling at $4 are down to $2, and even $1 per hundred. Princeps, Victoria, Emperor and Single Von Sion are other trumpet varieties. There is also plenty of poeticus ornatus. Tulips are abundant and of fine quality. Valley is in better supply, but the sales are uncertain. There are also many more Easter lilies coming in. Marguerites are more abundant. The yellow variety sells the best. There is still a good supply of freesia. Of antirrhinum some splendid shipments are seen, as of mignonette. Orchids are overplentiful, cattleyas especially being hard to move. Quite a few Lælia anceps, dendrobes, Phalænopsis and other varieties, are seen. Gardenias are an uncertain sale. Asparagus and ferns sell quite well.

Plant trade is better. Among other flowering subjects now offered are azaleas, lilacs, genistas, metrosideros, double cherries, malus, deutzias, acacias, marguerites and ericas.

Various Notes.

Thomas Pegler has been appointed manager for the Flower Growers' Sales Co., entering on his duties January 29. The company hardly could have found a more popular, energetic or better posted man. Mr. Pegler recently was elected president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club.

George E. Buxton, of Nashua, N. H., is one of the largest shippers of high grade carnations to the Boston wholesale markets. His leaders this season are Pink Delight, White Wonder, Glorioso, Beacon, Winsor, White Enchantress, White Perfection and Bon Ami, one of his own seedlings. He also had grand mignonette and some of the finest pink antirrhinums, of a pure color, coming into the city.

I noted in P. L. Carbone's Boyleston street store last week many grand specimens of lilacs in variety, Azalea mollis, Acacia pubescens, amaryllis, specimen Azalea amœna, forsythias, prunus, and many other interesting plants. Mr. Carbone has had some large decorations of late and the store always seems busy. New and extensive wholesale quarters at 263 Summer street and 10 Melcher street are now filled with a big stock of Italian flower ware, rustic garden furniture, baskets, etc., which branch shows a great increase in business.

W. B. Goodenow, of Stoughton, is recovering from a couple of broken ribs, the result of a fall on the ice a few days ago. Mr. Goodenow has some of the finest Campbell violets seen in the local market.

Prof. E. F. Hitchings, of Orono, Me., lectured before a good audience at Horticultural hall January 27, his subject being "Insect Pests and Their Control."

Mention was inadvertently omitted of the singing of the Boston Flower Exchange trio at the last club meeting. The vocalists were James McCarthy, Nathan Lerner and "Happy" Lerner. Their selections were vigorously applauded and great credit is due Wm. McAlpine, their efficient manager.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, at the Boston Flower Exchange sold from 8,000 to 10,000 Golden Spur narcissi daily last week, in addition to his other bulbous flowers. His La Reine tulips are fine.

The members of the Boston Flower Exchange collected and sent a purse of $20 to the widow and six children of Silas N. Phelps, who was electrocuted at Boston, January 26, for murdering a deputy sheriff.

Galvin's windows on Tremont street have contained a fine assortment of old-fashioned hand bouquets with paper holders. Comments of onlookers were favorable.

Last week developed quite a demand for yellow carnations, which could only be partially filled. At present Messrs. W. R. Nicholson and S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, are about the only growers of yellow carnations. Golden Ray with them is promising.

Aubrey A. Pembroke, of Beverly, through the Flower Growers' Sales Co., is selling thousands of sweet peas daily. He also has a splendid lot of carnations.

The midwinter flower show at Horticultural hall, opening February 2, promises to be specially strong in roses and carnations. There are twenty classes for the latter.

John K. Farquhar is largely instrumental in getting the Newport Garden Association, which comprises most of the wealthy residents there, to hold a big July flower show to run for a week, with some $6,000 in prizes. Floral parades and other features will probably be included. There will be numerous excursions run. Chester I. Campbell, who managed the National Flower Show, has been engaged as manager.

We are pleased to see Edward MacMulkin out again after quite a severe sickness.

A new flower store operated by Macdonald & Askell has been opened on Dartmouth street, near the Hotel Vendome.

Visitors last week included M. Fuld, with H. F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; H. P. Hodgkins, with Arthur T. Boddington, New York; L. W. C. Tuthill, New York; Prof. E. F. Hitchings, Orono, Me.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has 5,000 giganteum lilies which will be just right for Easter. He thinks he will drop gardenias and grow several houses of roses next season. He has just completed a substantial garage in the rear of his greenhouses.

J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, will deliver a stereopticon lecture at the next club meeting, February 20. This will be carnation night and a large display is expected.

The sweet pea show next July is arousing much interest here. William Sim has thoroughly aroused the enthusiasm of both private gardeners and commercial growers, and the exhibition is likely to far surpass any previously held in America.

J. Newman & Son, on Tremont street, are showing some superb mignonette and antirrhinums. Their windows are always nicely arranged.

W. N. Craig.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Altogether, the month of January has been satisfactory to all the florists here, and a brisk business was reported from all quarters. Cut flowers and plants are moving freely and bulbous stock is plentiful, but there is no overstock of any kind. Some fine home-grown roses are being cut by the only growers of these flowers in the city, and the first of the 1912 crop of valley is making its appearance with several local growers and is of a good grade, although somewhat sparse in foliage.

The warm and dry weather we have been enjoying the last two weeks enabled the florists, landscape gardeners and truck farmers to do some hustling, and a great deal of outdoor work has been accomplished. The bulk of the Roman hyacinth and narcissus bulbs is planted, likewise the first gladioli. January 13 we had the coldest weather since February, 1899, the thermometer registering 23 degrees. A sleet storm in the evening preceded the freeze, which, luckily, lasted only a few days. None of our hardy palms were damaged, but geraniums, Boston ferns, Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri, alternantheras, sweet peas, antirrhinums and several other varieties of more or less tender outdoor plants were either killed entirely or partly ruined, and the market and landscape gardeners look forward to doing a good business this spring. Although somewhat late in the season, several florists resowed sweet peas for a later crop, and antirrhinum kept over in flats or pots and planted out now will bring good flowers later in the season.

The truck farmers suffered heavily on account of the severely cold weather, which practically destroyed all of the tender vegetables, such as lettuce, spinach, radishes, etc., and more or less injured our crops of endive, beets, carrots, shallots, mustard, etc. The cabbage crop throughout this section has also been damaged to some extent. The orange groves in the southern part of the state were practically unhurt, for the reason that the sap this time of the year is not yet in the trees and the cold could do no harm. The weather we are having at present is helping the growing crops considerably, and it is hoped that the young crops may be saved. The shipping will be delayed considerably owing to this freeze.

All the seed houses are doing a rushing business, both counter and shipping trade, and all kinds of stock are moving freely.

Various Notes.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. is cutting some fine roses, both standard and new varieties.

U. J. Virgin has his first lot of narcissi in bloom and they are of a high grade. His new crop valley is fine.

Christ Reuter is doing a rushing business in the seed trade, both local and shipping.

The Joseph Steckler Seed Co. has a busy time filling orders for seeds, trees and plants.

C. W. Eichling has some elegant azaleas in bloom and reports a splendid business.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The local market is the tightest it has been for some time. Everything worth while sells on sight and some stock that has little quality has moved well. In short, everything is cleaning up almost as fast as it comes into the market. The call from out of town has been strong.

The rose supply is limited. Killarney and White Killarney are running short of the demand. The offerings of the latter are smaller than those of the former. Richmonds are meeting with a good call. The same is true of Beauties. Other roses, including Bride, Taft, Ivory, Maid and Golden Gate, are all cleaning up well. Carnations are numbered among the "best sellers." All varieties and colors are being picked up quickly with the exception of red. The supply of bulbous stock is increasing and every bit of it sells well. Narcissi are now cleaning up with regularity and have advanced slightly in price. The lily supply is beginning to run short. The local growers of Easter lilies are pretty well cut out and shipments from out of town are not so large as might be easily utilized. The cut of callas, while good, is none too large.

Other lines are fairly well provided for. The end of the week saw some lily of the valley offerings that were the best that have been seen on Third street for a fortnight. The supply of orchids is adequate. The good single violets are taken up quickly, while New York doubles are selling fairly well.

Business in the green goods market is brisk. Fine smilax and Sprengeri can be had at all times. The supply of plumosus is a little short. The demand for cut ferns and leucothoe is satisfactory.

Various Notes.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has about completed the large line of supplies by the addition of baskets of many shapes and sizes.

Harry McCullough has been seriously ill. He is at the German Deaconess hospital in Clifton.

C. E. Critchell reports a much stronger demand for Mexican ivy since the flower market has tightened.

Mr. and Mrs. Conger returned last week from Chicago, where they had been visiting Mr. Conger's mother.

E. G. Gillett says his wire department has been exceptionally busy of late.

On Sunday morning Mrs. Nick Weber, wife of the Mohawk florist, slipped on an icy pavement and struck the back of her head. Fortunately, however, there was no fracture of the skull and with the exception of a few bad bruises Mrs. Weber is doing nicely.

Visitors: Frank Farney, of M. Rice & Co.; Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros.; Mr. Keeman, of the Climax Mfg. Co.; Sam Seligman, of Wertheimer Bros.

C. H. H.

Miss Mae M. Carroll has left D. Rusconi and has started in business for herself at 4262 Ashland avenue, Norwood, as an importer of bulbs and plants.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Emma von Windheim.

Mrs. Emma von Windheim, connected with the seed trade in Omaha, Neb., died at her home, 2616 Poppleton avenue, Omaha, on Wednesday, January 24, at the age of 82 years. She was proprietor of the Nebraska Seed Co., of which H. G. Windheim is manager.

Mrs. Windheim was born in Saxony. She crossed the Atlantic ocean in a sailing vessel in 1852, and traveled to Omaha via the Missouri river from St. Louis in a boat propelled by sails, poles and oars. Her husband, the late Peter von Windheim, was the official painter for the Union Pacific when that road started building to the west. She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Richard Engelmann, of Chicago; Mrs. Henry Nespor, Mrs. Charles Karbach and Mrs. Henry Rix, of Omaha; also by three sons, August, Philip and Henry, of Omaha.

Columbus, O.—The store of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co. was slightly damaged recently by fire.

Independence, Mo.—On the night of January 20, a fire at the Sunny Slope Greenhouses, owned by the S. B. Ayres Co., destroyed the office and greatly damaged the greenhouses. The stock was ruined by exposure. The loss was estimated at $5,000.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

All through the country there are, in florists' hands, large quantities of glass that has not yet been laid. A good part of it will go into new houses in the spring.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The many American friends of Fred Sander, of St. Albans and Bruges, will learn with pleasure that after a long and serious illness he has recovered as a result of the operation the doctors considered necessary.

The big city markets may have, generally speaking, all the stock that is required, but the country at large still needs more cut flowers, and especially more plants, so that greenhouse building will go right along.

Active work is being done in the interest of a federation of the florists' clubs of the State of New York, through which it is expected to be able to reach the legislature and other bodies not now thoroughly cognizant of the extent of the industry.

Don't overlook the near approach of St. Valentine's day. For the last two or three years the use of boxes of flowers in place of the paper contraptions has shown a decided increase. Get up an attractive window display and some good newspaper advertisements and you can help the good work along by doubling your last year's sales for February 14.

The long and severely cold spell was unusually destructive to boilers; also it was responsible for dozens of fires in greenhouse establishments, many of which were followed by freeze-outs. Hundreds of florists who will manage to get through this season with their present apparatus will see to it that before another winter they are farther from the danger line.

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination to establish an elegible register from which to make certification to fill a vacancy in the position of horticulturist in the Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., at a salary ranging from $2,250 to $2,500 per annum, depending upon the qualifications shown, and vacancies requiring similar qualifications as they may occur; also a similar examination for the position of assistant horticulturist at $1,800 per year. Applicants should at once apply for Form 304 and special form to the United States Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

ROSE PLANTS AT NEW YORK.

The American Rose Society, having voted at the Detroit convention in January to join with the S. A. F. in holding the National Flower Show at New York in 1913, has lost no time in issuing the prize schedule for rose plants. The chief feature is $200 and $150 for first and second premiums for group to occupy 300 square feet.

A scale of points for judging plants also has been issued, as follows:

For Groups.		For Specimens.
Size of Group.....	20	Size of Plant.....	20
Distinctiveness	15	Cultural Perfection.	25
Cultural Perfection.	20	Floriferousness	20

IS IT WORTH TRYING?

There still are a few florists who do not avail themselves of the opportunities presented by the Classified Department of The Review—they simply can not get away from the old-fashioned notion that advertising is an expense. But this is the way it really works:

Please take out my advertisement, as I am all sold out. It has sold for me more than 200,000 bulbs. Your paper certainly does the work and I thank you very much. If any money is due me you may retain same until I send you another advertisement.—Wm. Espel, Benton Harbor, Mich., January 29, 1912.

It may interest some florists who do not have as much business as they would like, that this advertisement occupied eight lines under the heading "Gladioli" in the Classified Department; that it was ordered for five insertions but that only four insertions were necessary to clean up a stock of more than 200,000 bulbs. The cost was $3.20.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The last full week in the month proved to be right up to the best January record, and the last three days of the month also have been excellent. Had the entire month been as good as the last third of it was, everyone would have been satisfied. There was, however, no material increase over the same period of a year ago, so that there was nothing to offset the big falling off that nearly everyone suffered as a result of the extremely cold weather the first twenty days of January. On the whole, therefore, the month of January is behind the record of last year, though business has now got back to the regular midwinter volume and the outlook generally is considered to be good.

The general impression is that there is a decidedly short supply of stock, but really the scarcity is confined to the shorter lengths of roses. Of practically everything else there is at least enough to meet the present demand. While orders for short roses cannot be filled and medium roses are kept cleaned up, the buyer who is willing to pay from 10 cents to 15 cents for his stock has no trouble getting all the roses he wants. The difficulty is that where one buyer is willing to pay 12 cents, there are a hundred whose limit is 8 cents, except perhaps for an occasional special order. Beauties have shortened up since last report, but not sufficiently to cause any marked advance in prices.

It is the almost unanimous report that carnations are not coming in as heavily as they were during the time of the rose shortage last season. Some of the wholesalers say they are getting as good average prices as last year,

SWEET PEAS

Long-stemmed, fancy stock, all colors

These are fine Peas—no better ever were offered at this season of the year—the best winter-blooming varieties done to perfection. These Peas have made a hit the last two winters, and our growers increased the supply for this season. We ship fresh from the vines, putting the stock in your hands with all its first fragrance. In good crop for Valentine's Day.

Cattleyas

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always get your orders filled if you place them with us. Order now for St. Valentine's Day.

Fancy Valley

Fine Valley is something you need, not only for St. Valentine's, but every day in the year. We always have it. Order of us.

CARNATIONS

Carnations are at their best at this time of year. The quality of our stock is right up to top notch, and the supply is large and on the increase. All leading varieties. Now is the time the retailers should push Carnations, relying on us to keep them supplied.

Beauties

We never are without Beauties. Your orders always will be filled if you send them here. A big cut of short Beauties now on. Can handle large orders.

Killarneys

The quality of our Killarneys is the talk of the town—and we have quantity, too, but most of the stock runs in the select and special grades, few shorts.

but others report that they are realizing quite a little less; no one, so far as heard from, claims that the price has advanced in the proportion that the supply is reduced. There appears to be a fair volume of business in carnations, with enough stock so that orders at seasonable prices can be filled without much difficulty, and enough stock so that the buyer who is willing to make the rounds can at length find someone who will sell just a little below the market. In spite of its higher price, the best stock has the call.

The orchid market is stiffening, the crop of Trianæ having passed its heaviest. Violets have not been so abundant in the last week, and the demand has been better. Valley is abundant. There are plenty of gardenias, eastern stock. Sweet peas are coming in heavier than at this time last year and are selling well. There is an abundance of all kinds of bulb stock, though now and then good yellow tulips have been in demand exceeding the supply. Jonquils are so much more plentiful that the price is falling, in spite of improved quality. Daffodils have arrived. Easter lilies are not generally in large supply, but two of the wholesale houses have big resources along this line, so that the market never is without lilies. Callas have cut little figure this season.

The shortage of roses is increasing the use of galax and other greens for designs, but the supply of all green goods is ample.

The Spring Show.

J. H. Burdett calls attention that the Chicago spring flower show is close at hand. Many promises of exhibits have been received, he says. The show opens March 12 in the Art Institute. Every effort has been made to reach prospective exhibitors with preliminary premium lists and letters, but it is impossible to reach everyone, and every florist who is interested is urged to write for literature to J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1620 West One Hundred and Fourth place, Chicago.

The spring show is an experiment, and one which every florist should desire to be successful. The Horticultural Society appeals to the florists all over the country, but particularly in the neighborhood of Chicago, to help make the exhibition one which will do honor to horticulture and be worthy of the Art Institute.

Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich., writes that he will try to send some late chrysanthemums. Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., promises an exhibit of Benora. Jos. Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., will send roses, orchids and kentias. Bertermann Bros., Indianapolis; H. N. Lown, of Rhinebeck, N. Y.; W. J. &

Various Notes.

The golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. William Winterson was celebrated at 323 North Oakley boulevard, January 28, open house being kept all day, with nearly one hundred guests. At the family dinner all the eight children were present except Jack Winterson, of Tacoma, who sent a telegram of congratulation. One son is Edgar F. Winterson and another is Lewis H. Winterson, and the venerable William Winterson himself is active at Winterson's Seed Store during the busy season, so that among the many congratulations received were telegrams from H. Bayersdorfer, Philadelphia; John Cook, New Orleans; W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., and H. E. Philpott, Winnipeg. There were many golden gifts. The city dailies have written up the couple to a total of several columns.

Peter Reinberg was the first Democrat to file an aldermanic nominating petition January 29, though he will be without competition at the primaries. Two Republicans aspire to run against him at the spring election. Mr. Reinberg is now giving practically all his time to public and political affairs, leaving his store management in the hands of Tim Matchen and the greenhouses in the hands of George Collins, who has been superintendent for many years.

Installation of officers will take place at the meeting of the Florists' Club at the Union restaurant Thursday evening, February 1. There is one application for membership, Frederick W. Tredup.

A. Lange says he can make no complaint of the January business. One of the orders last week called for 156 corsage bouquets, which were made up in twenty-two different styles.

C. L. Washburn and A. T. Pyfer are pushing the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association to be held at Joliet, March 5 and 6. Mr. Washburn is president of the association, which Mr. Pyfer intends entertaining for one afternoon at the greenhouses of the Chicago Carnation Co.

Ed Benthey will enter the employ of Johnson & Chronis February 5.

Mrs. W. G. McDaniels died January 28. She was the sister of Mrs. F. F. Benthey.

A. L. Vaughan had a card January 29 from Frederick Sperry, who reported his arrival at Los Angeles January 24, and added the comment, "Weather like summer here."

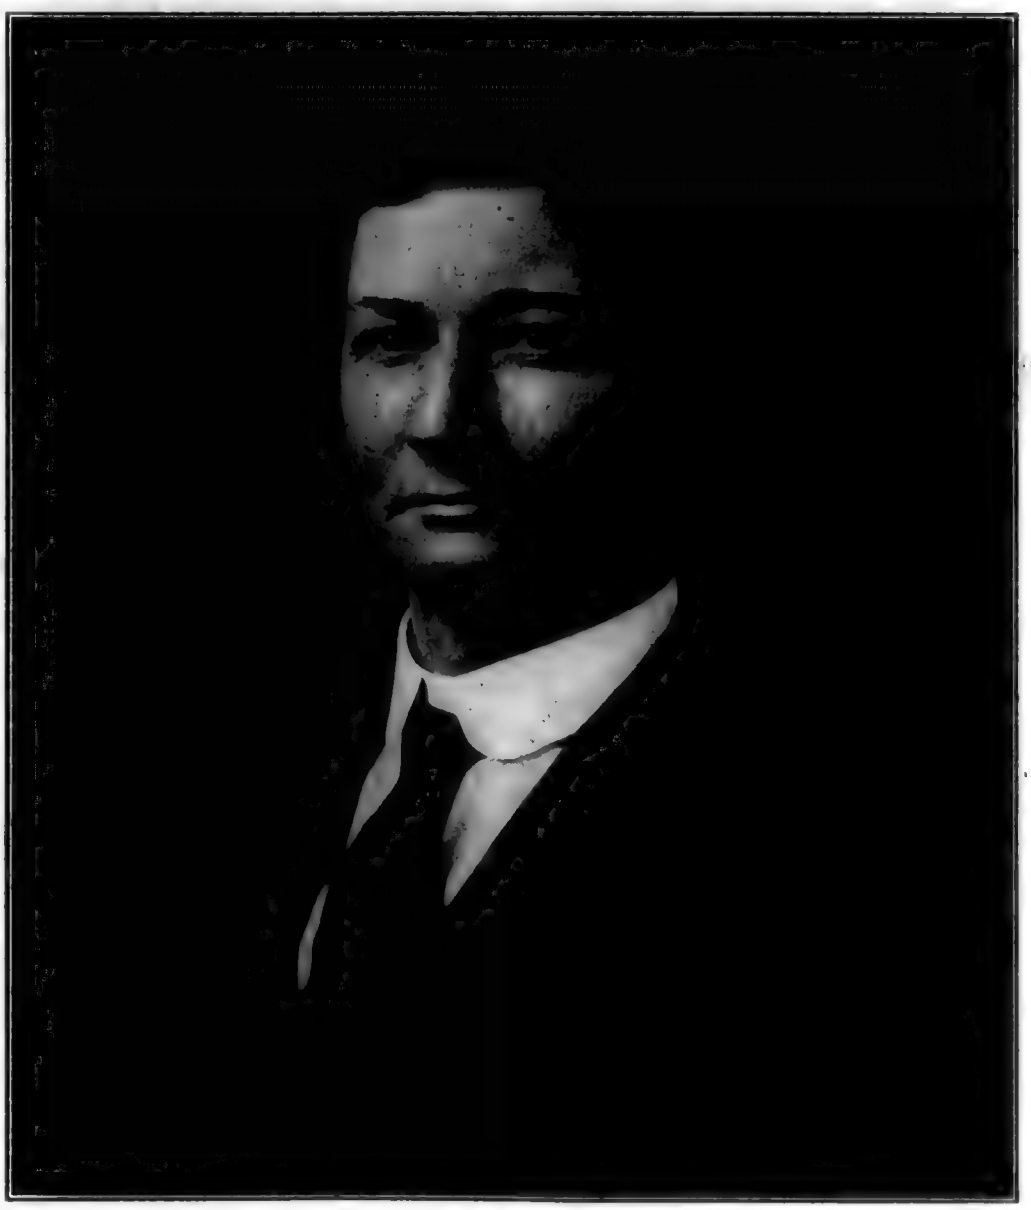
about May 1 to the store now occupied by Harry Rowe. Mr. Rowe has secured a new store across the street from his present location.

N. J. Wietor says it was the best January in the history of Wietor Bros.

Frank Johnson and Mr. LeGanger have returned from a three weeks' trip for the A. L. Randall Co., selling supplies. They went as far east as Boston and report good business everywhere.

John Mangel had an order for 150 azaleas to go to the Coliseum for the automobile show. He had some difficulty in finding that many plants that were in good flower.

Mrs. Frank Williams is attending to business again, after an illness. She manages the Atlas Floral Co. Mr. Williams, who is suffering with a nervous disorder that the doctors say calls for complete rest, has given up active connection with the Alpha Floral Co. and probably will sell his interest there.



For a long time the J. A. Budlong growers have been studying some of their houses next the street; stock would do finely there in summer, but would not hold its own in winter. Phil Schupp says it has now been proven that the trouble comes from a leakage of city gas. In the summer the gas has found an outlet near the leak, but in winter it has got into the sewer into which these greenhouses drain. It took the exceptionally long and severe cold spell to prove it.

Mrs. W. E. Lynch has been ill for a number of weeks, but now is considerably improved.

A. L. Randall Co. and E. C. Amling Co., who with one other tenant occupy the building at 66 to 70 East Randolph street, recently have renewed their leases, which still had fifteen months to run, so that both houses are located for a considerable term of years.

Hans Yepsen, who started a retail store at Morris, Ill., could not make it go and now is with A. H. Schneider at Oak Park.

R. A. McPheron, of Litchfield, Ill., was in town January 27 to visit his son, J. W. McPheron, and attend the automobile show. He is in the market for a light delivery car.

We wish to announce to the trade that Mr. Thomas Pegler, one of the best known and most popular men in the business, has joined our company in the capacity of General Manager.

Orders for all varieties of cut flowers will have his personal attention.

Telegraph and telephone orders from any part of the U. S. A. or Canada given special attention.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. expects to move into its new store by the end of the week. The big ice-box is finished and already there have been many to see it.

John Kruchten says his growers have cut as many carnations to February 1 as they did last year, but that they got them early in the season and have been off in January.

John Zech says he thinks the market is in exactly the same condition as a year ago.

C. W. McKellar says the east has the largest gardenia crops on record.

Kennicott Bros. show Schram's Prosperity-like carnation, Kathleen B. W. It is said to be a good bloomer, but the flowers fade and come nearly white in spring, which is why Mr. Schram has not exploited it.

O. W. Frese reports an especially strong shipping demand from the south, New Orleans taking many boxes each day.

Henry Smith, of Grand Rapids, has been in town this week, accompanied by his builder, examining the latest greenhouse plants and getting estimates on material for a new range.

One of last week's visitors was Edward Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.

Sydney B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, called this week. He says business is good with the retailers everywhere.

The Market.

Business was a little slack here till Tuesday, January 23, when preparations began for one of the largest funerals seen here in some time. E. B. Peirce, one of the officials of the Rock Island, who was killed in the big wreck of the Illinois Central at Kinmundy, Ill., was brought here and buried on Wednesday, this being his home. All of the florists in town were taxed to the limit and one of the biggest collections of floral offerings this city has ever seen was the result. A large amount of the pieces and bunches came with the body from Chicago, St. Louis, and several other cities, but Fort Smith had its share. The spring trade will soon open and the prospects are for a big business.

In the summer the gas has found an outlet near the leak, but in winter it has got into the sewer into which these greenhouses drain. It took the exceptionally long and severe cold spell to prove it.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. expects to move into its new store by the end of the week. The big ice-box is finished and already there have been many to see it.

John Kruchten says his growers have cut as many carnations to February 1 as they did last year, but that they got them early in the season and have been off in January.

John Zech says he thinks the market is in exactly the same condition as a year ago.

C. W. McKellar says the east has the largest gardenia crops on record.

Kennicott Bros. show Schram's Prosperity-like carnation, Kathleen B. W. It is said to be a good bloomer, but the flowers fade and come nearly white in spring, which is why Mr. Schram has not exploited it.

O. W. Frese reports an especially strong shipping demand from the south, New Orleans taking many boxes each day.

Henry Smith, of Grand Rapids, has been in town this week, accompanied by his builder, examining the latest greenhouse plants and getting estimates on material for a new range.

One of last week's visitors was Edward Gullett, Lincoln, Ill.

Sydney B. Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., New York, called this week. He says business is good with the retailers everywhere.

FORT SMITH, ARK.

The Market.

Business was a little slack here till Tuesday, January 23, when preparations began for one of the largest funerals seen here in some time. E. B. Peirce, one of the officials of the Rock Island, who was killed in the big wreck of the Illinois Central at Kinmundy, Ill., was brought here and buried on Wednesday, this being his home. All of the florists in town were taxed to the limit and one of the biggest collections of floral offerings this city has ever seen was the result. A large amount of the pieces and bunches came with the body from Chicago, St. Louis, and several other cities, but Fort Smith had its share. The spring trade will soon open and the prospects are for a big business.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Roses are gradually diminishing as the crops are cut. Carnations have become more popular, deservedly so. Violets are sadly neglected; there are more violets and fewer people want them while the streets are ice-covered. The flowers that bloom in the spring are marketed at low prices.

There has been an excellent shipping and local demand for flowers during the week ending with this month. The average prices, competent judges say, are a little lower than is usual at this season. The supply of flowers is probably larger than ever before during the end of January, despite the unfavorable weather conditions. This means that the volume of business is satisfactory.

American Beauty roses are in stronger supply than this market has ever seen during midwinter. Several consignors are shipping at the rate of 1,000 specials weekly. The market takes them at excellent prices. The medium grades of Beauties are scarce, the shorts unsightly. The crops of the so-called smaller roses are diminishing. Oddly enough, this is first noticed in the shorter grades. Flowers that ordinarily bring $5 per hundred during winter are scarce. The medium and fancy grades are in better supply.

Carnations have been enjoying an encouraging period of popularity. It frequently happens that the carnation reaches the back track about McKinley day, hence the enthusiasm with which the wholesalers greeted the proposal to ally the anniversary with the divine flower. Today the severance of this alliance is of little consequence. Carnations, now in splendid form, are selling at much better average prices than a fortnight ago. There is no advance in listed quotations, but they are firmer and are marketed without shading. The pinks and whites find readier favor than the scarlets, curiously enough, when the season is considered.

The poor little violet is having a hard time just now. The pretty girl does not want the corsage sure to be frozen before she walks a block. Of course there is demand for violets for other purposes, but, unfortunately, the plants are blooming more freely just now and many of the flowers are difficult to market. Prices have fallen.

Cattleyas have been experiencing the hardships of winter. In other years pretty much everything in the way of an orchid has sold at asking prices. Things are not as they were. The enormous increase in the quantity of orchids housed last season is evidenced in the supply of flowers coming into this city today, a supply so great as to give the buyer an opportunity for comparison, resulting in the sharp grading that accompanies a fall in the market. Growers whose cattleyas were classed as first in the past have had unpleasant awakenings with regard to some or all of their stock, most trying to the temper and to the purse. There are just as many cattleyas used as ever before at this season, but this tropical flower is going through its first ordeal.

With the gardenia, practically the same is true, in a somewhat modified form. The wholesalers are having extraordinary difficulty in getting value for a sufficient number of gardenias to keep their growers steady, for the minute a flower ceases to be profitable its fate is sealed in so far as quality is concerned; skillful growers will not have anything to do with it.

The difference between flowers requiring little and great cultural skill is more sharply defined today than ever before. Bulbous flowers are extremely cheap. The difference between well grown and poorly grown bulbous flowers is decided. Nicely finished stock usually brings fair prices, but the poor stock is pretty hard to market at any price. Daffodils lead. Golden Spur is the best of the daffs; single trumpets, a poor second. Freesia comes next; well-grown, pure white, long-stemmed flowers sell readily at moderate prices. Poor freesia realizes little. Tulips are generally unsatisfactory. There are some good La Reine, but the bulk of the other varieties are not equal to market requirements.

pea is far and away the most important. Fancy sweet peas, particularly lavender, easily command $1.25 to $1.50 per hundred; fancies are few. Ordinary, short-stemmed stock is to be had in astonishing quantities, at about one-third those prices when pushed with vigor.

Easter lilies are in moderate supply. Mignonette and snapdragon are fairly good. Pansies can be obtained in limited numbers. The quantity of fancy green consumed is large.

The Growing of Ferns.

Since the incoming of the Boston fern and its sisters, it has been the custom of the growers of Christmas and Easter plants to use these varieties as catch crops, so to speak, to fill in the periods between seasons. The result was that after Christmas—in many cases, before—these ferns were crowded together in an out-of-the-way corner, where they became potbound and stunted. The natural result was that critical fern buyers found it well-nigh impossible to secure satisfactory stock during the late winter and early spring. Robert A. Craig insists that the time has now come when the nephrolepis must have the best attention in winter. To that end he has set aside a number of houses where these ferns are given the best of care and space; their condition today fully justifies his confidence—plants that may be presented in any home without apology.

Various Notes.

James M. Thoirs, of Camden, N. J., had two large ball decorations recently, one for the Royal Order of Moose, the other for the Tall Cedars of Lebanon. His chief decorator, James Walsh, is frequently seen invading the City of Brotherly Love—clear evidence of progressiveness on Mr. Thoirs' part and his own.

The ball given for Miss Widener by her parents was, florally speaking, one of the most magnificent in the history of the Bellevue-Stratford.

toastmaster. The first speaker was H. E. Deneger, who was the active man behind the flower show given by the society at Asbury Park last fall, and who extended the society an invitation from James A. Bradley to make use of his beach auditorium for a summer show. C. H. Totty followed and told the gardeners of the plans for the National Flower Show of 1913. Other speakers included Mayor Bennet, Rev. Father Norris, John Kennedy, president of the Monmouth Horticultural Society; C. M. Logan, president of the National Association of Gardeners; Benjamin Wyckoff, secretary of the Elberon Society; C. W. Moore, of Philadelphia; Editor Sweeney, Dr. Whitmore, George Kettle and others.

The officers of the Elberon society are: James Kennedy, president; D. C. Kelly, vice-president; Anthony Bauer, treasurer; Benjamin Wyckoff, secretary; George Masson, assistant secretary. The dinner committee was composed of Anthony Bauer, chairman; August Grieb, Charles O. Duncan, Edward O'Rourke and Benjamin Wyckoff.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Carnations and roses have never been so scarce and hard to obtain for the last two years as during this week, and roses are bringing holiday prices for the few that are obtainable. This scarcity will continue for at least ten days longer. All other flowers are fairly abundant, especially spring flowers, and these, being much more reasonable, are largely used for funeral work. Daffodils, tulips and violets are especially good just now.

Various Notes.

J. W. Wilson has sold his business and organized a stock company under the laws of the state of Ohio, to be known as the Wilson Florist Co. The capital stock is $30,000, all subscribed for. The charter covers growing flowers, plants and vegetables and selling real estate. J. W. Wilson, president and treasurer of the company, will devote a little more of his time to the real estate end of the business, in which he has had considerable success. A. B. Wilson will be in charge of the greenhouses, and J. H. Bowyer, formerly with J. W. Wilson for eight years, will be back shortly and have charge of the fern houses. The officers of the company are: J. W. Wilson, president and treasurer; C. A. Wilson, first vice-president; R. A. Wilson, second vice-president; J. H. Bowyer, third vice-president; A. B. Wilson, secretary.

Vegetable Forcing.

WORMS IN LETTUCE BED.

Please let me know about the eelworms sometimes mentioned in The Review. Are they the common fishing worm, and when they get numerous do they injure lettuce? G. R.

Eelworms are tiny worms that eat into and crawl inside the roots, causing little, white, bead-like lumps on the roots. When numerous they make a crop unprofitable. The common fishworms or angleworms do not injure lettuce, except by causing a sour, sticky condition of the soil, which puts it in bad shape if the worms are too numerous.

A good dusting of air-slaked lime on the soil will make it unpleasant for them. Or, if the soil is dry enough to water, you could water with a dose of lime water made by taking a peck of lime and slaking it in a little water as for whitewash, and then dumping it in a 60-gallon barrel of water. Stir it well occasionally; then let it settle to the bottom and pour the water on the beds. This will "chase" the worms and not hurt the roots. H. G.

RADISHES ARE PITHY.

Please tell me what causes radishes to grow pithy while they are yet small. The variety is French Breakfast. R. C. H.

Keeping radishes too dry or too warm, or both, will cause them to get pithy early in their growth. I think that more water is probably what is needed. Do not wet the foliage; water between the rows as much as possible. H. G.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been fine. Both weather and business were all that could be expected, and the only regret is the shortage of stock. It makes us wonder what we really could have done had we been able to supply all wants.

Tea roses are off crop with nearly every grower in the city. This same condition exists every year shortly after the holidays, and there seems to be no immediate remedy. The Christmas crop lasts until early in January, and after that for about three or four weeks roses are hard to get at any price. Beauties are off crop as well as teas, but the demand is not quite so heavy.

There are plenty of carnations, but owing to the scarcity of roses they are cleaned up each day and so far there has been practically no loss. Violets are plentiful, but there is no special demand. Spring flowers, such as tulips, jonquils, daffodils and hyacinths, are seen, but not in great quantities. Sev-

Club Meeting.

The Colorado Florists' Club met Monday evening, January 15, the regular meeting night having fallen on New Year's. It was one of the most interesting meetings the club has had, and it will be the endeavor of the officers and entertainment committee to make each coming meeting more successful than the last.

Exhibitions of carnations were made by the Mauff Floral Co., Park Floral Co., Peter Johnson, C. A. Benson and Emil Glauber. The varieties shown were Washington, Ruby, Scarlet Glow, Princess Charming, Bright Spot, President Valentine, Enchantress, Winsor, White Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward, White Perfection and Beacon.

The evening's entertainment, after refreshments, consisted of a three-round bout, several selections on the zither by Fred Wilke, and a discussion on carnations, in which all joined.

The next meeting will be Monday evening, February 5, at T. M. A. hall. The entertainment committee in charge of the meeting is C. L. Gross, Frank Fraser and C. Lengenfelder. There will be an exhibition of roses by local growers, and probably a paper on "Roses" by some successful grower.

or any other flowers, will kindly send them to E. P. Neiman, care of the Park Floral Co. Have such shipments reach here on the first Monday of the month. They will be appreciated.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Manchester, of Arvada, are in California, where they were called on account of the serious illness of Mr. Manchester's brother.

All the florists who attended the convention in Detroit have returned. During their absence the weather moderated greatly, and they were delighted to find it almost like spring when they reached home.

An attractive window was seen recently in the store of H. J. Berry. It represented a mountain scene, and here and there were planted native plants and shrubs, of which Mr. Berry has an unusually fine collection.

Guy M. Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, was here the early part of the month on his way east.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Long are in Kansas City, Mo., having gone there to attend the funeral of Mr. Long's brother.

J. L. Ennegon, of the New York Floral Co., dropped his pocketbook on the street a short time ago, but fortunately discovered his loss in time to follow two men who were seen picking it up. They refused to return it at first, but when Mr. Ennegon insisted, using his fists for emphasis, they gave it to him. The purse contained a large sum of money and was worth fighting for.

Visitors: N. E. De Golier, Loveland, Colo.; Howard Gardner and J. H. Ellis, Greeley, Colo., and C. U. Fohn, Glen Eyrie, Colorado Springs. M. R. J.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Last week all the florists seemed to be busy with work of all kinds. There are a great many social affairs going on which call for a large amount of floral work. In addition there has been an unusual amount of funeral work.

We have been having some splendid weather, which should have brought out an abundance of stock from our local growers; nevertheless, the wholesalers had a hard time supplying the local demand on roses and carnations. For McKinley day pink and red carnations were in big demand, but not selling as well as in former years. In the downtown business district they sold the best.

California violets are selling well and there are quite large shipments coming in daily from Kirkwood. Bulb stock is coming in heavily and lilies, both callas and longiflorums, tulips, valley, freesias, Romans and Paper Whites sold well all the week. Sweet peas, also, are coming in large lots.

Asparagus sprays clean up daily and galax, fancy ferns and smilax had a large demand all the week.

An Officers' Meeting.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club met January 25 at the home of Secretary Beneke, all except Mr. Vennemann, the vice-president, being present. The meeting was called by President Windler for the purpose of making the coming club meetings attractive to the members, and a program was laid out for each meeting. Those present were R. J. Windler, W. C. Smith, W. C. Young, E. W. Guy, Frank A. Weber and J. J. Beneke.

After an hour or so of talk the following program was adopted:

For the February meeting William C. Young will take up the subject of "Pot-grown Roses." In this he will be assisted by Frank Weber, C. E. De Wever and Jules Bourdet.

For the March meeting Geo. B. Windler will talk on "Easter Plants," which will also be discussed by John Held, C. C. Sanders and E. Schray.

For the May meeting J. F. Ammann will take up the ''Relations of the Retailer, Wholesaler and Grower.'' Mr. Ammann will be assisted in this discussion by Otto Sander for the retailer, W. C. Smith for the wholesaler and A. S. Halstead for the grower.

For the June meeting C. E. De Wever will lead a discussion on ''Relative Value of Overhead and Sub-irrigation.'' Gust W. Grossart, Jules Bourdet and Pierre Schneider will discuss the subject with him.

For the July meeting there will be a discussion on ''Chrysanthemums.'' Henry Emunds will take the cut flowers and Carl Beyer the pot plants. C. C. Sanders and H. C. Irish will take issue with Mr. Beyer, and John Held and A. H. Ahner will asist Mr. Emunds.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, February 8. President Windler says this will be a most interesting meeting. Special features will be presented by W. C. Young, Frank A. Weber, C. E. De Wever and Jules Bourdet, and this should bring out a large attendance.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, called on the Kirkwood growers last week and reports that they are all in good crop with carnations, violets and sweet peas.

The H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co. has issued its spring catalogue.

The Ellison Floral Co. furnished the decorations for a number of social affairs last week. Their show house is full of splendid blooming plants.

C. Young & Sons Co. furnished the decorations for the Imperial ball last week.

The Market.

There has been little change either in the weather or in business conditions since last week's report. No one is bragging much, nor is there any complaint. Flowers, except Beauties and roses, are plentiful enough. Bulb stock is improving right along.

Various Notes.

Tuesday, February 6, will be club meeting night. Carnations will be the subject. The election of officers is attracting more than usual attention and Mr. Totty will be there as a guest. All members should make it a point to be present.

H. P. Joslin, secretary of the florists' club, has been confined to his home for a week with quinsy, but hopes to be out before many days.

Gus. Radzwiski, the porter for the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., did an acrobatic stunt off a ladder and through a plate glass window, and never got a scratch.

Randolph & McClements report this the best season to date for several years, with sufficient advance orders to make this good until Lent begins.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been fairly good, although it might be a great deal better. There has been a good increase since the severe weather has been broken, and the local trade is looking for an even break from now on. Funeral work has not been rushing the retailers to any extent, but some nice orders were taken care of during the last fortnight. There has been nothing startling doing in society, although the demand for a few minor functions has been of some help to the business.

Stock of all kinds is a little more plentiful; roses are arriving in larger quantities and will be holding their own from now on. The supply of carnations is increasing daily, but a big percentage is coming split. The dark weather that we had the first part of the month, when the houses were covered with snow and ice for a week or more, no doubt is the cause of the trouble. Paper Whites and Romans are coming in more regularly and there are enough to go around, but stevia is about over with for this season. Jonquils are here, and both single and double ones are selling well.

Some few tulips are to be seen, but the quality is poor. Lilies are hard to get hold of. Some few sweet peas are in the market, but they are not selling so well as they should, as they are of good quality. Valley and violets are selling well, with the supply of the former a little ahead of demand. Orchids and gardenias are not at all in request, but the few Mrs. Ward roses that are to be had are as good as cash. This rose is becoming more popular as the season advances.

Green goods have been a little short of demand. In pot plants we are fairly well supplied with bulbous stock, cyclamens, primroses, azaleas, and a few lilacs and rhododendrons. K. T. R.

Savanna, Ill.—The Savanna Greenhouse Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $20,000. The incorporators are Joseph W. Dunn, Franklin L. Bliss, W. W. Gillespie and Chesley M. Walter.

PACIFIC COAST.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are being treated to a few much needed showers, and from present indications they will stay with us for some time. For the first time since the holidays, stock is showing a decided tendency to become lower in price. This applies practically to everything, with the possible exception of fancy roses. These, on account of the absence of sunshine, are neither up to quality nor quantity. Medium grades, however, are considerably cheaper than they have been. Carnations are plentiful also, and we can look for still greater reductions in a few days.

Violets are the popular flowers at present and they are now at their best. Outside narcissi and daffodils are to be had in any quantity and at almost any price. All the early and medium varieties were held back by the cold weather of a few weeks ago, and, now that the warm rains are here, they are blooming most profusely. Valley and freesias do not sell as well as they did and the same can be said of Lilium Harrisii. Fruit blossoms of half a dozen kinds are in good supply and are being used largely for window decorations. A few late Bonnaffon mums are seen, but they have lost their hold on the public and are only seen in cheap bouquets. As to other lines of stock, there is little comment to make except with reference to the general downward tendency in prices.

Various Notes.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. is receiving large quantities of hardy ornamental stock from Europe.

N. Rolleri has moved his retail establishment to the south side of Twelfth street, near the corner of Webster street, Oakland.

Domoto Bros., of Elmhurst, report the burglarizing of their office on the evening of January 20. About $50 was secured by the thieves.

Geo. E. Meyer is on a three weeks' trip to Portland, Ore., and vicinity.

G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was up to the standard; just sufficient to keep the stock moving nicely. With the advance of spring, stock along all lines becomes more plentiful, carnations in particular. Enchantress is fast losing its redeeming qualities, color and durability, and the perplexing question of the growers is: "What will take its place and give the satisfaction that Enchantress has given?" Apparently Pink Delight bids fair to be a good substitute.

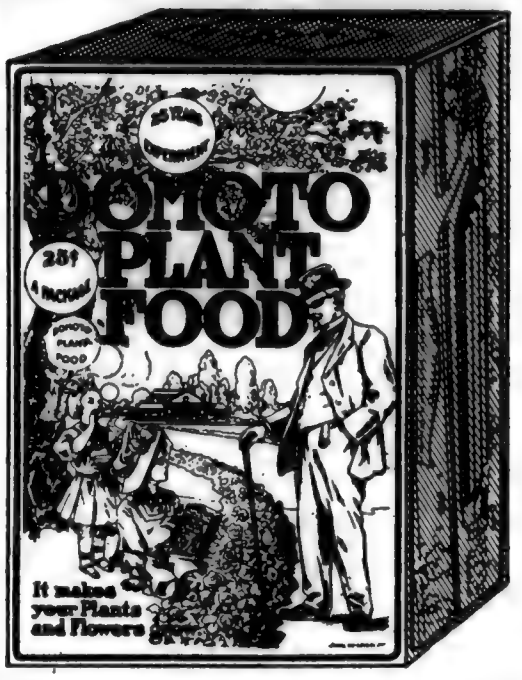
Roses have been in heavy cut for some time, but are gradually shortening up. Lilies, tulips, Romans, daffodils and bouvardia are coming in nicely.

Various Notes.

Dan Lubliner has a bad case of blood poisoning. His finger became infected from a thorn and he has been laid up for several weeks.

S. W. Walker, 194 East Thirty-third street, recently completed a couple of houses, which will be devoted to vegetables and miscellaneous stock.

The Meier & Frank department store recently put in a plant department and reports business so far quite satisfactory.



Max Smith has a large batch of Romans and daffodils in pans, and by running special sales moves surprising amounts daily.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The last week was an unusual one for this time of the year, as we had an entire week of sunshine, with no cold nights to speak of. Funeral work has cleaned up the poorer grades of stock, and, with the graduation exercises coming on, there are prospects of good business. Roses are scarce and the home-grown article is not to be seen. Carnations are of excellent quality and are now becoming more plentiful. Hyacinths, tulips, daffodils, etc., have now made their appearance and help to fill in where other stock can not be had.

Some of the growers are experimenting in the forcing of their own native bulbs and report good success with them. Bulbs grown here can be forced much earlier than the imported stock and, while no one has cared to test this to any great extent, the next few years will probably see great things done along this line. The government has already done some experimenting in the matter, but, unfortunately, little record was kept of the results obtained.

The Visitors from Seattle.

Thursday, January 18, the day set for the Seattle florists' return visit to Tacoma, was a bright day in more ways than one. The day was all that could be asked for and the visitors were certainly in accord with the weather. They were met at the train by the committee having their entertainment in charge, and were taken directly to the place of Van Slyke & Seamons, where an hour or more was spent in sizing up the stock and discussing some of the new varieties of carnations being tried out there. From there they were taken to the city, where a general round-up of the local florists was made.

After dinner the stores of the California Florists and the Smith Floral Co. were visited. Louis Tschunko was the next in line, and here everything was found in fine condition. The Northwestern Floral Co., H. W. Manike and A. A. Hinz were next visited, after which we all assembled at the bowling alleys for the big event of the day, the long looked for bowling game.

The Seattle people have said they delayed the game to give us time to practice and, judging from the results, we must have put in the time faithfully, for the way we took the Seattle team down the line was not slow. In the second game the visiting team showed considerable class, and Holze, the captain, came up strongly, but Hinz, the Tacoma star, beat him out by one pin. The scores will be found on another page of The Review, under the head of "Bowling."

The Market.

During the last week a rather unusual condition developed, for good stock was more difficult to dispose of than shorter, less valuable grades. This may be accounted for by the large amount of funeral work called for and the scarcity of good decorative orders. The stock itself is of good quality generally. Some of the worst carnations ever seen in this market have been sent in, but these by no means constitute the bulk of the stock. There have been quite enough really good flowers to go around and the best of them might be classed as pretty nearly first-rate. Enchantress and White Enchantress have been the best.

The dry weather has suited the outdoor flowers exactly and the stock from irrigated land is fine. Sweet peas, stocks, sweet sultan and irises in variety are the best of the spring flowers outside of bulbous stock, in which the Dutch hyacinths and various narcissi have the lead. Violets are plentiful everywhere and of fair quality. Orchids have been more plentiful than ever before in the history of Los Angeles and at times something quite like a glut developed. The northern flowers are coming of better quality than formerly and there have also been a good many local-grown cattleyas. Roses are running about equal to the demand, the chief call being for short to medium lengths. Some local-grown Killarneys show signs of mildew and are not as good in color as they were a week or two ago. Asparagus and smilax strings are plentiful, but bunch goods have at times been scarce.

Various Notes.

Two new rose houses, each 27 x 300 feet, are to be added to the Wright's Flower Shop plant this season. "Then I'm going to quit," says Tom Wright. That's what they all say.

Geo. C. Watson is a stickler for the carnations raised by Peter Fisher and claims they are best for southern California. Pink and White Enchantress and Victory are his standbys. Mr. Watson's stock is in grand shape now and there are certainly no better carnations coming to this market. There are 65,000 plants of these varieties.

While not a large place as places go, the Superior Nursery, run by C. F. Gutting, is one of those tidy, well kept places that it is a pleasure to visit, and he turns out a lot of stock. The houses in which the stock of Boston ferns and flowering plants was depleted at Christmas are again full of young, healthy stock, including vegetable plants, and everything shows that the best of care is given.

OCEAN PARK :: CAL.

Anyone who wishes to become acquainted with rare tropical fruits and other plants should pay H. Hehre a visit, out at 5623 Central avenue. If his plans materialize for the botanical garden he has in view out at Palm and Michigan avenues, this will surely be an interesting place to visit in the near future.

Adolph Scheffler has a grand lot of pansies this season.

While doubtless some of the palms were crowded in Eastlake park, one hardly expected the wholesale slaughter of fine washingtonias that has taken place, and to remove trees and shrubbery on the south side of the park, to open up a vista comprising paper mills and other factories, can hardly be called an improvement. It is said that a number of the large palms not yet cut down and burned are to be donated to a local nurseryman, to be used by him in his landscape work. If there is no place for them in the parks, this is a much better plan than destroying these fine specimens. "It's an ill wind," etc.

Paul Stieger, of Stieger & Mundwiler, who recently bought out the old Haussmann place at 1940 West Twenty-second street, says he is well satisfied with the trade that has come their way so far. The place is greatly improved in appearance already and fine stock is being grown. The holiday business was extremely good here.

Mrs. Thon, of the Pico Heights Nursery, is one of the pioneers in the business, having been at it for twenty-five years. George Thon, who was born on the place, now runs it and his stock in the greenhouses is a credit to him.

Amy B. Weare, of the Hillcrest Nursery, has, among other high-grade stock, a batch of 3,000 healthy looking Lilium giganteum coming along in fine shape for Easter. Will Weare has just supplied 250 feet of window boxes, filled with pink geraniums, to the Sperry flour mills. This is a promising sign, which the writer was glad to note.

A broader smile than usual graced the classic features of O. C. Saakes around about January 18. Yes, that's the answer; the boy weighed ten pounds. Mr. Saakes says his bulb stock is looking well at the ranch, but needed rain.

A magnificent specimen of Cattleya Trianæ, with upward of sixty flowers open, is a great attraction just now at the Angelus Flower Store. W. Wolters returned from San Francisco January 22.

Business keeps up well at the Los Angeles Flower Market and a fine grade of roses is being handled. C. Morton looks forward to immense shipments of bulbous stock this year, the vanguard of which is arriving.

Big orders for flower pots continue to arrive at the modern $50,000 plant of the J. A. Bauer Pottery Co. On our last visit a carload was just being dispatched south and other large orders were being worked on. The company's list shows a wide assortment of designs, many of an ornate character.

The new Bougainvillea rosa Catalina is now in flower at the Dieterich & Turner greenhouses at Montebello. It is a beautiful variety, totally distinct from all others. The habit is good and the flowers are large and of a delightful pink shade, a good deal like that of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine.

Dutch hyacinths and daffodils are among the offerings of outdoor flowers at the establishment of the H. N. Gage Co. There is also a wide assortment of spring flowers. Greens are coming in good shape from the Signal Hill place and Mr. Gage reports that shipping business is good.

The G. N. Creutz Co. will shortly move to a new location. Mr. Creutz has several places under consideration, but has not as yet decided on one. Business is good here and stock plentiful.

Frank Lichtenberg, of Thee Florists, has been kept on the run with decorations and funeral work. Further alterations in the store are planned for the near future.

John Polder, of the Dieterich & Turner staff, and C. J. Groen, recently with Howard & Smith, have purchased ten acres of land near Newmark and intend growing outdoor flowers for the market at present. They will later build glass. Both men are young and energetic and we wish them every success. H. R. Richards.

Capt. F. Edward Gray states that he has resumed control of the Ingleside Floral Co., having purchased the stock of A. W. and H. D. Ross. Capt. Gray is not so young as he once was, but he is on deck all the same and proposes to make more business than ever.

The Market.

Business was pretty good last week, with all sorts of cut flowers in good supply and meeting with a fair demand. Carnations are now plentiful and in good condition, except that in some cases the stems are weak, owing to their having been grown a few degrees too warm. Roses are in demand and there is not an overabundance of good stock on the market. Violets, callas and bulbous stock are moving in good quan-

Directions for Use.

To get the best results put the stems of flowers in about 2 inches of fluid, leaving them there about 30 minutes. After taking them out of the fluid put them right in water for about two hours, which has a tendency of forcing the fluid up to the bloom and making that pretty shade of green.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Mrs. Emma von Windheim, proprietor of the Nebraska Seed Co., at Omaha, Neb., of which H. G. Windheim is manager.

THE Mel L. Webster Co., of Waco, Tex., has been incorporated; capital stock, $15,000; incorporators, Mel L. Webster, Dan S. Jones, W. S. Murrell and H. D. Kline. Purpose, growing, selling and purchasing seeds, plants, trees, etc.

L. L. MAY & Co., of St. Paul, have given a deed of trust to the Security Trust Co. and J. R. Mitchell, of St. Paul, as trustees to secure a bond issue of $100,000. The deed covers the Mayville nursery farm, real estate in Lakeland, St. Paul, West St. Paul and acre property in Ramsey county.

THE W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has worked a transformation in the Madison street building formerly occupied by the Hearst newspaper and in which the Barnard interests will be centered within the next few weeks. The new front and the splendid location give promise of a wonderful counter trade.

WATSON S. WOODRUFF, ex-president of the American Seed Trade Association, of the firm of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, Orange, Conn., was recently elected president of a new bank, the Orange Bank and Trust Co., soon to be opened at West Haven, Conn. The town of Orange, which includes in its borders the borough of West Haven, Conn., has a population of something over 10,000 and has never before had a bank. Mr. Woodruff has a wide acquaintance among the garden seed trade, both in the United States and Europe.

LOS ANGELES SEED NOTES.

At the time of writing, dry weather still retards business at the retail stores, and also planting and sowing, but the volume of trade compares favorably with that of last year. Catalogue making and mailing is taking up quite a little time.

John Bodger & Sons Co. has already planted about 350 acres, in spite of the drought, and the work is still being pushed. J. Bodger, Jr., has not yet returned from his annual eastern trip, but Mr. Bodger, Sr., says they are going in for a larger variety of flower seeds than formerly and that their lines will probably include some herbaceous stock as well as the usual annuals. Sweet peas, lettuce and tomatoes are leaders here, the pulp of the tomatoes being made into ketchup at the firm's factory here, as a by-product. Mr. Bodger does not prophesy, but says that the sweet pea seed shortage is likely to continue.

Lester L. Morse, of C. C. Morse & Co., and J. B. Agnew, of the Pacific Seed Growers' Co., both of San Francisco, were recent visitors to this city.

Robert W. MacNiff.

ROBERT MACNIFF.

Although only 34 years of age, Robert W. MacNiff has been continuously engaged in the trade for twenty-two years. Born at Newark, N. J., August 12, 1877, at 12 years of age he became office boy for Peter Henderson & Co., New York, where the method of doing things systematically was so instilled into him that the result now is one of his best assets in the seed and auction business he has established. Working into the vegetable seed department, he remained with Henderson & Co. for thirteen years, leaving to accept a position with a Chicago seed house. Unable to resist the call of the metropolis, after six months he returned to New York to accept a position with the horticultural auction house of Wm. Elliott & Sons, an engagement that continued for eight years. Ambitious to test the result of his experience in his own behalf, he formed a partnership with Louis Schmutz, a well known wholesale florist in Brooklyn, and September 13, 1910, opened as the MacNiff Horticultural Co., with headquarters at 62 Vesey street, New York. The concern not only conducts an auction business for the sale of plants, bulbs, nursery stock, etc., but last season established a seed department. Both branches have been a success, the auction department doubling its sales in the second season and the seed department starting so well that it is being materially enlarged for the season now opening. Charles MacNiff, brother of Robert, and for twenty-three years with Peter Henderson & Co., is at the head of the seed department.

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

To economize on the first cost of Lily bulbs is to save at the spigot and waste at the bung. Buy the best there are and your plants and flowers will always look better, sell better, and you'll make more profit. Buy the best and pray for better, for Lily bulbs too good have not yet been produced, although some you read about are too good to be true. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are cultivated for quality and not merely size. They are cared for by experienced men—grown from the highest quality of seed-bulbs, well fertilized, properly matured, assorted and packed. All this costs a little more, of course, and they are principally for those who want the best. Any conscientious grower starting with Horseshoe Brand Lily bulbs as a basis to work on, using good rich soil, plenty of heat, and common ordinary care, can have first-class lilies. Of course he must not permit any green-fly matinees on his plants, for they will soon ruin the chance of a good crop, so it's very important to fumigate in time—do not wait until you see the little pests all over the plants—keep them off by fumigating in time.

Prices reasonable in all bulbs. Send for catalogue.

SEATTLE NOTES.

tities. Cattleyas are fairly plentiful. Good pot plants are selling well and there are some fine cyclamens and plenty of cinerarias and primulas, which help the appearance of the stores.

A Trip to Tacoma.

The Seattle Florists' Club made a trip to Tacoma on Thursday, January 18. It was a fine day, with plenty of sunshine. About twenty-one members made the journey on the 10 o'clock interurban and a further delegation went over at night. A deputation of the Tacoma florists boarded the cars before their arrival in the City of Destiny, and conducted their visitors to various greenhouses in and around Tacoma. In all the places visited, it seemed as if we had been expected, for everything was in first-class shape and reflected credit on the various proprietors. In the middle of the day a banquet was given in the leading cafe, and refreshments of all kinds were tendered at the various establishments visited.

In the evening a bowling match took place and the Tacoma bowlers, on their home alleys, fully redeemed themselves for their recent defeat in Seattle. The scores will be found in the Bowling Department, on another page. An adjournment was afterward made to the rooms of the club, where matters of general interest to the trade were discussed, after the visitors had all been made honorary members of the home club. Refreshments again followed and the balance of the evening was spent harmoniously. The visitors came home on the last car, each one expressing his hearty satisfaction with the day's outing and declaring that a better bunch of fellows than the Tacoma florists would be hard to find.

Various Notes.

At the joint meeting of the florists of Tacoma and Seattle it was resolved to take steps to secure the establishment of an experiment station, if possible, in this state, to take up subjects of interest to the florists' trade.

The Burns Floral Co. is installing mirrors and otherwise decorating the retail premises on Third avenue. The firm pronounces business good in both wholesale and retail departments.

Rosaia Bros. are planning to build a range of glass on the land which they purchased some time ago at Thomas. They took advantage of the recent low price of glass and have enough on the ground to glaze four houses, each 28 x 200 feet. They expect to start construction. H. H. Hawley is conducting the seed department in their store.

A. E. Buxton has just completed a new propagating house at his Brighton place. He is cutting some fine carnations at present.

After looking around among the various houses of giganteums, it seems likely that some extra coal will be needed to get the flowers forward in time for Easter.

The recent mild weather has been good for outdoor work. The nurserymen are busy with orders and lots of planting is being done.

Henry Bomhoff was down from Victoria, B. C., again this week—an attractive place, Seattle. T. W.

According to the late season in California, 1912 Winter Sweet Pea Crop will be late. To avoid late delivery, I will send all early orders directly from my ranch in Lompoc, Cal. These will reach my farthest customers not later than August 10th, saving over 4 weeks' time. We will have all the leading colors and many novelties. Order now. New complete list will be ready in May.

Now is the time to sow Late Sweet Peas. We have on hand the best Spencer and Unwin types, and almost all other florists' flower seeds, like Asters, Stocks, Mignonette, etc.

Send for list.

DREER'S DOUBLE FRINGED PETUNIA

Henry A. Dreer, FLOWER SEED SPECIALISTS 714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The sixth annual banquet of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at the Oriental hotel, in this town, January 25, and to say it was a great success is putting it mildly. The tables were decorated with fine specimen cyclamen and primula plants, carnations and other cut flowers. Conspicuous among the cut flowers was a fine vase of C. H. Totty's new carnation, Wodenethe.

The banquet commenced at 6:30 p. m., with seventy-five guests present, among whom were representatives of the trade and local press, representatives of neighboring societies, gentlemen of the vicinity who are interested in horticulture, and members of the Nassau society. The Rev. J. W. Gammock, who is a life member of the society, delivered an excellent address on the improvement of Glen Cove.

President J. F. Johnson, on behalf of the society, presented to S. J. Trepess, past president, a diamond scarf-pin as a token of appreciation of the valuable service he gave the society during his term as president. Afterward, Mr. Johnson, in a few well-chosen words, welcomed the guests and started the feast.

After the menu had been done justice to, President Johnson introduced Arthur Herrington as the toastmaster of the evening, and anyone who has heard Mr. Herrington preside on such an occasion knows what an able toastmaster he is. His good, sensible talks and witty remarks kept the boys in great humor all the evening.

Among the speakers of the evening

A PLANT NOVELTY

That everybody will want

Solanum Capsicastrum Melvini

The best introduction in Holiday plants for years. A money-maker. Plant dwarf, bushy, 12 to 15-in. high, covered with brilliant scarlet berries, conical shaped, and carried well above the dark, shining foliage.

Awarded First-class Certificate by Massachusetts Horticultural Society and Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston.

Sow seeds now for next Christmas.

GLADIOLI

Try GOLDEN QUEEN and PRESIDENT TAFT for forcing.

One customer writes under date of May 25th: —

"The Golden Queen that I ordered from you were planted in a carnation house on February 7th, and we are now getting fine spikes and handsome flowers. I find your variety to be one week earlier than Mrs. Francis King, ten days earlier than Augusta and two weeks ahead of America. They have been perfectly satisfactory in every way."

I have also a fine stock of Mrs. King, Klondyke, Taconic, Independence, Brenchleyensis, Geo. Paul and other kinds. Write for trade list.

was J. Duthie, who spoke on the society and what it is doing. Frank Traendly responded for the S. A. F. Charles H. Totty gave an interesting talk on the National Flower Show, to be held in New York city in 1913, and asked the gardeners to do all they could to help make the show a success. F. Bowne spoke on the pleasure of living in Glen Cove. J. A. Shaw responded for the trade press and William Davis for the local press. G. Wittlinger, who is president of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, spoke for that society, and William Duckham for the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society. The speaking was interspersed by vocal music, which was rendered by Messrs. MacNicol, Kinnear and Bocks, and was greatly enjoyed by the guests. At the finish all joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne."

All agree that this was the most successful and enjoyable banquet the society ever held, and much credit is due the committee, Messrs. Trepess, Everett and Brown, who did all the work and little feasting.

James MacDonald, Cor. Sec'y.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Last week was dull in the florists' business. Stock is not plentiful, owing to the short days, gray skies and cold weather, but neither is the demand great. Prices keep up fairly well, but deliveries are difficult, owing to the slippery condition of the streets. A considerable number of dinners are being given in society, but there are no especially large decoration contracts reported.

Roses are moving well, but with that exception stock is going slowly. Carnations are cheaper, selling from 2 to 4 cents, and not many going even at those prices. McKinley day, which was supposed to produce a run on carnations, fell flat and the rush did not materialize. In fact, the number of carnations sold may have been smaller than on any other day, owing to a sleet storm that prevailed.

Jonquils are plentiful and selling pretty well, and quantities of mignonette, long-stemmed sweet peas, greenhouse lilacs, tulips and various potted spring flowers are being shown, but are not in great demand. Cottage Maid tulips are plentiful and attractive. Calla lilies are also in evidence.

Various Notes.

It is announced that Prof. Chittenden, of the Bureau of Entomology, will prepare a paper on "Insects Injurious to Plants and How to Fight Them," which will be read at the next meeting of the Washington Florists' Club, February 6. The club will be entertained by humorous monologue selections in the Italian dialect by Edwin Callow, a well known local entertainer.

The Washington Florists' Co. displayed a large portrait of the late President McKinley in its window just preceding McKinley day. Manager Bauer, however, said that not many carnations were sold.

John Allen, of Georgetown, a suburb of Washington, has grown the first white Murillo tulips, which are being handled by the Washington Florists' Exchange. They are fine. Mr. Allen has also put on the market a quantity of potted bulbous flowers, tulips, hyacinths, etc., including some blue grape hyacinths. This is said to be the first time the last named variety of flower was ever grown on a commercial scale in this vicinity.

W. R. Gray, of Oakton, Va., is supplying some exceptionally fine Paper White narcissi.

George Shaffer, Fourteenth and I streets, reports business dull, but he had two large decorations to do this week.

An interesting decoration was done Saturday, January 27, by Gude Bros. Co. at a dinner given by Mrs. W. F. Draper in honor of the Italian ambassador. Richmond and white roses were used in numbers, besides palms and other decorative plants. The Italian coat of arms was done in carnations, and flanked by the American and Italian flags.

Manager McKissick, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., is back on the job, convalescent from an attack of grip which laid him up several days last week. He is rather weak and will have to take good care of himself for a while.

Mr. Martin, of Martin & Forbes, Portland, Ore., is visiting here for the first time in twenty years and renewing his acquaintance with old florist friends. He says business on the Pacific coast is fair. H. C. H.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—Jacob K. Bahret's violets came through the below-zero weather in good condition, but he reports having heard of several houses of violets that were frozen.

Carnation Novelties

Did you see "Wodenethe" at Detroit? If you did, you know that it has easily established its position as the best white, and also won the Sweepstakes over all other varieties.

The "knocker" might tell you this variety is not free enough to be grown as a commercial flower.

"Seeing is believing," so come and see it growing for yourself. This is all we ask.

We can still quote February delivery on "Wodenethe" and "Brooklyn," at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

CALIFORNIA PRIVET

I have been growing Privet as a specialty for sixteen years. It takes experience to become proficient. If you will give me a trial order, you will be convinced. After you have placed an order with me, you can feel satisfied you are going to get stock graded in such a manner your customer will be more than pleased. I still have a large stock of good, bushy plants to offer. Let me quote you.

Fall Bearing Strawberries

These Berries are truly wonderful. They bear fruit every fall as well as spring, three crops in two years. They have yielded as high as 10,000 qts. to acre in Aug., Sept. and Oct. of first year, with us. We cannot get enough fruit to supply the demand at 25c per qt. wholesale. I know of nothing in the fruit line quite so profitable. We are also headquarters for Plum Farmer, Idaho and Royal Purple Raspberries, Early Ozark Strawberry, Watt Blackberry, Hastings Potato. Catalogue of all kinds of Berry Plants free. Address L. J. FARMER, Box 286, Pulaski, N. Y.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

True it is that ofttimes "a bad beginning makes a good ending," and such was the case with last month's business. After the rush of the New Year's trade, the rustle of business sunk to a lull, and, practically speaking, there was "nothin' doin'" for three weeks. During this time stock of all kinds was ample to meet any kind of a demand, with a little left over for the ash barrel. These conditions prevailed up to last week, when business took a spurt. Stock of all kinds was in good demand, but carnations and roses were a little scarce. There is an abundant supply of lilies, which are easily disposed of. Besides these, one sees some fine callas and Melpomene on the market. In bulbous stock we have Roman and Dutch hyacinths, yellow and white narcissi, double and single daffodils, tulips, etc., all of fine quality. Then the violets, sweet peas and valley are abundant. Smilax is fine and in good supply, but Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri are somewhat short. The demand for red roses keeps up well and the Beauty supply is scant. There was a good demand for carnations on McKinley day. Aside from cut flower orders, the funeral work demand has been chiefly responsible for the rushed condition of trade.

Various Notes.

L. A. Thomas, of Troy, O., tells us he is getting some big cuts on carnations and also reports business in Troy to be excellent.

Henry Ehrhardt, of Sidney, O., was in town January 28 and says that everything in the way of trade is quite gratifying with him.

During the last ten days the Miami Floral Co. has been doing a "house-cleaning" business; that is to say, nothing is left over from one day to another. They have been sending big shipments of giganteum to Chicago, St. Louis, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

We regret to report that Miss Amy Ewing is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. E. Young is gaining strength daily, although she is still confined to her room.

Recent visitors have been J. J. Goudy, from Henry A. Dreer's, Philadelphia; I. Rosnosky, of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia; Frank Farney, of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia; S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; Sam Seligman, from Wertheimer Bros., New York; Ralph M. Ward, of New York, besides several Hollanders. R. A. L.

Watervliet, N. Y.—W. W. Hannell has been supplying the Albany stores with a choice stock of cyclamen and heather.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Although the temperature last week ranged on an average below the freezing point, business generally has been satisfactory. Funeral work continues to maintain a good proportion, while several social functions help to keep things moving. There is a good supply of everything and prices are normal.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis J. Reuter have arrived at their home in Westerly after a ten days' trip to Detroit, New York and Buffalo.

Macnair had an immense basket of 500 carnations for a big dinner recently.

Thomas F. Loughran, for many years a gardener at various estates on the east side, died at the Rhode Island hospital Thursday, January 25, aged 56 years. Death was due to a cancer on the neck. He laid out a number of the best known estates and had a reputation as a clever workman.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, had the large decorations at the Goddard residence recently.

Henry W. Harris, 61 years old, was found frozen to death in his yard Saturday night. He was a gardener, employed at various times on large estates in this vicinity. He leaves a wife and several children.

A Seedling of S. M. MERWARTH & BRO., Easton, Pa.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The drift of business last week ran mostly to funeral work and it was a rather difficult task to get enough light colored stock to fill orders. The supply of carnations was hardly equal to the demand at any time, and roses, in the light shades, were also short of the demand.

It seems strange that there are so many split carnations coming in daily; not from only a few growers, but from all alike.

Various Notes.

McKinley day did not create an unusual demand for carnations locally. While a few extra were bought, the increase was not sufficient to indicate that they were intended for that special occasion.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. made special efforts to create a demand for carnations for McKinley day, but reports that while the shipping orders during the last part of the last week used more carnations than usual, the day did not cut much figure locally.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is now harvesting its annual crop of Asparagus plumosus seed at the Brown Deer plant. Their Beauties are coming along finely and prospects are promising for a good crop soon.

Gust Rusch & Co. say that last week was a busy one, with both shipping orders and local business on the increase.

Three Knocks at Our Door

"Who is there at such a late hour?" remarked our maid. "I have been wandering around for miles to see Mr. Godfrey Aschmann," remarked a fellow florist, looking tired and weary, almost played out, the other day. "I am at the right place, 1012 Ontario street," and knowing Mr. Aschmann, standing right before him, he told him his trouble. "I have been looking for good ferns for my customers for the past week and I have been told to go and see Mr. Aschmann, he making a specialty of ferns. What have you got to offer?" One of our workmen brought a lantern and you ought to have seen how our new visitor was impressed with them, and ordered to be delivered at once, 50 Whitmani, 6-inch, at 50 cents; 25 Boston, 6-inch, at 50 cents; 25 7-inch, at 75 cents; 50 Scottii at 50 cents; 50 Scholzeli, 5½-inch, at 40 cents; 25 6-inch, at 50 cents; 25 7-inch, at 75 cents and, to make the collection complete, 50 8-inch, at $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50. Total, 300 ferns in all.

We have a large stock of Boston, Whitmani, Scholzeli and Scottii, 5½, 6, 7, 8-inch, at 30 cents, 40 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Giatrasii, 4-inch, 20 cents; 5 to 5½-inch, 30 to 40 cents. Good ferns are always in demand, both in winter and spring. Here is your chance to lay in a supply before all are gone. Cash with order, please.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The cold, wintry weather during the short days, and the great number of cloudy days, have had a decided effect on the cut flower market. Roses have been short in supply since Christmas and it has been difficult for the growers to supply the demands. Carnations are being received in fair quantities, and although the receipts are considerably smaller than two weeks ago, yet there is enough to meet the demand. If the bad weather continues, however, there will be a shortage in carnations as well as in roses.

Valley is in good supply, with a steady demand. There is a good call for lilies and the price has advanced. Paper White narcissi are about the only flowers on the market which are in noticeable oversupply—really a glut. Sweet peas are coming in quite heavily, but are finding good sales. Stevia has about disappeared from the counters. Tulips are plentiful and of various degrees of quality; the short-stemmed grades do not realize more than half price. Golden Spur narcissi are seen in large quantities and are in good demand. There is a considerable trade in pot plants, such as azaleas, cyclamens and begonias.

Various Notes.

James Hamilton is getting all the material in good shape for his new greenhouse, 40 x 250, which will be planted with roses. It will have a concrete foundation. This will make fourteen large houses at this establishment, nearly all used for cut stock.

Harry J. Quick will erect three greenhouses, each 25 x 100, for carnations. The foundations will be concrete.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary March 11, with a banquet at the Belvidere hotel. It will include the ladies. It is expected that every member will attend. Q.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade is brisk at present, with stock rather scarce; there has been quite a shortage on roses on several occasions, and even carnations are short at times. We have had an unusual amount of funeral work lately, which has used up lots of stock. Roses are good and some extra fancy stock has been coming in that brings top notch prices. Carnations have been coming in quite heavily considering the weather, but there are times when we could use a great many more.

Sweet peas are good sellers, with rarely enough to go the rounds. Valley has also been quite scarce, but with demand rather light. A few tulips are to be seen and single jonquils have made their appearance and are certainly a welcome addition to the list of stock. Lilies have not been plentiful for some time.

Blooming plants have been moving nicely, with azaleas and cyclamen taking the front row.

Various Notes.

McKinley day here did not amount to much. It was nothing compared with a few years ago and it seems to be getting lighter as the years go by.

Sherman Stephens reports things moving nicely at his place, with stock scarce.

Wm. Graff is visiting in West Baden and Chicago for a week or two.

James McKellar, of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., is on deck again, but obliged to use a cane. Trade is quite good at their store, considering the inconvenience caused by the fire. It will be several weeks before things are straightened out in good shape.

E. Metzmaier reports good business.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. also reports good business. J. M.

Charles City, Ia.—M. H. Wetherbee has added two houses, each 28x123, and has planted one of them with carnations and the other with roses. His grower, Edward Schuster, is showing his ability to produce first-class stock.

Our Stock of Ferns

On January 20th invoiced, was 35,369. This consists of Bostons, 2½ in. to 10 in.; Whitmani, 2½ in. to 8 in.; Amerpohlii, 2½ in. and 5 in.; Roosevelt, 2½ in., 4 in., 5 in., 6 in.; Piersoni, 2½ in. to 6 in.; Plumosus, 2½ in. to 5 in.; Maidenhair, 2½ in. and 3 in. Small assorted ferns, 2½ in.; Sprengeri, 2½ in. to 6 in.; Scottii, 4 in. This makes a total of over thirty-five thousand. If you are interested in ferns at all, kindly send us list of sizes you would like and we will quote you special price, as we need both cash and room.

Be sure to ask for our Easter list.

LUPINES.

LUPINES FOR EASTER. For the past season I have done more or less experimenting with lupines and the more I grow them, the more I think of them; I believe they can be made to return $1.00 per square foot, or more, per season. I haven't the space in this adv. to tell you all about them, but my new method of growing them is free to all who wish to try them. The plants I now offer should bloom for Easter. Each color separate, assorted, $1.00 100; $9.00 1000.

LEAD JOINTS THAT LEAK.

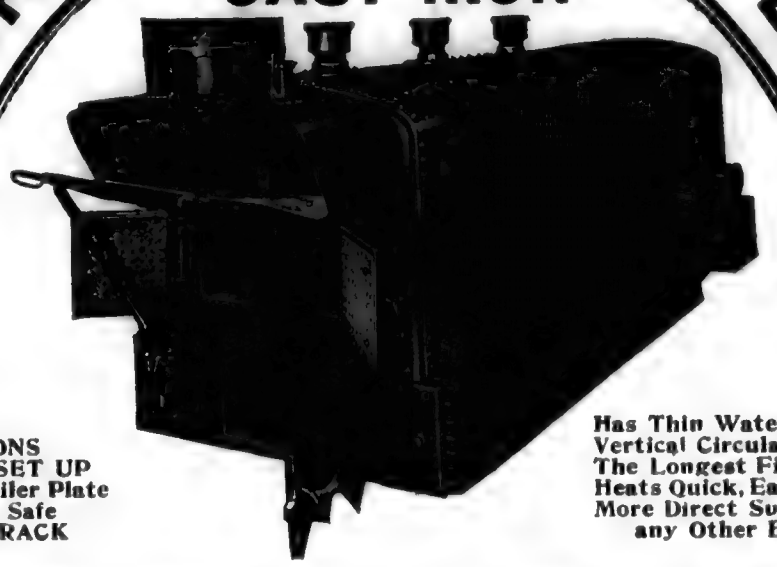
I have just equipped two new houses with lead joints and they leak badly. Will someone give me his experience with lead joints and state whether they can stand the expansion or not?

H. H.

If properly made, and if the pipes are so supported as to allow them to expand and contract, lead joints will be found fairly reliable, but the use of oakum and iron filings is preferable. Some recommend, as a still better way, the use of wrought-iron pipe with screw joints. As a rule, 2-inch pipe will be found best for the returns and, if the houses are more than seventy-five feet long, one or more 2½-inch pipes should be used for the flows. Except in short houses, one flow will answer for from 800 to 1,200 square feet of glass.

SIZE OF BOILER.

I wish to thank you for the advice given me in The Review of December 28, page 86, regarding the heating of my greenhouse. I intended at the time to ask what size of hot water boiler would be required to do the work. Will you please answer that question now? The house is 20x75 feet, five feet to the eaves and twelve feet to the ridge, with three feet of concrete and two feet of side glass all around. It is divided by two partitions. I am located in northeastern Illinois. R. P.



A house 20x75 feet, with two feet of glass in the side walls, to be heated to an average of 60 degrees in zero weather, will require a heater rated for about 900 square feet of radiating surface, if economy of fuel is desired. About 725 square feet of radiating surface will actually be required, and it is always well to add from one-fourth to one-third in determining the size of the boiler.

WATER GETS LOW IN BOILER.

We have six greenhouses, two running north and south and four running east and west. They are heated by a boiler rated for 4,350 feet of steam radiation. The length of the houses is as follows: No. 5, running straight north from the boiler room, is fifty feet long. On the west side of this house and the boiler room is house No. 6, which is 100 feet. No. 7, running west from the south end of No. 6, is 117 feet. Nos. 8 and 9, the next houses northward, are each 125 feet. No. 10, a lean-to on the north side, is also 125 feet.

All these houses are heated with 2-inch pipe. There are two supply outlets from the boiler. The outlet on the north side of the boiler is 3-inch pipe, which runs along the eave plate on the east side of house No. 6 to house No. 9; then west, through No. 9, where, on the Michler Bros. Co.

Office 415-423 East Maxwell

Lexington, Ky., January 23, 1912.

Gentlemen:

Our large cast-iron sectional boiler cracked one section and the header last Sunday. It seemed to turn cold about the same time that the break occured. By Monday night it was 14 degrees below zero. However, by putting up coal stoves, oil stoves, lamps and pushing up the small furnace we have managed to keep most of our stock in pretty good shape, and our total loss, furnace and all, will be between $500 and $600. Just luck that it was not all gone.

New Kroeschell boiler ordered by telegraph Sunday; shipped Monday; reached here on Friday; hauled to greenhouse on Saturday, and started a fire Sunday; just seven days and ten hours after the accident. When dealing with people who will deliver a boiler as quick as that you cannot give up.

Yours very truly

upper end, a 2-inch pipe supplies No. 10, the lean-to. The supply pipe on the south end of the boiler is also 3-inch and runs straight west to the ridge of No. 7, where it is reduced to 2½-inch to supply No. 7 and continues as 2½-inch to the north end of No. 6, supplying No. 5, No. 6, and a room at the north end of No. 6. The returns from No. 10 are brought back to the boiler through 1¼-inch pipe, and from No. 8 and No. 9 through 2½-inch pipe. No. 7 has a separate 1-inch return for each 2-inch pipe, and these run directly to the bottom of the boiler room and empty into a 2-inch pipe running on a level with the return opening in the boiler and some twenty feet from it. The returns from Nos. 8, 9 and 10 run almost level on the greenhouse floor until about six feet from the boiler, when they have a vertical drop to the boiler.

keeping the houses at their proper warmth, but the water leaves the boiler so fast that we have to inject water almost continuously. We are unable to understand this, as the water level is one and one-half feet below the return pipe where it takes the vertical drop about six feet from the boiler. We have vertical check valves six inches above the water line in all the returns, but are unable to stop the water from leaving the boiler. We have an idea that the main supply pipes are too small. Kindly give us any information that you think will be of value. I enclose a diagram of the houses.

H. W. B.

Neither the letter nor the accompanying plan gives any idea of the width of the houses or of the temperature desired, so that it is not possible to tell offhand the nature of the trouble.

It is noticed that 2-inch pipes are used as returns in all of the houses and these will require twice as much water for an equal area of surface as 1-inch pipes; this makes it necessary to have a somewhat larger boiler, or at least one of greater water-holding capacity, than would be necessary if smaller pipes were used. This might make it necessary to use the injector when getting up steam, but should make little difference after the coils are filled with steam. If it is true that, in order to maintain the water level, it is necessary to keep the injector working continuously, this would indicate a leak in the system.

The Market.

Reports from all sides confirm the statement that business in this city is good with the florists. There are, of course, off days, but on the whole trade is satisfactory.

The arrival of bulbous stock and an occasional warm day has somewhat relieved the market of a scarcity of roses and carnations that caused retailers no end of trouble. The long, steady period of zero weather kept roses and carnations at a standstill, but relief is in sight. White and Enchantress carnations were especially scarce. Beauties have been quite equal to the demand. Sweet peas, valley and fine forget-me-nots are available and sell readily. Formosa lilies are filling a steady demand for funeral work, as also are lancifoliums. Mount Clemens is shipping in some fine single violets. Smilax, ferns and both kinds of asparagus are plentiful. Fine southern smilax is meeting with a good sale.

Various Notes.

A little Miss Taepke arrived at the home of Walter Taepke the middle of January and all the florists have been smoking to her health.

E. A. Fetters and B. Schroeter were called on to lend a hand in the decorations for the auto show held here last week.

Breitmeyer's window was appropriately trimmed for McKinley day, January 29. This firm had a decoration January 31 which called for lilac in large quantities.

The trouble in obtaining coal, due to the inadequate facilities of the railroads for handling it, has been the cause of many a sleepless night for some of the growers. The situation

IN CENTRAL ILLINOIS.

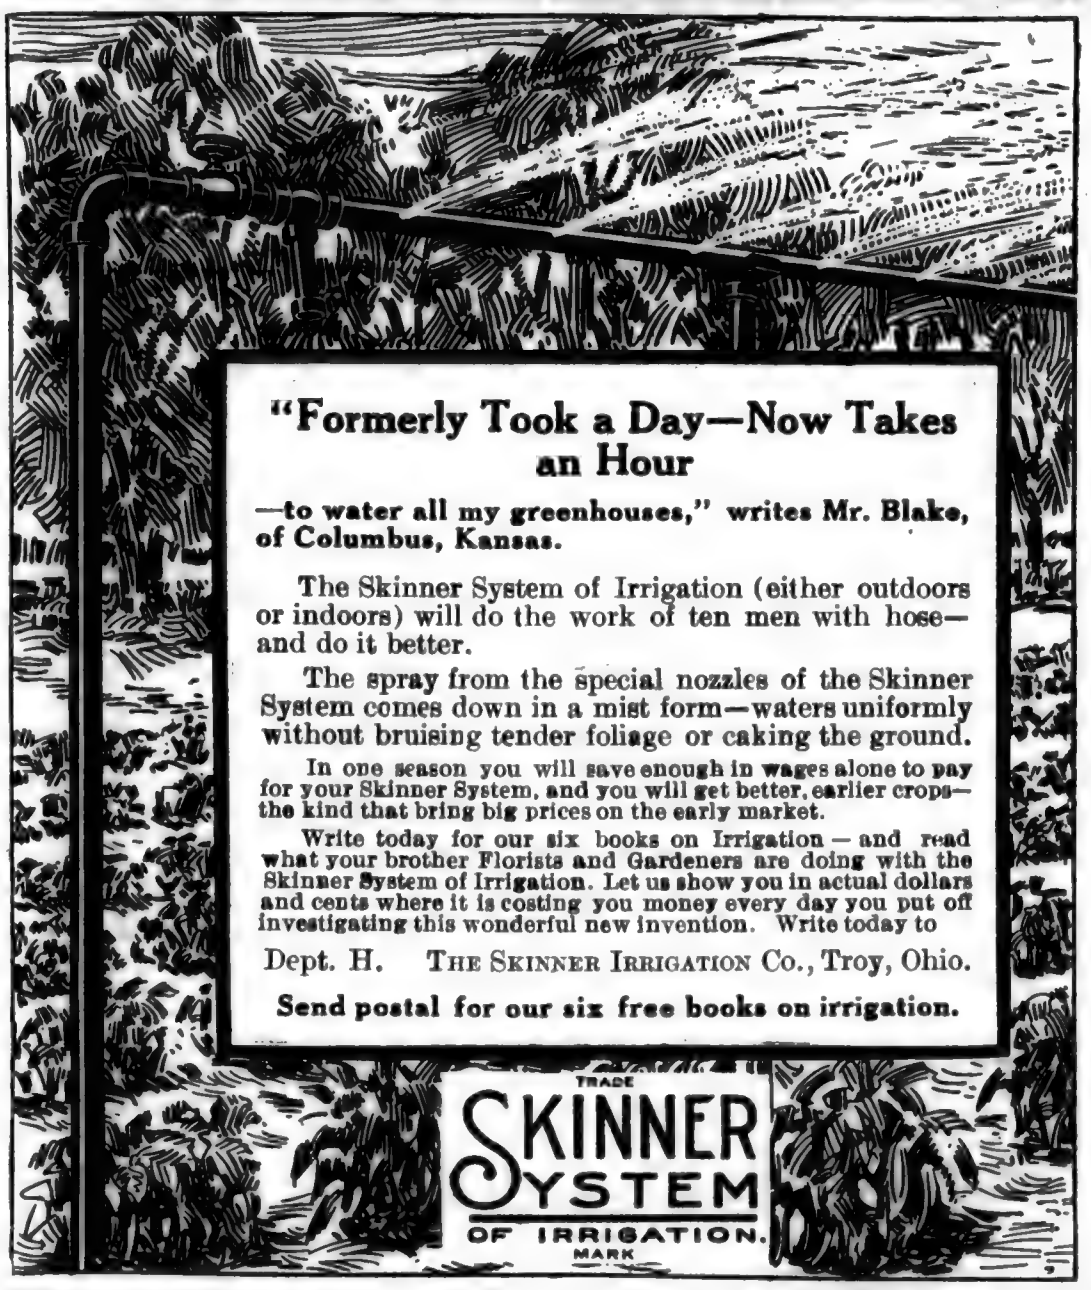
Business has shown a decided improvement since the advent of normal January weather throughout this section. There seems to be a general shortage of roses and carnations, but a look at the carnation benches in the various establishments shows that a few days of sunshine will have the effect of bringing them out in abundance. It is surprising to see the stock in such admirable condition when one takes into consideration the fact that for several weeks the ventilators were clamped down to the ridge.

The rose situation is not so promising, and for some little time to come "the great central market" will be called on, in a marked degree, to take care of our wants along this line.

C. H. Fallstrom, proprietor of the Dixon Flower Shop, Dixon, Ill., reports business good.

A visit to the Sterling Floral Co., Sterling, found Mr. Lundstrom decidedly busy with funeral work. A look over the stock in the greenhouses found everything in first-class condition, and it was hard to realize that this place was visited by a disastrous hail storm November 11, last year.

R. A. Simmen, of La Salle, states that business is all that could be expected. He is evidently a firm believer that nothing pays so well as an attractive display of seasonable stock in his spacious store window.



Carl Erickson, of Princeton, has found it necessary to enlarge his plant by the addition of another good-sized greenhouse, which he will erect as soon as conditions are favorable. Business has been good with him.

A. G. Larson, of Galva, states that business was exceptionally good with him all through the month of January.

If only half the florists that now contemplate going attend the annual meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Joliet March 5, it will be the biggest and best convention in the history of the society.

Kring Bros., of Fairbury, are just coming into a record-breaking crop of carnations, and the quality of their stock is all that could be desired. They believe in the theory that to get the best results out of any variety it pays to occasionally change the stock by purchasing stock raised in different soil from their own. A. E. L.

La Salle, Ill.—Mrs. Robert A. Simmen, wife of the First street florist, has gone to New York city, in company with their little son and George F. Simmen. They will spend about two months in the east.

MAKING A CASKET COVER.

Can you tell us how to make the foundation for a casket cover properly? We made one in aster time and it was a great success, but we think there must be less laborious ways than the one we employed. V. A. A.

There are numerous ways of making a cover of flowers or green for a casket. Flowers of any variety or a number of varieties can be used, but upon the type of flower depends the frame or body of the cover.

The stiff wire frames, as made by the wire workers, are perhaps used as a framework more extensively than any other method. For large flowers, such as lilies, large chrysanthemums or Beauties, this wire frame is best. After lightly covering the frame with leucothoe sprays or other green, fasten the flowers with pieces of No. 20 to 24 wire, bent into long hairpins. It is always advisable to bring the wires up from underneath, so as not to leave a lot of ends which would mar the casket.

Wire netting—mosquito wire—adapts itself nicely for use in making covers out of roses, carnations, narcissi or other flowers of medium size and not too stiff a stem. A cover made in this way conforms readily to the shape of the casket. Fasten the flowers in the same way as to the wire frame; a number can, of course, be fastened at one time if the stems are long.

When making such small flowers as violets, sweet peas, Roman hyacinths, etc., into a casket cover, then I would advise sewing or pinning the flowers to a piece of moss-green denim, or overall cloth, as it is commonly called. This makes by far the most graceful cover. The flowers should be made up into small bunches of about one-half dozen flowers, with the stems cut short, and these small bunches should be fastened to the cloth. Only a little extra green is required; of course, the bunches must be fastened close together. In order to facilitate matters, you will find it a good plan to lay the cloth or wire netting over one of the regular stiff wire frames while working on the cover.

Some florists moss the wire casket cover frames as in other design work, but this I deem useless. Only when using galax leaves as the background, is moss required.

Until you know from experience about how many flowers are required for a cover, it is a good plan to keep a record of those you have made. Note the size and kind of flowers and the number used. The size and quality will, of course, change your figures somewhat, as will also the spacing of the flowers; still, you will find a record a great convenience when you are asked for the cost of a cover of a given size. Hugo Schroeter.

WHAT IS GOOD DESIGN WORK?

Some of the Minor Points.

This subject has been discussed in a general way in these columns before, but this time I propose to discuss it somewhat more particularly.

Before approaching the vital points let us get rid of a few related ones which come in for more or less respect in judging design work, but which do not belong strictly within the subject. These are the quality and quantity of stock used, taste in selection of the design and the mechanical details. While the lack of any one of these elements may mar an otherwise good piece, they are not likely to be overlooked by a designer who has in mind and in practice the two necessary principles of fine floral work.

There are a few designs the selection of which was never dictated by good taste or common sense, yet there is more in the way they are made than in the design itself. Everybody will admit that neatness, strict outlining and symmetrical development are all classed among the things he "ought to have done." Quantity of stock is of the least importance in judging good design work. What can be done with two dozen roses in skillful hands often has artistic value a thousand per cent greater than four dozen of the same roses indifferently arranged.

J. E. Jay's Cross for Criticism.

The Grouping of Flowers.

Hence, when it comes to real character and excellence, be it in a bride's bouquet, a Christmas wreath or a pillow, the following two elements outclass all the rest: The first is the grouping of the flowers, plants or foliage. By grouping is meant the manner in which the flowers are put together, the relationship they bear to each other. It is one of those well-nigh indefinable qualities which do the same for a design as the phrasing for a musical composition, or the rhetorical pauses for a public speaker. It is not regularity, nor yet exactly irregularity in placing the flowers, although it may include both. The individual flowers which compose the group may be drawn toward some of the others and repelled from some. Some fall out of line; some show a full face view, others a profile, and still others a back view, as you often see them, happy-go-lucky, lying as they might fall. There is no telling how to do it. The doing must be an inspiration. It can not be copied from the work of another, for the other can not reproduce an exact duplicate. The instinct which produces the inspiration supplies the infinite variety which is more insisted upon each year by the discriminating public. A well ordered group of flowers if on a set design frame will conform to the outline of the frame or keep within its bounds. A well ordered group also makes use of its stems, long and short.

Two Designs Compared.

In order to better illustrate these points I have chosen two designs previously published by The Review. Both are from the work of other people. Illustration number one is that offered by J. E. Jay for criticism in the issue of May 11, 1911, and the other is a design by T. A. Ivey, published in the issue of February 14, 1907. In the conventional style of design of which the first illustration is a type there is a lack of relationship between the flowers. The flowers and foliage are set in to fill the space. There is no evidence of plan, or the "how," as always appears in good grouping. I would advise Mr. Jay to break away from the conventional type and give his own individuality a chance. He has the courage, or he wouldn't have been plucky enough to make the offer that he did last May. I feel sure that the benefits to the trade have overbalanced his sacrifice of his feelings.

If he had grouped his cycas leaves at the base he would have had a more symmetrical, clearly outlined piece, with a more artistic touch. Attention is attracted to this class of design on account of the size and quality of flowers; in other words, one does not allow the art instinct a chance. It is largely mechanical.

On the other hand, turn to the second illustration, that of the shield by Mr. Ivey. The outline of the piece has been carefully followed. You can tell at a glance what it is. This much accomplished, the designer is free to create the two groups which so charmingly ornament the piece. These two groups illustrate better than words can describe the principle of good grouping. In the spray of roses, valley and adiantum, note the closeness of a few here and there, the rest spaces, the independent reach of the roses which form the tip of the spray, and the one below which hangs just below the edge. Not only is the grouping of the roses fine, but of the valley and adiantum as well. The group of lilies above the piece will bear the same test which our definition of grouping requires. This element of the piece would be worth sixty per cent in judging the merits of the piece as a whole. In a word, the designer of this piece is a true artist, and well qualified in his chosen profession.

Art the Master of the Mechanics.

Any design, by which is meant any assemblage of flowers, plants or foliage, may be judged correctly by this standard. Take a vase of flowers, leave it to its own way of grouping and you will not find the flowers getting into line just so far on every side from their neighbors, but they will huddle here, stretch away there, retire in another place, and fall out of line over yonder. Yes, they are unruly, but that is the charm of it all.

While we are about it let us realize that while the mechanical part of our work is necessary, it should be placed just where it belongs—in the position of servant to its master, the art instinct.

It does not necessarily follow that even a fraction of the high-class designs need be of this particular style. It is only one of the many possibilities.

Coloring the Second Essential.

The second essential of a well executed design can easily be guessed—it is that of color, and it follows as day follows night that where the grouping shows fine taste the coloring will appear in the same degree of excellence. The color distinctions will be fine-grained, not only in the strictly decorative parts of the piece, but in the blending of the special design with the background. Some common blend of color will be found in each, which common color will develop in at least two different lines, one in the background and one in the decorative part. To illustrate, suppose Mr. Ivey's shield was made of asters instead of white carnations for the background and sweet peas in place of roses in the decorative spray; it would be in good taste to use lavender asters and violet pink peas. In each there would be the element of violet color running through the asters in lavender and through the peas in the violet pink. This is a restful and harmonious scheme to develop a union in color throughout the whole piece.

If the design were a bride's bouquet there would be cream ribbon with the flowers of the yellow cast of the valley, rather than either white or cream ribbon as it happened to come to hand. There would be a delicate consideration for harmony in greens. If it were a pink bridesmaid's bouquet the pink would be carefully blended with that of the gown, and not an attempt to unite a salmon pink bouquet with a violet pink gown. In a funeral spray the tie would be a tint or two weaker than the color of the flowers in the spray.

Much more could be said in the line of color blending, but space forbids. In a word, learn color principles yourself; then talk it to your customers. Learn to produce good designing; then show your customers the difference.

In judging design work, here are the points in the order of their value:

1.—Grouping.
2.—Coloring.
3.—Taste in selection of design.
4.—Quality of stock.
5.—Mechanical details.
6.—Quantity of stock.

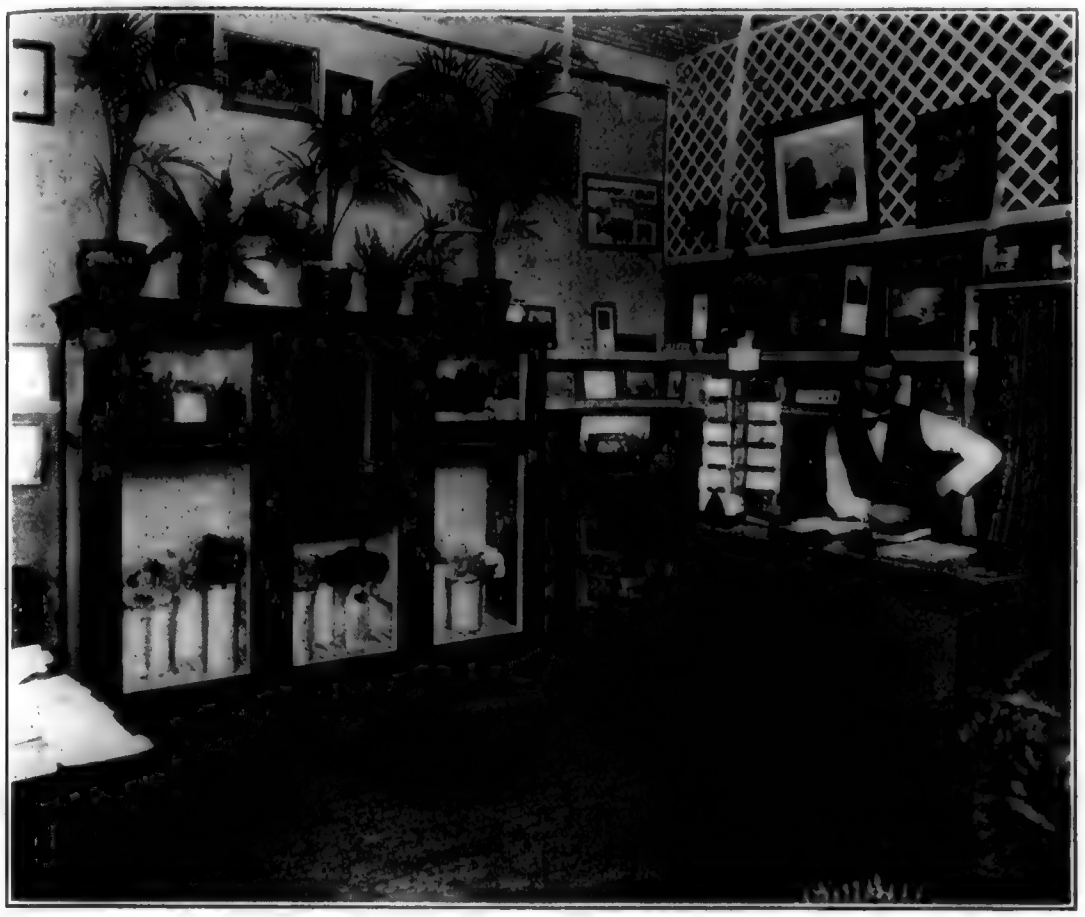
BARTCHER'S STORE.

The illustration on page 13 is reproduced from a photograph taken at Denison, Ia., by an itinerant camera man who dropped in unannounced on Charles Bartcher. When a man goes to a photograph gallery to get his portrait made he puts on his best suit of clothes, gets a hair cut, has his mustache curled, and his shoes shined, even though the portrait is not to be full length. For the same reason the average flower store is dressed for the occasion when the photographer is expected. The point is, if it has not been made clear, that the Bartcher store presents its everyday appearance in the picture. The refrigerator shown is of the McCray make and was recently installed.

Mr. Bartcher, who is seen in the picture, combines the running of a retail flower store with his business as an undertaker, but the undertaking department is kept in the background.



AN AUTO TRUCK.

It is quite the regular thing nowadays for retail florists to do their delivering with automobiles, but usually they are light cars. Randolph & McClements, in Pittsburgh, operate several light cars and also have the heavy truck shown in the illustration on page 13. They handle all the heavy loads with it and find it will do the work of two teams and is just as useful as the lighter cars.

PROGRESS AT SPRINGFIELD, O.

Expansion of Florists' Trade.

According to a common, popular misconception, every floral enterprise must necessarily prove pleasant, healthful and profitable to the owner. The fact is, however, that the same economic forces operate as in all other lines of business to induce success or failure, while some forces peculiar to the business are such as to make it extra hazardous. Practical knowledge, based upon years of experience, is the first requisite, to which must be added good business methods and an aggressive policy, after which success and satisfaction are rather more certain to follow than in the more ordinary lines of commercial effort.

Store of Charles Bartcher, Denison, Iowa.

This particular community is so largely given over to mercantile and manufacturing pursuits, with accompanying thoughts of inert merchandise, tons and yards, bargain sales and advertising plans, shafts and wheels, gears and sprockets, plugs and sparkers, and so on, that it is practically impossible for the average layman to appreciate adequately the decidedly different business atmosphere in which the florist lives and toils. Still, the layman must not assume that it is a case of "all among the roses," but should remember that the plants and flowers come only as a result of unceasing vigilance and toil with soil and fertilizers, air and water, cloud and sunshine, heat and cold, coal and ashes, pests and perversities of nature innumerable.

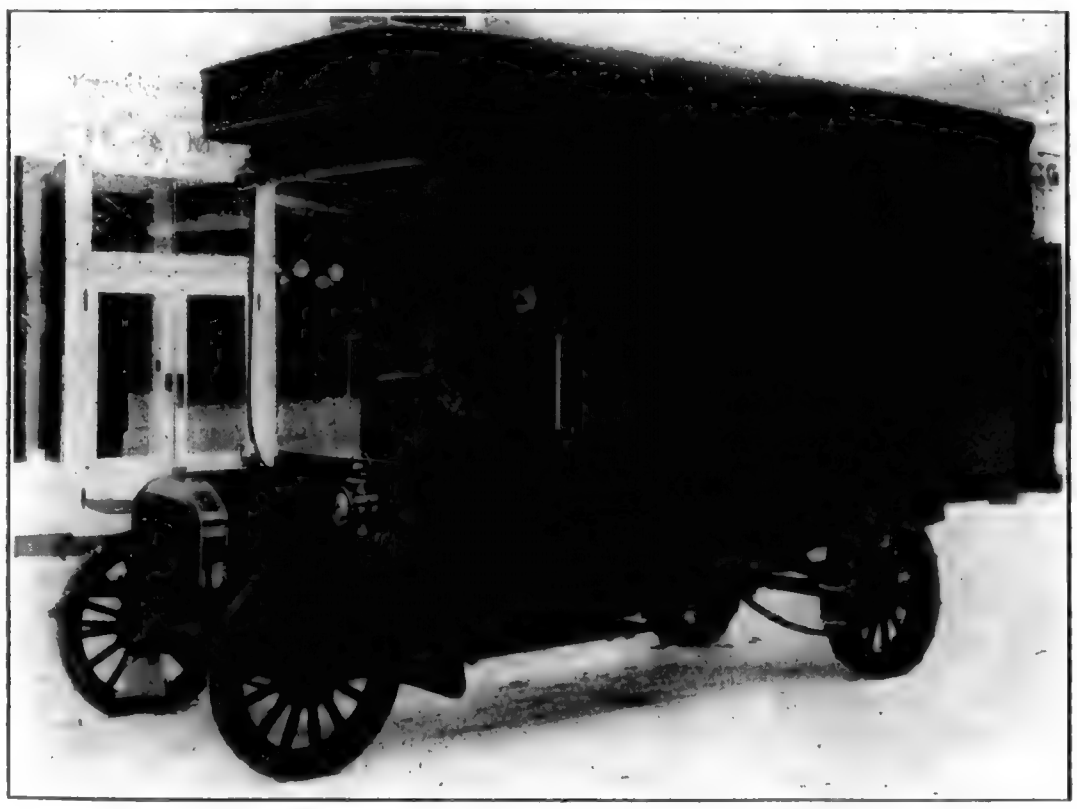
Area of Glass.

In the Springfield flower district the area of glass amounts to approximately one million square feet, which does not seem a large figure in comparison with the fact that one concern in Chicago has about one-half more in size of houses, but it should be borne in mind that these are planted for cut flowers, whereas the local houses are filled with plants in small pots, so that the aggregate of plants grown here is beyond anything elsewhere on earth. At a conservative estimate, the local product reaches something like fifteen millions of plants annually, nearly one-half of which are roses.

Hardy shrubs are being grown in constantly increasing varieties and quantities, the present crops including such items as 500,000 phlox, 250,000 peonies and 35,000 Japanese and German iris.

The importation of bulbs and roots to the value of about $25,000 is rendered necessary by the demands of the retail mail order catalogue trade and for this same purpose as many as 15,000 Camellia Japonica are required, which is quite likely to be equal to the importations for all of the remaining United States. Importations of azaleas are on the decrease, for the reason that the average housewife is not sufficiently conversant with the method of care necessary to success with these beautiful plants.

The Catalogue Trade.



The sale of the products of the various florists' concerns in this locality requires the printing and mailing of something like one and one-fourth million catalogues annually, which helps materially to make matters interesting for the publishers and postoffice employees. There is somewhat of a tendency to reduce the size of catalogues by cutting out elaborate descriptions and large cuts, which are not so essential as in former years. The issue of retail catalogues from this locality is now confined practically to what is known as the "Big Four" group of florists, a few of the less successful catalogue florists having failed to survive the division of business with competitors springing up all over the country, and their places have been taken over by larger concerns in need of more houses or devoted to growing for the wholesale trade exclusively.

As Compared with Other Trades.

An estimate of the gross sales of all florists' establishments hereabouts might apparently seem rather small in comparison with figures which could be compiled from mercantile and manufacturing statistics. But it should be remembered that the merchant handles a vast amount of stock on an extremely small margin and frequently some at a positive loss, and the manufacturer buys his raw material and passes it through numerous processes before placing it upon the market at a profit not always sufficiently large to overreach the selling and overhead expense. The florist knows neither raw nor manufactured material; practically everything that he sells is a thing of life, each stock, plant, root, bulb and seed becoming the parent of innumerable offspring. Like "leaven hid in three measures of meal," the process of multiplication is limited only by the labor applied, the soil, heat, light and moisture provided, and the space under glass available. Consequently, the ratio of profits to gross receipts is proportionately greater than in the ordinary lines of commerce. The same would be true as to an estimate of the number of employees, since the florists' results depend only in part on human labor, which serves merely to place the seed, bulb, cutting or plant in its proper environment, after which nature, aided by constant and competent watch-care, is expected to do the rest.

The Florist's Natural Enemies.

Like the farmer, the florist has enemies as numerous and as persistent and annoying as those of old Nehemiah. All of the elements at times conspire against him in turn—heat, cold, cloud, sunshine, drought, moisture. His work is attacked by grubworm, angleworm, eelworm; by red spider and green fly; by miller and leaf-roller; by black-spot, mildew and fungus; by nematode and club-root. But for all such there is usually a preventive or remedy, which must be known and applied in the proper way, at the proper time.

"Once a florist, always a florist," appears to be the rule, as it rarely occurs that the profession is abandoned even in old age; so it may safely be regarded as a most interesting one. Ge Dale.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Antirrhinums.

In order to have a good Memorial day crop of antirrhinums, plant the seed or root cuttings now. Select separate shades of color. The pinks are especially popular, and scarlet shades, while not in heavy demand at other seasons, always move well at Memorial day, a time when bright colored flowers are wanted. In selecting cuttings, rub off with a heel those found on the flowering shoots. Place them in any cutting bench such as will root carnations. Pot off when nicely rooted and bench during March. Each of these plants should carry four to six good spikes. They do not require a warm house. They do better at 45 degrees as a minimum, and 50 degrees should not be exceeded.

Gladioli.

The first planting of the large bulbed varieties of gladiolus, such as America, Augusta, etc., will now be several inches high. Some of these may be open for Easter, but as a rule they are not seen in any number before the middle of April. About the middle of February is a suitable time to get a second batch in the soil, for cutting around Memorial day. Do not omit a good number of that inexpensive but excellent scarlet variety, Brenchleyensis, in addition to America, Augusta and Mrs. F. King. Do not use any fresh manure which will come in contact with the bulbs. If you have no old manure, try fine bone and pulverized sheep manure, incorporating them well with the soil. In order to secure an early crop of such varieties as Colvillei The Bride, Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride, every week or ten days bring a few flats into a house kept at 48 to 50 degrees at night. A higher temperature will spoil them.

Asters.

It is just a trifle early to sow asters to plant outdoors, but if you will have a vacant bench about the end of March or right after Easter, which you can plant with them, you will find them a useful crop, as they will give you flowers of good quality just at the time when carnations are getting poor. Probably the earliest of all asters is Early Wonder, now obtainable in two colors, pink and white. This comes in at least a week ahead of Queen of the Market, has longer flowers and partakes more of the character of the Comet section. Queen of the Market is the standard early variety to grow. It gives a tremendous crop of flowers, not so long stemmed as the later sorts, but valuable for all classes of design work. The Hohenzollerns are also fine early asters, with big flowers, and are grand for cutting. As a rule, white asters have first call, pink, light blue and dark blue following in order of popularity.

Vincas.

The annual vincas, or periwinkles of Madagascar, are most satisfactory summer bedding plants. They are never without flowers, and whether in solid beds or scattered in clumps through mixed borders, are equally effective. There are white, rose, and rose and white varieties. In addition to being splendid for bedding, it is not generally known what excellent summer flowering pot plants they make. In Europe they are much used in this way. In order to have strong plants for spring sales, sow the seed now in a brisk heat. These annuals want rather more heat than asters, stocks and the general run of annuals, to grow them well.

Moonflowers.

The moonflowers, Ipomœa Horsfalliæ, are always in demand as climbers. In order to get strong plants, the seed should be sown in heat by the middle of February. Do not grow the little plants in strong heat right along, or they will get too big. Move into a house that asters, geraniums, etc., delight in after they are potted off and they will come along nicely.

Salvia Splendens.

While strong plants can be had from salvia seed sown as late as the end of March, if plants are wanted which will carry flowers before bedding out time, the seed is better sown by the middle of February. The dwarf varieties, such as Zurich and Bonfire, are excellent bedders, but the old splendens, while a taller grower, is still hard to beat and in the estimation of many is still superior to the improved types constantly being introduced.

Silvery Foliage.

Where plants with silvery foliage are in demand for bedding, now is the time to sow a batch of Cineraria maritima, Centaurea candidissima and C. gymnocarpa, the best plants of this particular shade of color.

WINTER-BLOOMING SWEET PEAS.

Will sweet pea seed grown in California, in the open, flower as prolificly as seed grown under glass? I have heard complaint this winter that sweet peas are not blooming so well as in other years and certainly mine are not. Seed sown September 15 in pots and planted in solid beds had not showed bloom January 1. Of course I refer to the winter-flowering type of sweet pea, which has come into such wide demand among florists. The question is whether growing the seed in California will not change the nature of the plant and cause the trouble we have had this winter? This is a most important point and will have to be thoroughly understood if we are to avoid disappointment in the future. C. E. Y.

In answer to C. E. Y., in regard to sweet peas not flowering, I would say that winter-flowering sweet peas should now be in flower, providing they have been grown at a flowering temperature. It is possible enough, however, if they have been grown cool, not to be in flower yet. It may be that the seed was of the ordinary type. This being so, they will not flower for some time yet. It would be impossible for the winter-flowering kind to change its character. All the seed is grown practically in California. We are having no trouble here. It is either the seed is the ordinary type or else they have been grown too cool to flower. The one type from the other can be easily distinguished. One kind breaks at the bottom; the other breaks up the stem of the plant. William Sim.

Answering the letter of C. E. Y., appearing in The Review for January 5, 1912, would say that the early flowering or Christmas sweet peas, grown in California, give perfectly satisfactory results providing the seed is properly grown; they can not, however, be grown in the ordinary manner in which grandiflora and Spencers are grown. C. C. Morse & Co.

Answering the letter from C. E. Y. concerning winter sweet peas, I would say that there are now many so-called winter sweet peas in the market. Almost ninety per cent of the world's supply of sweet pea seed is grown in California and there is not any danger that they shall run back to the late varieties, providing they are cultivated by an expert grower who always selects his stock seed during the winter in the east under glass, where there is not any danger of being mixed up with the late ones. Such sweet peas are usually guaranteed up to ninety-eight per cent to be true winter-flowering. Of course, as I said, a majority of the seed growers use the same seed again, without reselecting the same, and such seed will certainly run back to the late varieties inside of three years. As C. E. Y. sowed his sweet peas September 15, he could not have them in flower for the holidays, but by the first part of February they might bloom O. K. If winter sweet peas are wanted for Christmas they must be sown not later than August 20. Ant. C. Zvolanek.

PROPAGATION OF HYBRID TEAS.

Will you please let me know how best to propagate hybrid tea rose cuttings in summer, with the cutting bed in a cold-frame and the cuttings to be taken from outdoor plants? Any instructions as to how to prepare the cuttings and the bed will be much appreciated. I should also like to know how to care for the young plants through the winter, so as to have them ready for bedding out in the spring.

Cuttings of hybrid teas and other outdoor roses can be readily rooted in a frame in summer. A foot of warm manure, well tramped, should be placed in the bottom of the frame, in order to furnish a little bottom heat, which is helpful, although not absolutely essential for their successful propagation. Cover the manure with three or four inches of clean, sharp sand. Sometimes sandy loam is used, with equally good results, but I prefer the sand, as water passes so readily through it and there is not the danger of scummy surfaces as when loam is added. Cuttings should contain two eyes each. Cut directly below the bottom eye and remove the leaf. The upper leaf should be left intact or be only partly cut back. The wood should be partly ripened and can be used from the middle of June until the middle of July. As a rule, the cuttings root best if inserted in June. The glass must be shaded from direct sunshine. The cuttings should be well watered through a rose can once a day, and must, in addition, be freely but lightly sprayed over several times daily in hot, sunny weather. In cloudy weather use much less moisture. Admit air by tilting up the sashes at the back. Do not give much ventilation, but enough to prevent scorching. After the cuttings are calloused and are forming roots, air rather more freely and gradually increase the light until the cuttings are nicely rooted, when plenty of air can be afforded.

Cuttings rooted in clean sand should be potted off singly before the roots are too long, or they can be planted moderately close in a frame containing good sandy loam but not much manure, kept close until established, gradually hardened and carried over winter by mulching with dry leaves and protecting the sides of the frame well. When inserted in sandy loam, if not set too closely, the cuttings can be wintered in the same way as when lifted from the sand, and planted out in the spring. If you can make your frame first, pot off the rooted cuttings singly and carry them over winter, plunged to the brims in fine ashes or loam. You will find they start away better in the spring when planted outdoors than when lifted from the frames. The latter plan entails more labor and is, therefore, not so often adopted. Ventilate during open weather in winter and gradually harden off as spring advances. Rosa.

COCHETS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

I have some Maman Cochet roses that were used for cut flowers in the greenhouse last summer. They are in a cool cellar. How shall I handle them to have them blooming in 6-inch pots for Memorial day? A. D. S.

It would be better to pot the roses now, standing them back in the cool cellar and keeping them there until the middle of March, when they should be placed in a greenhouse with a night temperature of 50 degrees, raising this 5 degrees as growth advances. Cut away any dead and weak wood and shorten back the stronger shoots only moderately. Of course, potting up could be deferred until you want to start the plants, but even in a cool cellar they will make quite a few roots between now and the middle of March, which will be a great advantage when forcing commences. In a stronger heat you could, no doubt, flower the plants in seven weeks, but it is better to grow them on the cool side, thus insuring stockier growths and flowers with more substance. W. C.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

Such plants of Canterbury bells as are intended for Easter flowering should now have the spikes well advanced and will require one or two stakes to keep them erect. Give them the fullest sunshine in a well ventilated house, where a minimum not exceeding 52 degrees is maintained. Avoid syringing them overhead. This and a too close atmosphere will cause the shoots to rot off frequently. Plants wanted for Memorial day can be placed in a cold house and allowed to come on slowly. They will be found among the most popular of plants for selling at that season, while the flowers in a cut state have excellent keeping qualities.

FOX POINT CYCLAMENS.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of one of the houses of the Fox Point Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis., taken about the middle of December. The house is 27x100 and was filled with the company's leading specialty, cyclamens, of which more than 4,000 plants in from 4-inch to 8-inch pots were sold for Christmas. They have two new, distinct salmon colored cyclamens which are beauties. The seed was procured direct from the originator in Berlin, Germany, last season. They intend to work up a big stock for next season.

Besides cyclamens, they grow snapdragons, annual lupines, larkspurs, stocks, anemones, chrysanthemums, etc., for the cut flower market. E. O.

CARNATIONS

SUPPOSED TO BE WOOD ASHES.

I am sending you a sample of what is supposed to be wood ashes. Please let me know whether it would be safe to use it on carnation or aster soil.

E. L.

The stuff forwarded does not look to me like pure wood ashes. There may be some wood ashes among it, but it looks to me more like burnt loam. It may not injure your crops, but I feel sure it will not do as much good as good wood ashes would do. Try it on a small space and you can soon tell whether it will harm your plants. Wood ashes should be more flaky, like flour or air-slaked lime, and usually it is of a gray color. Sometimes it is a whitish gray and sometimes it has a brownish cast to it, but it should not be gritty and full of pebbles, as this is.

A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE ON SANGAMO.

I am sending you two specimens of my Sangamo carnations, and I shall be glad if you can tell me the reason why some of the plants appear to be drying up. They were all in good condition in the fall, but afterward I noticed one go, then another, and so on. The trouble does not seem to spread, but I find an affected plant here and there. Some of them are badly affected and others are not. I notice that other growers are also having the same trouble.

A. S. C.

The samples bear the evidences of being affected with stigmonose. The variety Sangamo seems susceptible to this disease, as it had it when it came to us and has had more or less on it ever since. We find among our plants, here and there, a plant literally eaten up with stigmonose, just as you say yours are. It is a pity that such a splendid sort as this should be ruined in that way but, with other healthy varieties coming on to take its place, it will hardly pay you to bother trying to eradicate the disease from this sort. If you do want to keep on with it, the thing for you to do is to select your cuttings from the absolutely healthy plants. That is the only way you can combat it.

A. F. J. B.

FAIRY RING.

I enclose a sample of leaves and stems of carnations. I have grown carnations for years, but have never had anything like this before. Judging from reports I see in The Review, I believe it must be stigmonose. The plants were carefully lifted from the field about the end of August. They were not extra large, but quite healthy, and they did well until the end of the year. Then they began to show this disease. At first I thought it was red spider, and I sprayed them with weakened nicotine once or twice, but it did no good. Our soil is black, from low land, with about one-third rotted cow manure. The cows were bedded with shavings, which I do not like. Our water, also, is unsuitable, being extremely hard and not good for vegetation. I also gave the plants a little liquid manure before this disease showed itself. We have picked the worst stems and leaves off several times, but still the disease is spreading and I fear it will destroy the crop. Can I save them in any way—for instance, by cutting them back hard? They are almost the only flowers I have to depend on. I buy rooted cuttings every spring, to get all the blooms possible for use. Do you think the disease would be liable to occur another season, if the house is thoroughly cleaned and the benches are whitewashed? The benches are of cement. I shall feel grateful for any advice you may give on the matter.

F. W. A.

The specimens forwarded were pretty badly covered with one of the worst diseases to control that the carnation is ever afflicted with. It is called fairy ring, on account of the ring-shaped spots it produces on the leaves. You will notice around the edge of each spot a distinct ring, slightly darker than the rest of the spot.

This is a fungous disease and will spread all over your plants unless you get it under control. Pick off all the affected leaves you can, and then spray the plants heavily with Bordeaux mixture. After it has been on a week, choose a warm, bright day and wash off the plants in the morning; then, by afternoon, apply the Bordeaux again. If the disease keeps on appearing, keep it picked off and keep spraying with the Bordeaux. It is the best thing known for those spot diseases.

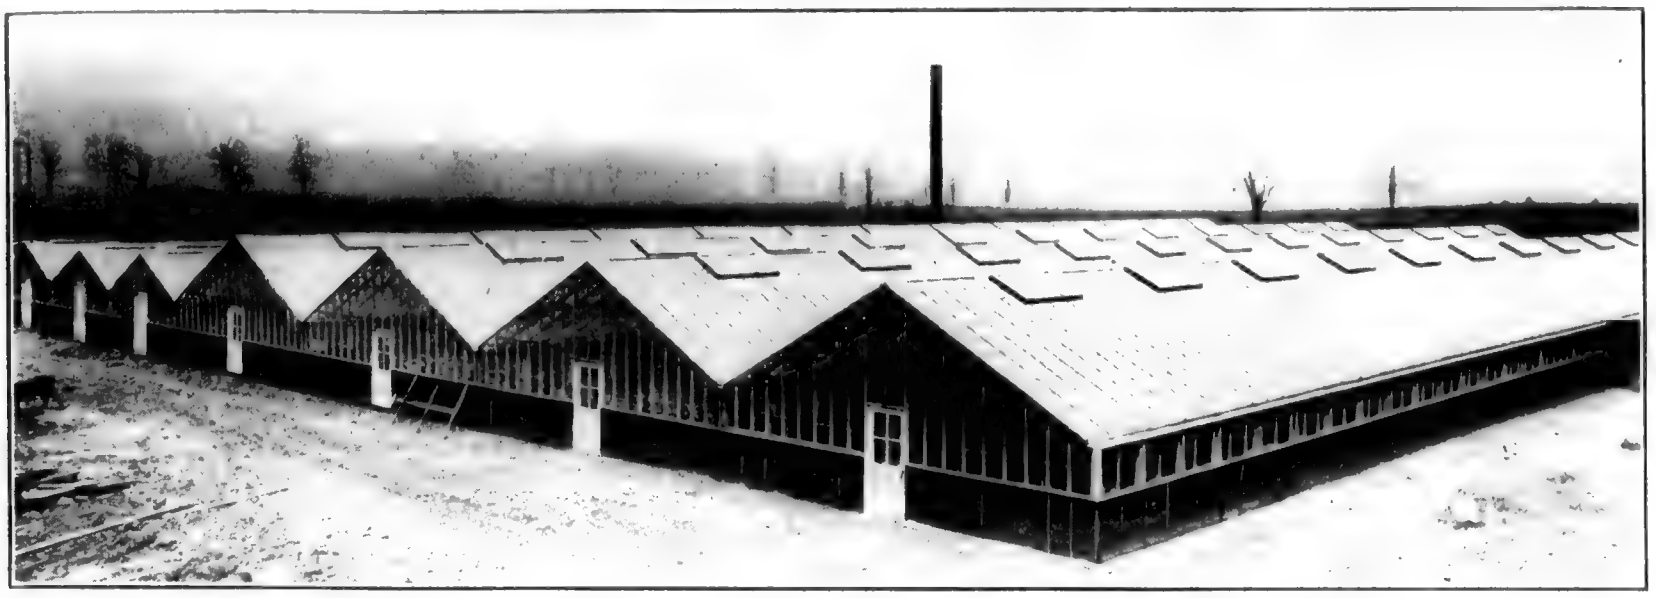
CARNATION THE HERALD.



The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph of the red carnation which the Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet and Chicago, plans to disseminate next season. It has been seen at most of the exhibitions since last autumn and the reception it has received encourages Messrs. Pyfer and Olsem to believe they have a good thing. The variety is a seedling raised on their place at Joliet.

COVERED WITH SPIDER.

I am sending you two of my carnation plants for examination. If you will kindly tell me the trouble with them and state what remedy to use, I shall be thankful. From the time I took them from the field, in the last part of August, until about Christmas, they were doing well, but after that they seemed to fade away rapidly. Following the advice in The Review, I treated them for red spider and now it seems to me that this trouble has disappeared. About the middle of November I used a thin dressing of pulverized sheep manure, and a month later a dressing of wood ashes. The temperature has been from 55 to 65 degrees, but four or five times during the season it went down as low as 40 degrees. The plants I am sending are two of the worst I can find, but about all of them are affected more or less. J. H. C.

Carnation The Herald.

John Walker's New Range at Boardman, O.

The plants forwarded are literally covered with spider. There is a little rust on them, too, but there can be no doubt that the spider is what is doing the damage to your crop. If you have been treating them for that pest, your treatment has not been successful and you will have to double your efforts or else there will soon be no carnations at all. Go after them with the hose on every bright day and let them have all the force at your command. After you have syringed them a few times, give them a good syraying with Bordeaux mixture. This will not do much toward killing the spider, but it will prevent an attack of leaf-spot, from which there is danger at this time of the year if much syringing is done.

WALKER'S NEW RANGE.

The range is located on high land, overlooking the valley of Mill Creek, and comprises seven houses, with the boiler house at the northeast corner, so that the whole establishment may be said, in a sense, to be under one roof. Four of the houses are each 28½x200; one is 18x200, and the two which are cut short by the boiler house are each 18x100. The houses are all equal-span and are glazed with 16x24 glass, set in the 24-inch way, thus making the best possible provision for light. The walls are seven feet high to the gutters, which gives ample head room. The heat is provided by a large return tubular boiler.

The first, or south, house is filled with roses, including Killarney, White Killarney, Richmond, Perle and Mrs. Aaron Ward, all of which are looking fine. The next three large houses are planted with carnations. Here are seen Victory, the three varieties of Enchantress, White Perfection, Winsor, Lawson, Harlowarden, Beacon, Pink Delight, Mrs. C. W. Ward, May Day, Scarlet Glow, Dorothy Gordon, etc. The majority of these varieties have done remarkably well and all give great promise for the future. The rest of the range is used for violets, sweet peas and smilax, with the north house for propagating purposes.

Mr. Walker is still conducting the old place, which is located a mile and a half north of town. This place is devoted to the growing of pot plants and decorative stock for his store in the city. He also grows here a large quantity of bedding plants for the spring. Here, too, he forces all his bulb stock for the winter months and Easter.

His intention is, eventually, to move everything to the new plant at Boardman, where he has seventeen acres of land. The city site is becoming too valuable for the growing of flowers, and is also too smoky and dirty, owing to the encroachment of mills, railroads, etc. After looking over the new place, one can not fail to arrive at the conclusion that Mr. Walker's long experience in the growing of flowers has taught him how to erect a practical range, for it would be difficult to find a more conveniently arranged place than the one at Boardman. The materials for the new houses were furnished by the Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago.

NEW ENGLAND DAHLIA SOCIETY.

The annual meeting of the New England Dahlia Society took place in Horticultural hall, Boston, Mass., January 24. The meeting was well attended and many interesting subjects were discussed. The reports of the secretary and treasurer showed a good balance in the treasury.

The following officers were elected for the year 1912: President, J. K. Alexander, East Bridgewater, Mass.; vice-president, W. C. Brady, Wollaston, Mass.; secretary, Irving W. Holbrook, Braintree, Mass.; treasurer, H. L. Winters, Medford, Mass. Executive committee, Loring M. Bates, West Bridgewater, Mass.; Edward W. Ela, Woburn, Mass.; Geo. L. Stillman, Westerly, R. I.; J. H. Flint, Salem, Mass.; W. H. Bacon, Springfield, Mass.

ISMENE CALATHINA.

If your paper would give some explanation of the cultivation of Ismene calathina, I am certain your readers would be much interested in the subject. Your paper reaches many who would appreciate the information. I am located in southwestern Ohio. M. C.

Bulbs of this ismene should be lifted and stored in a dry shed or greenhouse before they have been too severely frozen. They carry over best in a shed where the temperature does not go below 45 degrees, or can be kept under any greenhouse bench where they will not get too much drip. Planting out should not be done in your latitude before the end of April. C. W.

TULIPS FROM FRAMES.

I have some tulips in flats outside, in a frame. Will you please tell me how to treat them? I have two houses; one is run at 50 degrees and the other at 55 to 60 degrees, night temperature. J. M.

The tulips should be well started before being housed, which means that they should have growths two to three inches long. During the early part of the winter it is necessary to keep the tulips in a dark place until the shoots are well drawn up; otherwise they will flower with extremely short stems. After the middle of February the bulbs should be sufficiently well started to stand full exposure to the light at once, and in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees at night will get sufficiently long stems. Move them to a cooler house as they open. After March 1 place any bulbs housed in the cooler house, more especially if they are in pans. In flats, long stems are, of course, an advantage. C. W.

WHEN TO PLANT LILIES.

There has been some lively discussion here regarding the cultivation of Lilium roseum, rubrum and auratum, especially for spring planting. The matter seems to be quite dark to many growers. I have thought it might be a fine idea if your paper would give a thorough explanation of the cultivation for spring and fall planting. My location is southwestern Ohio. M. C.

All the lilies named do much better if planted in the fall rather than the spring. The best time to place them in the ground is as soon as possible after they are received, which is usually from the middle to the end of November. If the bulbs come to hand rather late, cover the ground where they are to be planted with some straw or other material, to exclude frost. Never mind if you have to use a pick to remove the upper surface before planting. It is far better to do this than to keep the bulbs over winter, for, no matter how cool they are kept, they will fritter away much of their strength. Should the ground be too hard frozen, or be covered with snow, pot the bulbs and keep them in a cool cellar until spring. No lilies, if spring planted, can be expected to give anywhere nearly as good results as those set out in late fall. C. W.

INFORMATION WANTED.

J. L. O'Quinn & Co., Raleigh, N. C., want information as to the whereabouts of a man who is described as follows: "About five feet six inches high, spare built, dark complexion, dark hair, weight about 135 pounds, age about 38, somewhat large nose with a scar on it nearly between the eyes, two gold teeth on bridge on upper right side; when talking he has somewhat of a twist at right corner of his mouth; has a bold way of making acquaintances; is tattooed all over his arms, shoulders and breast; some of the marks are: On left wrist three red letters, then clasped hands, the three links with F. L. J. in them, Indian head, flag, snake, rose bush, carnation, butterfly, sailor girl with striped stockings, and many other figures; can't look straight at you when talking; wears a fine Elks' pin pointed with diamonds; signs O. C. Millar, W. C. Millar or C. Blanck." O'Quinn & Co. ask that anyone who can aid in the search for the man so described wire them or the chief of police at Raleigh.

OBITUARY.

James Killion.

James Killion, a gardener of Jamaica Plain, Boston, Mass., died suddenly at his home, 3 Hyde Park avenue, January 24. He had not been well for some time, although able to attend to his daily duties at the Forest Hills cemetery, where he had been employed for nearly twenty years. On the day of his death he had gone to work as usual, but shortly became ill and was taken home, where he died from Bright's disease early in the afternoon. He was born at Forest Hills fifty-two years ago, and was a graduate of the old Agassiz school. He was unmarried and is survived by a sister, Mrs. Anna Mullen, with whom he lived, and by two brothers, one of whom is the well-known florist, M. J. Killion.

Edward Gormley.

Edward Gormley, the florist of South street, Jamaica Plain, Mass., died January 23, as the result of a fall on an icy pavement in Boston on the preceding Saturday. He was taken to the hospital and found to have sustained concussion of the brain. He was about 35 years old, and conducted the business established many years ago by his father, the late John Gormley. His mother alone survives him, two other sons and her husband having died within a few years. The family is a well-known one in Jamaica Plain, and the aged mother has the sympathy of the community in her bereavement.

Mrs. E. H. Latham.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Latham, of the firm of Bridle & Latham, at Navesink, N. J., died at her home there January 19, after an illness which had its beginning about September 1. She was in her eighty-second year.

Mrs. Latham was born in Kittery, Me., April 20, 1830. Her parents, Lavina and William Pettigrew, were French Canadians. In 1850 she married Franklin J. Latham, a captain in the navy. They conducted a boarding house in New York until her husband's health failed, and on that account they sought the country. Nearly forty-two years ago they moved to Navesink. For seven years she ran a chicken business, but abandoned that to take up the growing of flowers. In November of 1873 her husband died, leaving her quite alone in the world, their little daughter having died some years before. In 1888 she went into partnership with Wm. A. Bridle, an experienced florist of New York, who with untiring energy began the upbuilding of the business. When he took up the work, the plant consisted of two greenhouses; now there are nine. The business will be continued by Mr. Bridle, under the name of Bridle & Latham.

John F. Condon.

John F. Condon, a florist of Bathbeach, Brooklyn, N. Y., died of stomach trouble January 26, at his home, 1446 Seventieth street. He was the son of the late Morris Condon, and leaves a mother, a widow, two daughters and two sons.

Mrs. Julia Brock.

In the death of Mrs. Julia Brock, of Alameda, Cal., January 26, the Pacific coast lost one of its pioneer florists. Mrs. Brock was 89 years of age at the time of her death and, although she had not been in business for over twenty-five years, there are several well known San Francisco retailers who learned the trade in her store, which was located on Commercial street, at that time one of the most popular retail thoroughfares.

D. D. L. Farson.

Daniel D. L. Farson, widely known and popular florist and former secretary of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania State Horticultural Society, died at his home in Overbrook, Pa., February 1, after a brief illness, of pneumonia.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Letter from President Vincent.

President Richard Vincent, Jr., has instructed the secretary to send the following to all florists' clubs and horticultural societies:

My Worthy Friends: It is my earnest desire to make the forthcoming convention, to be held in Chicago, in August next, a grand success, not only in numbers present but also in a business sense, and to make it profitable and interesting to all attending.

Therefore I request that your local society consider, at its next meeting, if possible, whatever subject for discussion at the convention it may be thought would help the greatest number engaged in horticultural pursuits, and especially the members of the S. A. F.

If notice of a subject of this kind is given to Mr. John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, he will see that the subject is brought before the S. A. F. directors at their meeting in March, and if the suggestion does not conflict with other matter offered, the board will be pleased to place it on the program for discussion during the convention.

I would also request that if any article or paper is submitted, your society name some one to discuss the same when brought before the convention.

Respectfully yours,
Richard Vincent, Jr.,
President.

Several letters have been returned and notices from postmasters received notifying me of the non-delivery of the Proceedings of 1911, through wrong address being given. If any member who has not received a copy of the Proceedings of 1911 or the assessment notice for 1912 will notify me at once, same will be sent, and at the same time the correct address will be entered on the books of the society.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., offer for registration the following new variety of orchid, described below. Any person objecting to the registration, or to the use of the proposed name, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

Raisers' description: Sepals and petals white, suffused with rose. The extended or front part of the lip is dark lavender, mottled and streaked with purple. The lateral lobes, lavender minutely mottled and veined with purple; the back part of the lateral lobes are also lavender (a shade lighter than the front parts) and minutely veined with purple. The crest is yellow, with a dark purple vein in the center. Throat is yellow with dark purple veins. Name, Laelia anceps var. Lageriana. John Young, Sec'y.

February 5, 1912.

JOLIET, ILL.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its annual convention and exhibition here March 5 and 6. As there is no florists' club here, C. L. Washburn, president of the state organization, has asked A. T. Pyfer, manager of the Chicago Carnation Co., to take charge of the local arrangements. Mr. Pyfer has secured the coöperation of the following committees:

Entertainment—Wm. Hartshorne, A. T. Pyfer, Peter Olsem.

Reception—A. C. Rott, P. W. Peterson, John Granson.

Arrangements and Exhibition—Peter Olsem, C. E. Carter, Joseph Labo.

It is expected that both the convention and exhibition will be the largest yet held by the association.

CHICAGO'S SPRING SHOW.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago February 5, plans for the spring flower show in the Art Institute March 12 to 17 were considered. Students of the Art Institute submitted several poster designs in competition for a prize offered by the Horticultural Society. A manager will be engaged at once. One suggestion is that a separate art gallery be used for each section of the exhibits, thus providing a rose room, a carnation room, an orchid room, etc., while the larger flowering plants and decorative stock can be arranged on the stairways and in corridors. Much of the success of the Chicago flower shows of the past has been attributed to unconventional staging and the management is desirous of obtaining the same result this time. The Art Institute offers a problem quite distinct from the Coliseum and suggestions on how to deal with it will be welcomed. Address J. H. Burdett, secretary, 1620 West One Hundred and Fourth place, Chicago.

Holton & Hunkel Co., of Milwaukee; Charles Knopf Floral Co., Richmond, Ind.; J. A. Valentine, of the Park Floral Co., Denver; Manke Bros., North Milwaukee; W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind., and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., have written that they will send exhibits.

The following premiums have been added:

Class 143—Best display of cut cattleyas, to be judged on the following scale: Quality, 50 points; variety, 30 points; quantity, 20 points; first, grand silver medal; second, grand bronze medal.

Class 144—Best display of cut orchids, all varieties; first, $50; second, $30; third, $15.

Class 145—Best 5-foot window box; first, $12; second, $8; third, $5.

Class 146—For most novel and attractive exhibit not covered by other classes, this including model gardens, arrangements of shrubbery, garden photographs, etc.; first, grand silver gilt medal; second, grand silver medal; third, grand bronze medal.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Milder weather prevails this week and business is much brighter in every way. Transient trade is almost double what it was during the cold snap and things are humming once more. January 29, McKinley day, was but little observed here; there were no special displays in the florists' shop windows, nor was there an extra supply of carnations on hand.

An abundant supply of valley is flooding the market, but the price remains about the same. Lilies are quite plentiful and are useful in design work. Carnations are abundant, but roses are still scarce and the price is high. Beauties are in the same condition. Sweet peas and freesias are pouring into the market in great shape and the price is rather firm. Other seasonable stock is in good supply.

Various Notes.

Emil Brucker, of Buffalo, announces that the Buffalo bowling team is getting ready for the match which will be played with the Rochester bowlers in the near future.

H. E. Wilson has purchased property a few doors from the Rochester Floral Co. on East Main street, and expects to occupy it in the spring.

Miss Gibson is still in Philadelphia and expects to remain for a time. Miss Ederle is filling the position made vacant by Miss Gibson.

Harry P. Neun reports that his new store is doing a nice business, and that he expects things to boom this spring. At his greenhouses on South avenue he is going to grow Killarney, Hillingdon and Prince de Bulgarie roses in the future. After the Easter rush is over he plans to erect two new greenhouses.

The Rochester Florists' Association held a special meeting January 26, at James Vick's Sons' store, to elect representatives to the board of managers of the Rochester Industrial Exposition. The men chosen to represent the association are: F. W. Vick, Colin B. Ogston, George B. Hart, Chas. H. Vick and John Dunbar.

Keller did the decorating for an exceptionally large wedding last week.

Rowland Cloudsley, of Buffalo, spent a few hours in this city, February 2, on his way to Lyons, N. Y.

Joseph Nerdein is no longer with George Boucher, and is looking for a good opening in some other business.

The Rochester Floral Co. reports that trade was rather quiet McKinley day. Miss Ethel Guggleman, who has been ill for a time, is at work again.

Harry P. Neun and Felix Alberts have just returned from a business trip to New York and Philadelphia.

Harry Brush has left the employ of George B. Hart.

J. B. Keller Sons report a busy January with weddings and receptions, both great and small. E. C. A.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The market last week had everything that was seasonable and plenty of it, excepting roses and fancy carnations. In these the demand was quite heavy and all cleaned up early. The demand was also good in violets, but the market had plenty daily to supply any size of order that came along. There was quite a batch of lilies consigned to this market during the week and the demand cleaned them up nicely. Other bulb stock came in heavily every day and some was left over, this being the only line on which there was a surplus. Tulips, Von Sions, jonquils and freesias are of extra good quality.

The retail trade reports a good week; a great many social affairs are being given now, and this week several large weddings will take place, which should use up a lot of fancy quality flowers.

Various Notes.

Arnold Ringier, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, paid us a brief visit last week. Mr. Ringier has recovered from his recent attack of rheumatism.

Chas. W. Wors, well known to the local trade, was taken to the city hospital last week suffering from a bad case of grip. At last reports his condition was serious.

Oscar Huettemann, manager of the Tower Floral Co., was confined to his home by sickness last week.

From last reports Carl Beyer is still confined to his room, where he has been for the last eight weeks with a severe case of rheumatism.

All those who were awarded prizes in the Henry Shaw classes at the late show given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society have received their checks in full. The society held a meeting January 27, at which arrangements were made to pay all other prizes sometime this month.

C. O. Sanders is contemplating a trip to Chicago this week to visit his brother who is in the automobile business. Mr. Sanders expects the cold winter will make plenty of business for him in the spring with nursery stock.

A great deal of interest has been evidenced by the growers in the discussion of "Pot Grown Roses" scheduled for the meeting of the Florists' Club this week.

The Bentzen Floral Co. is considering the purchase of an automobile as the result of the death of one of their valuable horses last week.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, spent a day in the city last week. Mr. Emunds reports a good deal of work, but says cut stock is so scarce that instead of consigning to this market he has to buy to supply the demand.

Henry Berning had splendid consignments of American Beauties last week.

Will Young, C. C. Sanders and Theo. Miller, who seldom visit the wholesale markets, paid a visit to C. A. Kuehn and inspected his handsome building last week.

George Angermueller had a great lot of fine tulips in all colors last week. The white and light pink cleaned up, but the other colors dragged. Mr. Angermueller says he never saw a time when roses were so scarce as this year.

The Engelmann Botanical Club will hold its regular monthly meeting next Monday night at the Missouri Botanical Gardens. Secretary Pring has a fine program mapped out, which should attract the members.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, made his regular weekly visit Monday, February 5. He reports that his trip to Chicago last week was a pleasant one.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. gave its annual stag party to its St. Louis county growers at the store Saturday evening, February 3. Owing to the extreme cold the attendance was greatly reduced; nevertheless some twenty-five braved the blasts and spent an enjoyable evening. There was plenty to eat, drink and smoke, good music and singing, also a moving picture show. J. J. B.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The market, while in essentially the same shape as at the time of last writing, still is easing nicely in some lines. With one or two exceptions, the call steadily takes up everything really worth while and some nearly worth while. Monday's close showed a little stock still on hand. The local demand is fair and shipping business good.

Last week the weather showed signs of opening up nicely. Saturday, however, brought a heavy snow and the thermometer dropped from the freezing point, which it held late in the afternoon, to as low as from 6 to 10 degrees below zero before daylight Sunday morning. During this sudden drop a few incoming shipments were frozen, but fortunately these contained few of the flowers that are real factors in the market now.

Judging from expressions by the wholesalers, there will be a goodly supply of flowers of all kinds appropriate for St. Valentine's day. The sweet peas are in good supply, and the offerings of double violets will be heavy. Lily of the valley, orchids and single violets are all in good supply, and the same is true of red roses and red carnations.

The rose offerings remain about the same as a week ago. In proportion to the average daily cut, the supply of Richmond is the best.

The carnation offerings are increasing in quantity and are holding up a fair average in quality. All the good ones are selling up nicely.

The increase in the offerings of bulbous stock is large and includes the entire range of stock seasonable at this time of the year. Easter lilies and callas continue in short supply.

In green goods there are large offerings of Asparagus plumosus and Asparagus Sprengeri. This stock is nearly all fine and long. The business in this and other allied lines has been fairly good.

Various Notes.

Club meeting Monday night, February 12, at the club rooms.

C. E. Critchell was the first local wholesaler to offer Narcissus poeticus this season.

Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Olinger are entertaining at their home Mr. Olinger's brother-in-law and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Funk, of Emerado, N. D.

The Lake Shore Ferneries, of Florida, have been shipping some excellent Asparagus plumosus to the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange.

The stork stopped at Ed. Schumann's house last week and left a baby daughter.

New Castle florists are sending excellent sweet peas into the market. The cuts from Peter Weiland and F. Benthey & Co. are good and getting better every day.

Nic Weber, Jr., was appointed superintendent of the flower market by E. G. Gillett, one of the trustees of the market house.

Judging from the promptness with which Arthur Becker, the buyer for the Avondale Floral Bazaar, reaches Third avenue each morning and the way he hustles around when there, his firm is doing a rushing business.

The wife of J. L. Dille, the Greensburg, Ind., florist, died last week.

OMAHA.

Paul B. Floth, 3102 Burt street, has effected a settlement with the Omaha Gas Co., following the destruction of thousands of plants by illuminating gas that permeated his greenhouses from a break in the street gas main. The main was ruptured when the thermometer stood below zero three weeks ago, the fumes working their way through the ground to the greenhouses.

Thousands of the plants were destroyed, and the probability that many more were affected caused Mr. Floth to clear his greenhouses entirely and put in a complete new stock. The break in the main was found with difficulty and repaired by the gas company. The consideration in settlement is not made known.

STREATOR, ILL.

On visiting the Hill Floral Co., the writer found everything in first-class condition, under the watchful eye of our friend F. R. Thornton, manager for the company. They grow 2,000 Beacon, 3,000 White Enchantress, 2,000 Enchantress, 1,000 Rose-pink Enchantress, 1,000 C. W. Ward and 500 Gloriosa. Mr. Thornton is well pleased with C. W. Ward and Gloriosa and says they are making good. The firm devotes one house to roses, growing My Maryland, Bride and Richmond. The rest of the space is used for sweet peas, violets and other stock. The range consists of seven houses, containing 18,000 square feet of glass. A. F. L.

YONKERS, N. Y.

On Monday, January 29, the gardeners employed at Greystone, Samuel Untermyer's estate, and those employed by W. B. Thompson, combined to give a dance and social evening at McCann's hall, on North Broadway. Many ex-employees were invited and over 100 persons were present.

Following Bob Johnson's speech on behalf of the hosts, Floor Manager McQueenie announced the first dance. Songs were admirably rendered by Mrs. H. M. Blanche and Messrs. A. Crombie and T. Mercer, at intervals during the evening. With a pause for refreshments, dancing was continued into the "wee, sma' hours." There were Scottish dances to the accompaniment of Highland piping, rendered by Sam Campbell.

The committee is to be congratulated on a program that was admirably conceived and carried out.

CHICAGO CLUB MEETING.

There was an attendance of seventy-five at the meeting of the Florists' Club February 1, when P. J. Foley took the chair as president.

A letter was read from Secretary John Young, of the S. A. F., giving the club official notice of the action of the directors at Detroit as published in The Review for January 25. It was voted to recommend Fred Lautenschlager as local manager of the trades display in August, but the action was reconsidered as being, perhaps, premature, and the secretary was instructed to correspond with Secretary Young to see what is wanted along this line.

The reports of Secretary A. T. Pyfer and Treasurer E. F. Winterson showed a balance of $1,135.32.

H. N. Bruns, for the trustees, reported auditing the books for the last two years, finding the showing correct as follows:

RECEIPTS.

Bal. Jan. 31, 1910	$1,066.76
Feb. 1, 1910, to Jan. 31, 1911	1,578.48
Feb. 1, 1911, to Jan. 4, 1912	1,036.72
Total	$3,681.96

DISBURSEMENTS.

Feb. 1, 1910, to Jan. 31, 1911	$1,578.09
Feb. 1, 1911, to Jan. 4, 1912	968.55
Total	$2,546.64
Balance	$1,135.32

F. W. Tredup was elected to membership. Applications were received from J. F. Potocka, 176 North Michigan avenue; Paul M. Bryant, 131 North Wabash avenue; John Schriver, Twenty-sixth street and Western avenue; C. F. McCormick, 143 North Wabash avenue, and Sam Seligman, New York.

President Foley appointed the following standing committees:

Sports—Allie Zech, Frank Ayers, Otto Goerisch.

Transportation—Andrew Benson, H. B. Howard, H. E. Philpott.

Good of the club—Guy French, A. C. Kohlbrand, Ed Enders.

C. L. Washburn, president, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, secretary of the Illinois State Florists' Association, were present and spoke for the convention and exhibition of that organization, to be held at Joliet March 5 and 6. The club invited the florists of the state to visit Chicago the following day and attend the club meeting to be held March 7.

J. H. Burdett, secretary of the Horticultural Society of Chicago, described the plans for the spring show to open March 12, and asked the club's coöperation.

John A. Then exhibited seedling carnation No. 41, which was scored eighty points by a committee consisting of C. W. Johnson, Guy French and E. A. Wood. Charles J. Bond, of Naperville, exhibited some thirty splendid blooms of Cattleya Trianæ, now in full crop with him, which received the thanks of the club. Next day they were on display at the salesroom of the A. L. Randall Co.

NEWS, NOTES AND COMMENTS

Marion, Ind.—L. C. Smith, of the Marion Floral Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his mother, who died January 17, at the age of 68 years.

Amherst, Mass.—Morris Kingman's greenhouses, on South Pleasant street, were completely destroyed by fire January 26. The house and barn, close by, were saved.

Yonkers, N. Y.—H. J. F. de Thestrup, formerly foreman for Frank P. Putnam, at Lowell, Mass., is now superintendent of the greenhouses of the Yonkers Nursery Co.

Trenton, N. J.—The business of Harry E. Blackman, at 135 North Broad street, has been incorporated under the name of the Blackman Floral Co., with a capital stock of $20,000.

New Orleans, La.—Mr. and Mrs. M. Cook have invited a large circle of friends, including many in the trade, to assist them in the celebration of their golden wedding February 8.

Garfield, Wash.—January 24 Louis R. Scott, of the firm of Scott Bros., proprietors of the Roselawn Greenhouses at this place and Moscow, Idaho, formed a partnership for life with Miss Elna Swanson. The young couple have begun housekeeping in their own home at Moscow, where the groom has charge of the firm's greenhouses.

Summit, N. J.—At William Death's establishment a boiler gave out recently, and soon afterward his delivery wagon was smashed in a collision with an automobile. Fortunately, no one was hurt. Both accidents happened at the busiest time. A new Hitchings boiler was installed and an auto delivery car will probably take the place of the wagon.

Kansas City, Mo.—The Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. has leased for ten years a part of the building at 1108 to 1110 Grand avenue, which is being remodeled and will be ready for its tenants about March 1. The space to be occupied by the Rock Co. is the north half of the first floor and a part of the basement, and the total ten-year rental will be $51,000.

Lexington, Ky.—John A. Keller estate has sold to James P. Keller the downtown store which he has successfully managed for many years. He will continue at the same stand to do a retail business, while the original firm of John A. Keller will do a general wholesale and retail business at the greenhouses under the management of J. Ferdinand Keller, who has been in charge of the plant since the death of the late John A. Keller a few years ago.

Forest Hills, Mass.—Robert Walsh, for nearly fifteen years with M. J. Killion, resumed his duties January 25, after an illness of eight weeks.

Rome, N. Y.—Edward H. Kipp has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with unsecured liabilities of $3,751 and nominal assets of $1,054.

Alton, Ill.—Charles Newman has bought three lots on North Elizabeth street for a range of houses for growing vegetables.

South Omaha, Neb.—A. D. Curtis, formerly with the Woodbine Floral Co., at Woodbine, Ia., has been engaged to take charge of the greenhouses of L. Henderson, in this town.

Allentown, Pa.—There was a narrow escape from a freeze-out at E. N. Kroninger's range of eight houses January 26, when the electric pump which supplies water for the boilers was out of commission.

Racine, Wis.—During the recent zero weather the greenhouses of W. Jackson, on the Lake Shore road, south of this city, could not be sufficiently heated and his stock of flowers and vegetables was badly damaged.

Peoria, Ill.—Fire recently destroyed thirty feet of the ends of two houses at the Peoria Home Nursery. It was a struggle to save the rest of the plant, because the distance from the city made help impossible. H. E. Mitting is manager and he promptly sent an order for material to the Moninger Co., Chicago, and made quick repairs. The proprietor is H. W. Williams. An office is maintained opposite the city hall.

Northampton, Mass.—The horticultural laboratory at Smith college witnessed the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Holyoke and Northampton January 9. Edward J. Canning gave an interesting talk on palms, and W. J. Beach, of South Hadley, read a fine paper on the culture of carnations. The last meeting of the club was held at Amherst Agricultural College, February 6, when W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, talked on roses.

Lawrence, Kan.—Mrs. Paul R. Brooks, proprietor of the Oread Greenhouses, on South Tennessee street, reports that she had a narrow escape from serious trouble during the recent cold wave, when the Natural Gas Co. reduced the supply of gas here in order to supply more of it to Kansas City. The Oread Greenhouses have been heated with natural gas for the last four years, with no special difficulty until this winter. Now Mrs. Brooks has changed the fixtures in her boiler, so as to burn coal instead of gas.

Beatrice, Neb.—The Dole Floral Co. is planning the erection of another greenhouse, 32x100. During the coming summer they will also install two new boilers, to take the place of those now in use.

Topeka, Kan.—Fire, January 6, attacked the greenhouses belonging to Jacob Bleier, a vegetable grower. Although Mr. Bleier has a range of seven houses, the flames were confined to one of them, the loss being something over $100.

Hornell, N. Y.—Albert King is well pleased with the season's trade, which has kept all hands busy. Born in La Belle France and raised among flowers, he is a most successful grower. A new house is under way and will be ready by spring.

Cumberland Center, Me.—A part of the roof of one of Frank H. Chase's greenhouses recently collapsed under the weight of snow and ruined the bench of carnations directly beneath it. Temporary repairs were quickly made and the rest of the stock in the house was saved. The broken space in the roof was 6x25 feet.

Ludington, Mich.—A recent fire in the windmill tower at the establishment of William Gregory, on East Ludington avenue, caused a loss of about $300. The flames were confined to the tower and water tank, and temporary repairs were hurriedly made, thus renewing the supply of water for the heating system in time to prevent injury to the stock in the greenhouses. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

New London, Wis.—The greenhouses of the Guelson Floral Co. had a narrow escape from serious disaster during the recent below-zero weather. The blow-off valve on the boiler was burst by the frost, and as a consequence the water all escaped and the boiler was cracked and burned beyond repair. The ruin of the stock was prevented by building small fires along the aisles of the five houses. The temperature was thus kept at a safe height until a threshing engine could be run to the scene and connected to the heating pipes.

Winfield, Kan.—J. L. Vaughan, formerly of Dexter and Independence, has purchased the greenhouses of E. H. Gilbert, on East Third street, and is planning to remodel and enlarge the range in the spring, as soon as the weather will permit. His property is 260 feet in depth and has a frontage of 125 feet on Third street. On the seventy-five feet of vacant space west of the present houses, he proposes to erect another house, 40x200 feet. He will also rearrange the heating system and thoroughly overhaul and renovate the buildings.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

WESTERN sphagnum moss is decidedly scarce. There are small quantities of eastern stock.

FLORISTS dealing in field-grown stock should study the bill of the nurserymen printed on page 66, for it will have a large bearing on their interests should it become a law.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE preliminary schedule of the National Sweet Pea Society, for the big exhibition to be held at Boston July 13 and 14, has now been issued in pamphlet form. It carries over $2,500 in cash prizes. Those wishing copies should address Harry A. Bunyard, secretary, 342 West Fourteenth street, New York city.

LOCAL retail advertising affords the best opportunity for increasing the consumption of flowers. Those florists, not yet being ready to use newspaper space themselves, who decry its use by others, are extremely short-sighted, for one always gets more or less benefit from the advertising of his competitors, especially where that advertising is for the purpose of awakening a dormant demand.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Kindly note the following special prizes for the C. S. A. 1912 exhibition, to be held in New York:

W. Wells & Co. specials — Gold, silver and bronze medals for three flowers of Annie L. Angus.

Chas. H. Totty— $50 for six flowers of Chrysanthemum Ramapo; first prize, $25; second prize, $15; third prize, $10.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

Again the nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society desires to call the attention of its members to the fact that we must have their hearty coöperation by the contribution of bulbs. Not only are those desired which at present are being sold under more than one name, as well as the several varieties which bear the same name, but especially do we wish to try out those varieties which may be considered unworthy of retaining, and which some of our members must possess in sufficient quantities to hardly miss the number required for our use. Five to ten bulbs would be sufficient, and by such assistance the work of your committee would be hastened and the growing of gladioli would be raised to a much higher standard. We know that the last season was most severe to growers throughout most of the country and that some varieties being tested for the first time may not have had a fair chance and will be further tested the coming season, and as everything points to a good season for 1912, let us have your contribution early.

All shipments should be made via express, prepaid, consigned to Prof. A. C. Beal, Chairman of Nomenclature, American Gladiolus Society, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Prof. A. C. Beal, Chairman.

Leonard Joerg,
Committee on Nomenclature.

The Great Central Market.

The return to below-zero temperature at the close of last week put the market back to where it was during the severely cold weather in January. Business had been excellent so long as weather conditions were fairly favorable, but demand decreased as the temperature fell and the week closed with the market far from active. Individual houses may have been fairly well cleaned up at closing time February 3, but taking the market as a whole there was stock on hand in practically every line except short roses. The severe weather affected orchids, violets and valley more than it did the other lines. Early in the week cattleyas had stiffened slightly in price, but the greater part of the demand for these flowers is for corsage work, and this work is decidedly light in below-zero weather. As a result there was an accumulation of cattleyas which sold February 3 at probably the lowest prices of the season. Violets, while not in heavy supply, sold poorly for the same reason. Valley stacked up. There were enough carnations for all requirements and some of the poorer grades were moved with difficulty. Even long roses were left in some of the wholesalers' iceboxes Saturday night.

Fortunately the present week opened with milder temperature, as a result of which business promptly improved, though usually several days are necessary after the market has had a relapse to get it back to normal conditions. Beauties are decidedly scarce and not many are of first-class quality, but the demand is light. Roses are coming in a little more plentifully, though some houses say they can not yet see any change in conditions. There are, however, enough of the longer grades so that most houses are filling their orders for these, though prices are held so stiffly that it is difficult for one wholesaler to buy from another. Short roses are not to be had in any quantity, though a small increase in the supply would go a long ways toward relieving the situation. The trouble with most of the roses is that they are too good for funeral work.

There is some variation in the reports on carnations. Some houses do not have enough, others are cleaned out nicely, while a few have stock to carry over each night. Apparently the demand is for the best grade of goods, principally in the lighter colors.

Orchids continue abundant, but a stiffening market is looked for. Violets are not yet selling well, but a big business is looked for at St. Valentine's day. Valley is almost a glut. All bulbous stock is coming in more plentifully and is of improved quality, selling better than it has.

The price of ferns has been moved up another 50 cents. Most of the stock now being received requires picking over, and little satisfaction is being had on this item.

WE HANDLE THE CREAM OF THE

VIOLETS

Order Now for St. Valentine's Day

WHILE we have a very large supply of fine Violets, the prospect is for a heavier demand than ever before for Valentine's Day, so it is the part of wisdom for retailers to place orders with us now. Those who place orders now are insured—sure of their supply and protected against rise in price. Note that the cold weather has greatly improved the quality—stock never was better at this date.

CARNATIONS

Carnations are at their best at this time of year. The quality of our stock is right up to top notch, and the supply is large and on the increase.

Cattleyas

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always get your orders filled if you place them with us. Order now for St. Valentine's Day.

Fancy Valley

Fine Valley is something you need, not only for St. Valentine's, but every day in the year.

SWEET PEAS

Long-stemmed, fancy stock, all colors

These are fine Peas—no better ever were offered at this season of the year—the best winter-blooming varieties done to perfection. These Peas have made a hit the last two winters, and our growers increased the supply for this season. We ship fresh from the vines, putting the stock in your hands with all its first fragrance.

Beauties

We never are without Beauties. Your orders always will be filled if you send them here. A big cut of short Beauties now on.

Killarneys

The quality of our Killarneys is the talk of the town—and we have quantity, too, but most of the stock runs select and special lengths.

Fancy Cattleyas

For VALENTINE'S DAY, $5.00 to $6.00 per doz.

Our Cattleyas should not be confounded with the ordinary stock found in the cut flower markets—it is much finer than what is ordinarily offered. Splendid, large flowers, highly colored—a quite superior quality. And we have quantity. Write or wire for special quotations on hundred lots and up.

CARNATIONS

We handle more Carnations than any other house in the west and do a very large shipping business with them because the buyers know our stock will carry. If you are not quite satisfied with the stock you are getting, it will pay you to write us about it.

VIOLETS for VALENTINE'S DAY

Remember the way the business has been growing the last few years and order enough.

New York Doubles, $7.50 to $10.00 per 1000.

Princess of Wales, extra fancy, long-stemmed, 50 in a bunch, offered subject to the supply being booked up, at $1.25 per 100.

Singles, ordinary good stock, 25 in a bunch, $5.00 to $7.50 per 1000.

LILIES
Giganteum Rubrum
Auratum

There is no flower now in market that makes as big a show for the money as these Giganteums do. We can supply in thousand lots as easily as by the dozen. Glad to quote special prices on quantities.

WHITE LILAC

The only supply in the west. Extra fine stock. Can furnish at $1.50 per bunch.

Poehlmann Going Into Supplies.

The most important news of the week is the announcement that the Poehlmann Bros. Co., which is preparing to move the store into much larger quarters, will go into florists' supplies. It is stated that a complete line will be put in. The florists' supplies interests in Chicago are expanding rapidly.

Various Notes.

The partnership between Frank Williams and George Economopoulos, doing business as the Alpha Floral Co., was dissolved by mutual consent February 2. Mr. Economopoulos will continue the store and assumed all obligations.

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. has Moninger material on the ground for four new houses, each 27 x 275. Two are to be planted, as early as possible, to Killarneys and two later to carnations.

Weiland & Risch have just finished equipping their boilers with smoke consumers on the steam jet blower system. All the Evanston growers have similar work in mind, for the city officials are getting after all smoking chimneys.

In discussing the prospect, at the store of the E. C. Amling Co., H. C. Wendland stated the other day that between July 1, 1912, and July 1, 1913, Wendland & Keimel expect to cut approximately 2,000,000 roses. Their addition is the largest any grower for this market is making this year. They will have twenty-one houses to produce the 2,000,000 flowers.

Harry Rowe is nicely located in his new store at 20 East Monroe street and his old stand is in the hands of John Mangel's decorators.

Wm. Dittman, the New Castle Beauty grower who ships to Kyle & Foerster, has gone to Tavares, Fla., for four weeks' vacation, leaving the place in charge of Wm. Dittman, Jr.

John Riemersma, who does business at 7111 Indiana avenue as the Park Manor Greenhouses, has worked up a

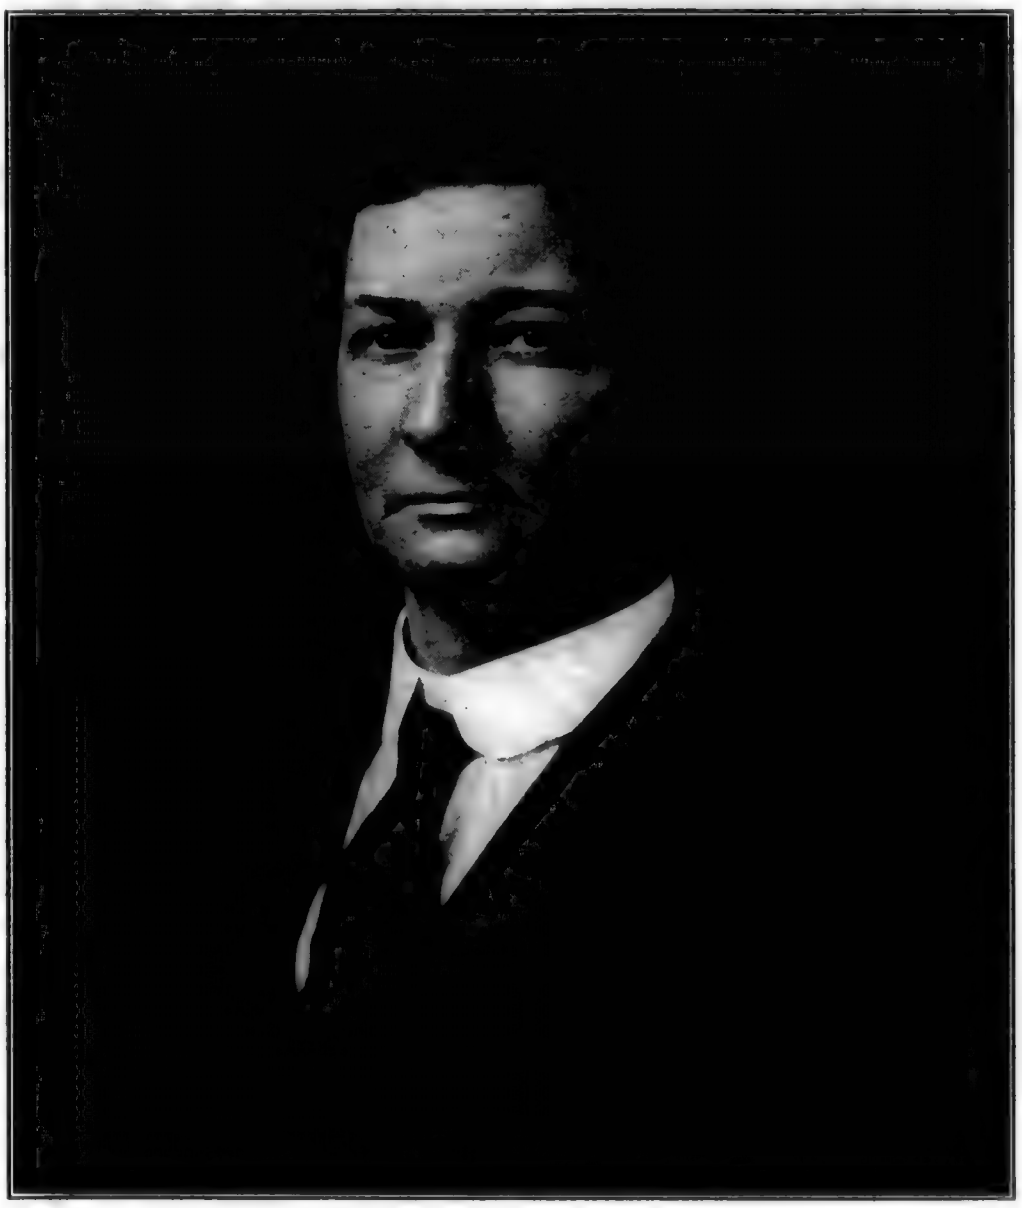
A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving ferns from Massachusetts shipped in corrugated paper boxes each containing 5,000 ferns. The shipper is trying to save express charges for his customers.

E. E. Pieser still is under the doctor's care, but misses little time from the store of Kennicott Bros. Co.

T. D. Long, of Elitch's Gardens, Denver, was in town last week and will be back in a fortnight on his way to New York.

Mrs. W. P. Kyle is progressing nicely after the operation performed January 27, but will be in the hospital another week or so.

Otto W. Frese, at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says Wellworth Farms is fortunate in having a quite good cut of Killarneys. The shipment Monday morning was 1,600.



James Stevens, erstwhile florist bowler, has gone to Los Angeles to bag a first prize of $2,000.

The civil service board of the West Park Commissioners will hold an examination February 27 to select a head florist at the Garfield park conservatory and the propagating houses connected with it. The pay assigned to the present vacancy is $150 per month, but as much as $200 can be allowed. At the same time and place an examination will be held for positions under the head florist paying $2.25 to $2.50 per day. Applicants need not be residents of Chicago. Full details may be had by addressing Fred G. Heuchling, superintendent of employment, 1551 West Madison street, Chicago.

The store of Schiller The Florist is being redecorated throughout. George Asmus says transient trade is so light during the severely cold weather that it is no more inconvenient to do it now than in summer. Moreover, "it presents a nice, clean, attractive appearance for the Easter trade."

Fred Lautenschlager says he was surprised by the number of telegraph orders received for Kroeschell boilers last month. He says the severely cold weather caused many boiler breakdowns, requiring new apparatus in a hurry.

Another firm has entered the greenhouse material business in Chicago. The Edgewater and Rosehill branch of the Edward Hines Lumber Co. is specializing in pecky cypress and other greenhouse lumber.

Mrs. W. P. Kyle is progressing nicely after the operation performed January 27, but will be in the hospital another week or so.

Otto W. Frese, at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, says Wellworth Farms is fortunate in having a quite good cut of Killarneys. The shipment Monday morning was 1,600.

James Stevens, erstwhile florist bowler, has gone to Los Angeles to bag a first prize of $2,000.

The civil service board of the West Park Commissioners will hold an examination February 27 to select a head florist at the Garfield park conservatory and the propagating houses connected with it. The pay assigned to the present vacancy is $150 per month, but as much as $200 can be allowed. At the same time and place an examination will be held for positions under the head florist paying $2.25 to $2.50 per day. Applicants need not be residents of Chicago. Full details may be had by addressing Fred G. Heuchling, superintendent of employment, 1551 West Madison street, Chicago.

The store of Schiller The Florist is being redecorated throughout. George Asmus says transient trade is so light during the severely cold weather that it is no more inconvenient to do it now than in summer. Moreover, "it presents a nice, clean, attractive appearance for the Easter trade."

The Rising Eastern Market.

The feature of the first week in February is the increase in the supply of daffodils, an increase so large that the market has been borne down. Golden Spur are down to $3 a hundred and even lower, while single Von Sion fare even worse. Tulips have suffered from their quality, or rather lack of it, while the shorter-stemmed sweet peas accumulate despite efforts to sell them.

Outside of these varieties, the cut flower market is in fair shape. There are improvements in single violets and in valley. Cattleyas are less depressed. There is an active demand for the rather modest supply of Easter lilies. Asparagus plumosus is in demand. The difference between the nice, compact bunches of even sprays and the long, ragged or short, scrubby ones is much less noticeable than usual.

Carnations are holding their own well. The receipts have been heavy. The market has taken them at prices but little below that of the last week in January. Despite the shortening of the rose crop, the scarcity has been confined to the lower grades. Fancy and select roses have been fully equal to all demands. Fancy sweet peas have fared much better than the poor grade, although $1 will buy all but gilt edged stock. It is unfortunate that so many sweet peas worth from 35 to 50 cents per hundred should be coming into town when the extreme cold deprives them of their natural outlet, the street merchants. Lilac is in fair demand. The beautiful Acacia pubescens has come.

Club Meeting.

The club meeting Tuesday, February 6, was remarkable; the attendance filled every chair and many stood. The exhibits were numerous, varied and all well grown. Addresses were made by Richard Vincent, Jr., who spoke of the value of organization for the florist; Wallace R. Pierson, in his happiest vein; Stanley Fisher, Robert Pyle, Adolph Farenwald, Edward A. Stroud, Leo Niessen, Samuel S. Pennock and John R. Andre.

The Robert Craig Co. exhibited for Stockton & Howe the new rose, Princeton. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., for the Budlong Rose Co., staged the new rose, Baltimore. A. N. Pierson Co., Cromwell, Conn., exhibited Double White Killarney, Mrs. Taft, Lady Hillingdon and Killarney Queen, also Asparagus Hatcheri strings. J. Stephenson's Sons staged Mrs. Jardine and Double Pink Killarney. Robert Scott & Son showed Irish Fireflame, a new five-petaled rose, and Double Pink Killarney. Joseph Heacock Co. exhibited Killarney and White Killarney. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., staged Sunburst.

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., sent his striped carnation, Benora, and Goddess, a grand scarlet. The Stafford Flower Farms had five vases of carnations, including Princess Charming, Gloriosa, White Wonder, Mrs. Ward and Beacon. S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. exhibited a vase of 100 Comfort and also staged Wodenethe for Charles H. Totty, a white seedling for the Cottage Gardens Co., Northport for James D. Cockcroft, and Wm. Eccles for Scott Bros. H. D. Rohrer had a red seedling. William Kleinheinz staged Miss Dimple Widener. Richard Lang showed White Enchantress, Mrs. C. W. Ward.

in trays of plants from the houses to the packing benches; packers were filling heavily padded boxes with plants and bulbs, while in the extreme end a force of men were busily engaged in pruning, labeling and potting roses.

George A. Strohlein stepped briskly out of the office, with a greeting so hearty that the trip seemed as nothing. "We shipped fifteen tons by express January 17," he said. "I know fifteen tons seems a good deal—30,000 pounds, but that was what we sent. You see," Mr. Strohlein added, "it was too cold to send plants out for nearly two weeks, so that was the accumulation of orders which left here then. The express company furnished us two cars for the south and west and two more for the East, saving trouble for both the company and ourselves."

Cocos Weddelliana has become so closely identified with the Dreer place at Riverton that one of the bright minds conceived the idea of saying, "If you see a fine cocos, it came from Dreer's." In this, as in many other truths, the exception would but prove the rule. The cocos range is absorbingly interesting to anyone who cares for beautiful palms. It is customary among floral writers to go into raptures over the cocos and then give the numbers and, if their enthusiasm is great, the number of each size of pot. But it is not the numbers or the sizes of the pots that appeal to the plant lover who sees these palms; it is their absolute freedom from disease. Anyone who has tried to grow the cocos knows that the danger of even a slight injury to the root is serious, and that, when this injury occurs, the plant suffers unmistakably. He further knows that when perfectly healthy plants receive a slight check from water or temperature, they assume a golden hue most exasperating to the grower, from which they recover more slowly than a patient from typhoid. The first trouble has been met and conquered at Riverton, as in many other places, by seed sowing in pots; the second by cultural skill, combined with well drained, heavy soil.

A step further in cocos lore comes from the grower, who has made an intelligent study of his graceful pets. "The more distinct the type, the slower the growth," he says. An illustration was made with three plants from the same sowing, in the same size of pot. One was tall and erect. "This plant," the grower said, "will give the specimen most rapidly." Then turning to a graceful, drooping cocos, he said, "This is the slowest form of growth." Between these two was a plant that partook slightly of the characteristics of both, with a slight curl or twist to the leaves, giving a bizarre appearance, probably infrequently seen.

To bring out the point more clearly, it should be added that the graceful, drooping cocos was absolutely vigorous and healthy, so that the application of the rule, "The more distinct the type, the slower the growth," has nothing whatever to do with health. Further illustrations were given in other sizes, showing the three types, more especially the first and second, in different stages of growth. The impression given by a stroll through the cocos range is that this palm has responded in a wonderful degree to the intelligent cultural skill bestowed upon it.

The feature of kentia cultivation at Riverton today is the making up of Kentia Forsteriana in those useful elec-

Discussing the question of heat, Mr. Strohlein said that by putting on helpers for the regular day and night firemen, whose duties were especially to watch the temperatures in the houses, the entire place had passed satisfactorily through the zero weather. While on this subject Mr. Strohlein spoke with enthusiasm of the ease with which Riverton is heated and the favorable growing conditions there. He said that when last at Riverview a decided improvement in the growth of the kentias could be noticed, since his previous visit of a short time before.

James C. Clark was working in the dahlia section. The roots, Mr. Clark said, were wintering well. "They are in splendid condition, not quite so large as last year, but sound and plump; roots that are sure to do well." The quantity of dahlias under Mr. Clark's care is surprising; nothing but perfect system, combined with perfect facilities, enables him to handle them as he does. Row after row of bins, reaching from the floor nearly to the ceiling, airy and free from dirt, all carefully and clearly labeled, give some idea of what is meant by facilities and by system.

A soil crusher, Kleinschmidt No. 4, has been installed and is working at Riverton. It is run by a gasoline engine, pulverizing soil as fast as two men can feed it, and the work is thoroughly done.

These few impressions of a great place are penned in the hope that they may be of interest to some and an inspiration to others.

MAKING HOTBEDS.

I wish you would please tell me exactly how to make hotbeds for spring plants, for sale, such as potatoes, tomatoes and cabbages. I live in Oklahoma. I have already made one of them, but did not succeed with it.

C. G. L.

To have the right kind of manure is the most important thing about making hotbeds. It matters little whether you make them on top of the ground or dig pits. I usually make them on top of the ground, but this method requires a little more manure, for it must be in a pile about two feet wider than the hotbed all around, as the hotbed does not heat well around the edges unless the pile is wider than the frame that is set on top of it. Many growers dig out pits the size of the sash. These are two feet deep and the frame is set on top of the ground like an ordinary cold-frame. In either case there should be about three inches of soil on top of the manure, to hold in the heat and also to prevent the injury of the plants from the fumes that rise.

As already stated, the manure must be right, or it will not heat well. Use only fresh, short horse manure, without much straw in it. Where shavings have been used for bedding, it does not make good hotbeds. The manure should be shaken up and turned over once or twice before being put in the hotbeds, and it should be left three or four days each time it is shaken out.

BEST FRENCH SEED.

Radish, Scarlet Globe; Self-Blanching Celery; Lettuce, Improved Big Boston (quality extra); Black Seed Big Boston, Beaulieu's Forcing, 45 head fill up a barrel; Beaulieu's Globe White Tipped Forcing (½ pink, ½ white) new radish; White Tipped Scarlet turnip; Beet, Detroit, Crosby; long smooth parsley, large rooted, extra; Spinach, Savoy, Viroday, Triumph, etc.; Endive, Curled and Escarolle. All this has been selected by myself and is the quality as used by the market gardeners of Paris. Send for prices.

Pile the manure in place, making it deep enough so it will be eighteen inches in depth when tramped down solidly. Some make the depth fully two feet. If everything is right, the manure will heat violently in a short time and then will gradually cool a little. Do not put anything in except the soil for a few days. When you do put in the plants, watch them closely in the daytime. Admit a little air at the side protected from the wind, and look out that the plants do not dry out or run too hot and burn.

I like to transplant the tomatoes, eggplants, peppers, etc., into flats and set the flats in the frame, but they can be planted right in the soil and will do well. Coleus, verbenas, alternantheras, etc., in small pots, plunged deep in the soil, will do wonderfully well—better than anywhere else, if proper attention is given to them.

sandy soil, as close together as they can be without touching one another. Then fill in between them with very sandy soil and put an inch of the same sort of soil on top. WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The market is peculiar, with a glut of some flowers and a great scarcity of others. The cold weather accounts in part for both. There was never such an oversupply of orchids as has existed for several days. This is especially true of cattleyas. A number of them were sold for only 15 cents apiece a day or two ago. This condition is regarded as remarkable, in view of the fact that this is the height of the social season in Washington, when the rarer varieties of flowers are used in considerable quantities.

Daffodils are also overplentiful and quite cheap, selling at around $2 per hundred. However, things are expected to improve, since the latest cold snap is reducing the supply of various other flowers. Valley and sweet peas are among the other flowers the supply of which exceeds the demand. Narcissi and Roman hyacinths are abundant. The range of prices has been between $1 and $4 per hundred. Roses are rather scarce. Pussy willows have made their appearance and lend a touch of spring to the windows, which are coated with frost.

Various Notes.

The Imperial theater closed its doors February 4. Among its chief stockholders was F. H. Kramer, who did much to promote the company. George H. Cooke and several other florists are said to be financially interested. There were rumors that the company had failed, but these are denied by Mr. Kramer. He announces that the theater has been leased for ten years on advantageous terms.

One of the largest decoration contracts for several years was carried out by J. H. Small & Sons at a reception given by Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean February 1. Besides quantities of roses, palms and other plants, orchids were used in profusion, especially at the supper table.

Another large decoration, by Gude Bros. Co., was at the reception given by Mrs. Rogers at Rauscher's the other night. The job included a Japanese pagoda forty feet long, covered with roses; also many baskets and flowers for fifty small tables.

Several Washington florists donated decorations for the Southern Relief Society charity ball at the Willard hotel this week. The affair created considerable demand for corsages.

The Washington Florists Co. advertises its removal from Thirteenth and F streets to 1408 H street about June 1. This will make this firm a neighboring competitor of Small, Blackistone, Marche and Shaffer.

Marche recently prepared a magnificent basket of orchids, all in water, as a gift from a foreign embassy to Mrs. Taft. This week Mr. Marche has a big decoration on hand at the Chevy Chase Country Club.

The Washington Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting February 6, when a paper on insects injurious to flowers was read and humorous Italian recitations were given.

Trade visitors here during the week included A. R. Jones, of Pennock-Meehan Co., and Sidney Bayersdorfer, both of Philadelphia. H. C. H.

Logan, O.—Anthony Toerner has purchased the business of I. Voris & Son, on South Mulberry street.

Muncy, Pa.—Harry E. Mills, formerly a grower of asters and gladioli, has sold his stock and left the business.

Eight Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists — those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists — has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

Conditions in the cut flower trade are on the whole satisfactory. We are getting steady winter weather, and sales are never particularly brisk when the temperatures hover around the zero mark. January was not a bad month; it might have been better, but was ahead of a year ago. Roses are off crop with all the growers and continue to realize excellent prices. Even short-stemmed stock has been making $5 to $6 per hundred. White varieties have gone more slowly than the colored ones. Beauties are quite scarce and bringing fancy figures. Richmonds are also in short supply. Killarneys are, of course, the leading roses, and the demand for them exceeds all others combined. The yellows continue in active demand, Ward being seen in the greatest numbers, but Hillingdon will be much in evidence a year hence.

Carnations of good quality are easily moved, but there is a surplus of the other grades, prices dropping as low as $1 per hundred in some cases. It is noted that White Enchantress is the leading white, and many doubt if White Wonder will displace it. Pink Delight is the most popular variety on the market, but the old Enchantress from some growers is fine. Violets are not overplentiful; they are opening slowly. Sweet peas are seen in unusual numbers and of grand quality. Prices on these are much lower. Pansies are fewer in number, but there is a good lot of such flowers as calendulas, marguerites, forget-me-nots, dimorphothecas and lupines.

Mignonette continues good, also antirrhinum. Some stocks are seen, but there is little call for them. There is a better supply of lilies, the Formosa being particularly good. Callas are good. Those having the Godfrey variety find a ready sale for them. Golden Spur narcissi continue in oversupply. There is also a heavy lot of Princeps, double Von Sion, Victoria and Emperor. Tulips are numerous, but La Reine and Thomas Moore are the favorites in a cut state. Valley is now all from new season's crop and is generally of good quality. Of gardenias there is an ample local supply, more than can be cleaned out. Cattleya Trianæ continues overabundant. There is quite a variety of other orchids now obtainable. Asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri, is selling well.

Plants are in better demand. A fine variety now is offered, including acacias, ericas, azaleas, boronias, cyclamens, Azalea mollis, lilacs, double cherries, metrosideros, bulbous plants in variety, and gardenias.

The Midwinter Exhibition.

Severe weather on the dates of the annual midwinter show cut it down sharply, but nevertheless there were some excellent exhibits. The most notable absentees were the rose men. They never make much of a display at the Boston shows, but on this occasion, with a good number of classes all carrying excellent money prizes, not a solitary exhibit was forthcoming. It is true, roses were in rather short crop, but the lowest prizes offered were equal to the market value of the flowers called for.

The carnation men, as usual, made a nice showing. For fifty assorted blooms S. J. Goddard led, followed by C. S. Strout. M. Sullivan won in the private gardeners' class for a mixed vase, also for twenty-five red and twenty-five light pink. C. S. Strout was first for fifty white, with White Wonder; S. J. Goddard second and third, with White Wonder and White Perfection. For fifty red, S. J. Goddard took first; A. A. Pembroke second, and James Wheeler third, all with Beacon. For light pink, S. J. Goddard won first with Pink Delight; C. S. Strout second, and S. J. Goddard third, with Gloriosa. Mr. Goddard was first for crimson with Fenn, for dark pink with Loris, and for yellow with a fine vase of Golden Ray. A. A. Pembroke had a handsome vase of his new light pink, Beverly, something in the way of Pink Delight but with larger flowers. F. J. Dolansky had fine vases of Beacon, White Enchantress and Pink Delight, in addition to splendid gardenias, also a nice lot of Cattleya Trianæ, one being almost pure white.

H. Huebner had a collection of antirrhinums of a new purely winter flowering race. The flowers were closely carried on the spikes, which were in the main distinct from the varieties commonly seen. W. S. Russell had a display of cut orchids and Harry Cole, gardener to Mrs. Oliver Ames, one of the finest vases of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora seen here in years.

For six Primula Kewensis Daniel Whyte, gardener to Winthrop Ames, was first, followed by Alex. McKay, gardener to E. A. Clark. For six Primula Sinensis M. Sullivan, gardener to Wm. Whitman, was first, followed by Joshua Lawson, gardener to E. J. Mitton. For six Primula stellata Mr. Sullivan was first, followed by Wm. Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner. For six Primula obconica Mr. Sullivan was first, Mr. McKay second, and Mr. Whyte third. For three azaleas Mr. Sullivan was first, and he also was first and second for two palms, first for six freesia and first for six Roman hyacinths. For three cyclamens Mr. Lawson was first and Wm. Thatcher second. The latter led for six polyanthus narcissi and was second for freesias and Roman hyacinths. Mr. Sullivan had a fine display of primulas in addition to those in the competitive classes. Alexander McKay was first for six Lorraine begonias, grand plants, which also won him a cultural certificate. Wm. Thatcher had some fine cactus flowering cinerarias, Mrs. E. M. Gill her usual interesting general display, and Knight & Struck a table of well grown Erica codonodes Veitchii, awarded honorable mention.

Various Notes.

Patten & Co., of Tewksbury, have a fine new crimson carnation of large size which they have named Dagmar. They are growing White Wonder, White Enchantress, White Perfection and Genevieve in whites. The latter received a silver medal at the Boston national show. They have some Dorothy Gordon, but will drop it. Beacon, Pink Delight and Gloriosa are all favorites with them. Benora will be grown in quantity next season.

James Wheeler says that May Day gives him more flowers than any other carnation, and opens quickly. He has good success with Beacon, White Enchantress, White Wonder, Enchantress, Pink Delight and White Perfection. He will plant 2,500 Benora next season. Princess Charming is also doing well. He has a fine second crop of antirrhinums coming in, and reports a great call for rooted cuttings.

A. A. Pembroke, of Beverly, reports a heavy sale for rooted cuttings of carnations, Pink Delight being in special demand. His carnations are all in solid beds, which he finds gives him many more cuttings than plants in raised benches. His new variety, Beverly, looks like a winner. Mr. Pembroke is now picking an average of 10,000 fine sweet peas daily, which go to the Flower Growers' Sales Co.

Jahn Bros., of East Bridgewater, have excellent Pink Delight and Beacon carnations, also fine mignonette and Freesia Purity.

Frank P. Putnam, among his high grade carnations, has superb Alma Ward and White Wonder. He is sending in a fine lot of the pretty Dimorphotheca aurantiaca just now.

J. Leach & Son, of North Easton, have 6,000 plants of their new light pink carnation, Pink Supreme. Some are in raised benches, and are much superior to those in solid beds. Next season all will be planted in benches. This carnation is of a beautiful shrimp pink color. Other varieties grown are Beacon, Lawson, Winsor, White Enchantress and White Perfection. The last named will be dropped. They have a superb lot of valley, and one small house was found full of freesia, which they find does well in flats containing five inches of soil.

James Nicol, of Quincy, one of our veteran chrysanthemum growers, is recovering from a broken arm, the result of a fall on an icy road.

Welch Bros. are always up to their ears in business when called on, but business so far this year has been the best ever, they say.

W. H. Tomlinson, of Dorchester, through the ever smiling W. H. Carr, one of the few remaining bachelor salesmen at the Boston Flower Exchange, is marketing an excellent grade of white and pink sweet peas, also Enchantress carnations, azaleas and excellent bulb stock in pans.

J. M. Cohen, at the Boston Coöperative Market, has superb wallflowers from W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro. W. T. Walke, of Salem, is sending splendid sweet peas and lilies.

A. F. Coolidge, of Watertown, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is having quite a call for his excellent Nephrolepis Scottii, cyclamens and Primula obconica.

With one notable exception, all of Thomas Pegler's shippers are now sending their supplies to the Flower Growers' Sales Co. Business with the company is good.

Thomas Roland is planting his new house at Revere, 50 x 600, with tomatoes, some 16,000 plants being used. Comet will be the leading sort, with a few Lister's Prolific.

At the next club meeting J. Otto Thilow, of Philadelphia, will deliver one of his famous stereopticon lectures. It will be novelty night and those having new carnations and roses would find this a grand opportunity to show their

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The market last week has been quite satisfactory, considering the weather. The scarcity of roses continues, but the cut is increasing day by day and much larger shipments of roses are expected this week. Carnations have cleaned up daily at satisfactory prices. Bulbous stock is now plentiful and of extra good quality. Sales have been about equal to receipts.

Valentine's day is expected to be "a little Christmas" and the buyers are placing advance orders on that basis. The prospect is that there will be plenty of stock of all kinds for this day, with the possible exception of roses.

Some fine Freesia Purity is now to be had for high class trade.

Various Notes.

Milford Parks, of Luna Park fame, is passing around the smokes. It's a girl and Pete Nichols, who operates the Superior Arcade flower stand, says

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade among the retailers has not been overly flourishing for the last ten days. There has been some funeral work daily, but other work is quiet. We are still having severe weather, the thermometer registering 11 degrees below zero one day last week. The days continue cloudy, which has shortened the rose and carnation crops. The carnations are showing the effects of the cloudy weather more than the roses, many of them being split and having weak stems. Some tulips of fair quality are to be seen. Hyacinths and Paper Whites are in demand. Jonquils are quite popular this year. Easter lilies are a little short. Sweet peas find a ready sale. Violets, valley and orchids are enough to go around. Pot plants are selling well, the supply consisting of bulbous stock, primulas, cyclamens, azaleas and lilacs.

Various Notes.

Albert Pittet is back from a two months' trip to Europe. He says that if we have any more winters like this one he is going over there to stay.

The Smith & Young Co. reports business improving at its salesrooms.

Four of A. Wiegand & Sons' force were confined to their homes by illness at one time last week.

Visitors last week were: Frank Farney, with M. Rice & Co.; Ira Clark, Greensburg, Ind.; E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co.; Sam Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros.; C. Deer, of Franklin, Ind.; H. E. Corby, of Anderson, Ind., and G. L. Huscroft, with Wm. Hagemann & Co.

Sidney Smith reports heavy sales on young geranium plants this year.

Charles Wheatcraft has been sending in some fine sweet peas.

Adolph Baur reports a heavy sale of their new red carnation, St. Nicholas. He states that they will be able to sell all that they can propagate.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE canners still are making a great to-do about the price of peas for seed.

OTTO WALTERS has bought the interest of J. L. Loebs in the Loebs Seed Co., Aberdeen, S. D.

THE farmers of three counties assembled at Forest, O., January 22, asked the legislature for a pure seed law.

THE Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., has extended its lease on its present building to September 1, 1916.

S. G. COURTEEN, commission merchant and seedsman at Milwaukee, is reported as planning the erection of a warehouse to cost $200,000 in what is known as the Reed street yard.

ANTON C. ZVOLANEK, the Bound Brook, N. J., sweet pea man, who is at Lompoc, Cal., to remain with his crops until July, was at Santa Barbara January 30 on a few days' outing.

D. J. TAMMINGA, seedsman in the market gardening section south of Chicago, has just finished a new store, one story, brick, 33x87 feet, which is being occupied in addition to the former one.

THE North Dakota Improved Seed Growers' Association was formed at a meeting at Fargo, N. D., January 25. The organization was formed in response to a call by Professor Rolley of the State Agricultural College.

THOMAS W. HOBART, the Sioux Falls seedsman, was one of the speakers at the recent meeting of the South Dakota State Horticultural Society, at Brookings. He was also invited to take a place on the program of the Minnesota State Horticultural Society.

W. W. BARNARD Co., Chicago, has removed to its new building, at 231 to 235 West Madison street, between Fifth avenue and Franklin street, where all the departments will be centered. The building has been remodeled and is ideally located for counter trade.

THE canners' convention is on this week at Rochester, with an extremely large attendance. The seed houses that cater to canners' trade are represented as usual, though few have any quantity of peas of last crop to offer. There is said to be no difficulty in getting orders for 1912 crops.

ACCORDING to the best source of commercial intelligence in Japan, the exports of lily bulbs of the several varieties to all parts of the world from Yokohama, between July 3, 1911, and January 9, 1912, were 55,899 cases. This practically covers the season of 1911. The shipments have been reported in detail in this column from week to week.

ONE of the most striking catalogue covers of the season is that of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles. It was produced by the three-color halftone process, showing the Comet aster in four colors on the front and the Brazilian watermelon on the back. The firm name appears in bright red. Most of the covers are too crowded; the strength of this one lies in its simplicity.

EUROPEAN districts in which biennials are grown for seed crops report alarmingly severe winter weather in January.

AS the result of my advertisement in The Review last season I sent another shipment of onion sets to England a few days ago.—D. J. Tamminga, Chicago.

TEXAS has become an important factor in the consumption of vegetable seeds. At the rate the industry has been growing, the state soon will be the kitchen garden of America.

THE February magazines carry even less seed trade advertising than last year. The best results have been found to come from the use of the farm papers and gardening publications.

ORDERS thus far in 1912, except in special cases, are not up to the record for the same period last year. The south has sent the usual volume of business, but the severe weather has held back orders from the greater part of the country.

WITH seeds as scarce as the talk would indicate, it is surprising how many surplus lists are in circulation. A few items are hard to find in quantity, of course, but pretty nearly everybody in the seed business has something to sell, just the same.

ONE of the new business getting plans of the Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn., has resulted in starting an information department, which is being advertised as in personal charge of William Kuelser, president of the company, who offers to answer any question on farm management.

HAVE you noticed how frequently the letters received from the trade now show the non-warranty and business terms, or a reference to them, printed below the date line?

WITH the leading varieties of cucumber offered at 23 cents, muskmelon grown especially for the seeds at 22 to 25 cents, watermelon at 12 cents, summer squashes at 21 cents and others at corresponding prices in the February surplus list of growers, it doesn't look as though there was any serious shortage of vine seeds.

the following reply was unanimously adopted by the institute:

"We are in receipt of your letter saying that you are going to send us a packet of seeds. May we beg of you to do nothing of the kind? Do not burden the United States mail with any such folly. You know this is a graft which benefits no one but the seedsman who grows the seeds. You are not performing your duty in sending them, but taking part in a fraud too patent to deceive anyone any longer. The only duty you have in this connection is to introduce and support a bill to put an end to this foolish attempt to deceive the farmer. If you do not introduce such a bill we will not vote for you again."

AMERICAN SWEET PEAS.

In a report of an address recently delivered by Wm. Cuthbertson, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, a recognized authority on sweet peas, there was the following:

"Speaking of American seed, he had no fault to find with its germinating power; he thought they could grow as good sweet pea seed in America as anywhere else in the world. It was the want of that high standard of fixity and purity which we associate with the best grown English stocks that he objected to. In short, there had been a want of reliability about American stocks of waved sweet peas in the past, and he was giving away no secrets when he said his American friends knew it, were anxious about it, and were taking steps to remedy it. Until they started to build up stocks from single homogonous plants, neither the Americans nor any one else would succeed. On the great American seed farms, where sweet pea crops followed sweet pea crops closely, they had the problem of volunteers to face; that is, plants from seed left in the soil from a previous crop. It was rather different from our problem of rogues. Sweet pea culture would be helped all around when the Americans gave us pure stocks. He hoped they would soon do so.''

PEA GROWING IN IDAHO.

The following comes from a newspaper correspondent at St. Anthony, Idaho, and will be read with interest by the seed trade:

''The pea industry of Idaho is now fully assured and every indication points to its being one of the most profitable as well as largest crops. Fremont county has taken the lead in the matter, but this year several other counties of the state will raise large quantities and it is expected that within a few years the crop will be fully established and that it will be one of the best crops for the farmers to raise.

''Ole K. Olson, of St. Anthony, should be given credit for the introduction of the crop into Idaho. Mr. Olson has grown a few seeds for many years and when he began farming in this county he was determined to prove the feasibility of the crop's production.

''In 1909 he attempted to interest several of the large eastern seed houses in the Idaho seed pea proposition, but

FLORISTS' REVIEW

When Writing Advertisers

You may not like our method of doing business; you may not like our style of advertising; you may not like our independence; and there may be other things about us you don't like. But what you like or dislike about us ought to have but little weight with your business judgment. The fact is that Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are positively the best produced today, and, after all, it's the goods you want above everything. It was not so long ago when it was common for a grower to buy from 1500 to 2000 lily bulbs in order to expect 1000 good plants. When Horseshoe Brand entered the field things took a change for the better. Florists soon learned that good bulbs could be had for a little more money, and that's why our business has grown. You need the best lily bulbs in your business—the real difference in value is in your favor—why not send us your order now?

Not How Cheap But How Good

RALPH M. WARD & CO.

12 West Broadway

NEW YORK

the houses scorned the idea of raising such a crop here. The farmers could not be persuaded to make the experiment. In fact, they all ridiculed the idea. But Mr. Olson was undaunted and during that year planted five acres on his own land. The yield was better than he had expected and the next year he had no difficulty in getting his neighbors to raise some also. Different seed houses became interested in a small way and sent in orders for small quantities.

"Last year 800 acres were planted to peas in Fremont county and the farmers were so delighted with the outcome that now 6,000 acres have been contracted for.

"During the last three years the peas have averaged a yield of forty-five bushels to the acre. The farmer is paid about $1.80 per bushel, making an income of about $81 per acre. The average cost of production is $19, thus leaving a net income to the farmer of $62.

"Of the peas that were raised the last season they have tested 100 per cent in germination. This is much higher than any of the eastern peas have ever tested and as a result many of the eastern seed houses have had men in Idaho during the winter attempting to contract for peas of the 1912 crop.

"Mr. Olson, who is handling by far the largest part of the crop, is dealing with the Jerome B. Rice Co., of Cambridge, N. Y., with a branch house at Detroit. Mr. Olson has just returned from a trip east and he reports the company as being exceptionally well pleased with the quality of the peas, and they say that they will take all that are raised here.

"Several large storehouses have been leased in St. Anthony to handle the crop during the coming year until the necessary places can be built by the companies.

"The pea crop is not at all severe on the soil, but, on the other hand, acts as a good fertilizer. The crop can be raised on the same land for several years and then wheat, beets or any other crop will do exceptionally well on the land as a rotation crop."

SEED TRADE IN TENNESSEE.

The following is from the Nashville American of January 28:

Shipping a carload of peas every day, to say nothing of the many other products handled, is the stunt the Cumberland Seed Co. is now pulling off, according to President and Manager F. C. Woods. As proof that this company is not confining its operations to peas alone, it might be stated that they handled fifty carloads of millet seed during the fall season.

The Cumberland Seed Co. is said to be the largest exclusive seed house in the south, and is now doing the largest business of its history.

"We are having a fine trade," said President Woods, "and have no complaint to make. Clover seed is very high, selling at from $12.50 to $14 a bushel. We bought 1,500 bushels of clover seed Tuesday."

In view of the fact that most houses have found peas to be scarce this season, most of those in the seed trade will agree with the reporter, that shipping a carload every day is some "stunt."

FARMERS DEMAND MORE MONEY.

A meeting of farmers was held in the court house at Easton, Md., February 6 to discuss the question whether the price of canned goods justifies the grower in demanding a higher price for his tomatoes. The farmers in Maryland evidently think that they should get more for their product than they

HUNTINGTON'S
ASTER SEED

Though they're pretty good seed now, they're not at their best in February.

Mr. Wide Awake Florist, would you rather work a day than think a minute? A word to the wise should be sufficient; we are growers.

The "ad" below was published in the August 31, 1911, issue of the Florists' Review.

A WORD ABOUT ASTER SEED

The proper time to talk aster seed is when the stock can be seen in bloom. About February first the buyer has to take the word of the catalogues in regard to the stock he is looking for.

Weather conditions here in Painesville have been just as unfavorable as elsewhere. Our asters are all strictly field-grown and without water. Steady use of the cultivator, our shading system and top feeding has given us a splendid crop. Below will be found a list of our favorites, with stem and flower measurements. We are prepared to convince the gentleman from Missouri if he will call, or we will be glad to send out a limited number of sample boxes of flowers. Enclose 50c to pay for packing and trouble. This will be deducted from the first seed order.

Lady Roosevelt, stem 30 in., flower 4 in.

Huntington's Giant Pink; shell pink sport from Lady Roosevelt; same tall, sturdy growth, flower more loosely built and much larger, stem 24-30 in., flower 4½-5½ in.

Non-Lateral White (branching), stem 24-30 in., flower 4 in.

Late Br. Mary Semple, purple, rose, lav., stem 16-22 in., flower 3½-4 in.

Crego, rose, purple, stem 18-20 in., flower 4½-6 in.

Crego, shell pink, lavender, stem 14-20 in., flower 4½-5½ in.

Vick's Rochester (Mikado Pink), stem 24 in., flower 4½-5½ in.

Huntington's Improved Mikado Rose, identical in all ways with Rochester. More rank in growth, bright rose, stem 24-30 in., flower 4½-6 in.

Lavender Gem and Snowdrift. Our strain of these cannot be beaten. Only three rogues taken from over 1,500 plants. They showed as high as 16 salable flowers to the plant. Stem 12-22 in., flower 2½-4 in.

We ship no flowers, only a few rogues going onto the Cleveland market, taken by Jones & Russell. They bring $2.50 per 100 on a 75c-$1.00 market.

Very good seed blocks of most of the special asters advertised last spring can be seen here, but those mentioned above are showing much the best results.

Write for my seed list, out about Feb. 1.

have in former years. Some 150 of them met in Centerville, Md., January 30, representing every section in Queen Anne county, to discuss means of forcing a higher price for tomatoes from packers. The Centerville report conveying this information continues: "Local packers have offered the growers 15 cents per basket, equivalent to $9.30 per ton. This is 2 cents more than was paid last year. The growers say this is not profitable, and ask 17 cents. J. Langrall & Bro., the Baltimore packers, erected a mammoth cannery in Centerville early last season. They say it will be impossible to give more than last season, but the farmers, representing many hundreds of acres, announce that they will stand firm, and unless the packers meet their demand, not a tomato shall be grown.

NEW YORK FLORISTS' CLUB.

By order of the executive committee of the New York Florists' Club the secretary has sent the following call to all the state organizations, urging upon them the importance of prompt action:

A CALL TO THE FLORISTS OF THE EMPIRE STATE.

We believe that the public interests and activities of the florists of New York state need consolidating through the formation of a state organization. You will agree with us in this if you will but stop long enough to give the subject a most superficial consideration.

The florists of the state are organized locally, but the florists are the only important group of the great family of agricultural interests not represented by a state association. It is true that we have never asked the state for anything, and therefore the need of state organization may not have been apparent. But the fact that we have not asked is not because we have not needed any help. Rather is this attitude due to the traditional independence of the florists. We do need help, and we should be in a position to ask assistance.

THE FIRST THING TO DO.

Plainly this is to effect an organization which shall represent the florists in matters legislative, in affairs commercial, in questions educational. In all these things the florists are vitally, personally, deeply interested.

This new organization, if effected, should not need to usurp the function of the clubs of the state in discussing questions of culture, of greenhouse management and general floricultural practice, but would concern itself only with affairs of state-wide importance under the three heads cited above. You will agree with us we have much need for an organization of this kind.

HOW SHALL WE GO AT IT?

Let each club appoint two delegates to attend a delegate conference to be held at the New York State College of Agriculture, Ithaca, N. Y. The purpose of this conference will be to effect an organization which shall properly represent the large floricultural interests of the state. This body of delegates shall be authorized to complete such an organization as in their wisdom deem appropriate, though each club may charge its personal delegates with such instructions as are deemed wise and fitting.

The Department of Horticulture of the New York State College of Agriculture offers the visiting delegates facilities for holding the meeting, and the members of the staff of the department will gladly aid the movement to the full extent of their ability.

ISSUANCE OF THE CALL.

This call is issued by the New York Florists' Club, not because it has any prior right to take the initiative, but because it is necessary that some one of the New York state clubs should start the movement.

Will you join the movement and notify us whom you have appointed as official delegate?

John Young, Sec'y.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is little change to record in the condition of the wholesale cut flower market during the last week. Another cold wave from the west arrived the day after the ground hog saw his shadow and the trade has settled down resignedly to another six weeks of winter temperature and the early advent of forty days of lenten dullness. In the meantime everyone is preparing for the early Easter and the plantsmen especially have a wonderful assortment on the way. Business with the retailers has improved, the worst January on record having added largely to the death rate, while the number of banquets, receptions and theater parties is on the increase as the days of sackcloth and ashes approach.

Begonias and Gloxinias

There is a scarcity of really first-class bulbs of Begonias this season, due to the unprecedented drought throughout Europe during the past summer, but the Specialist who has grown this stock for us for more than twenty years, having facilities for watering, has been able to supply us with bulbs almost as large as in normal seasons, while in quality they are fully up to our usual standard.

There has been no advance in price for this superior strain; you can buy cheaper but not better stock.

Prices have retrograded a little for American Beauties, the supply exceeding the demand. Other roses remain steady at last week's quotations. The lower grades are most in demand, the special stock moving slowly without concessions. The shipments of Killarney continue large and nearly all the rose stock arriving is of the finest quality. The new varieties find an immediate market at all times. Carnations are doing better and the 3-cent grade has advanced to 4 cents. Violets are overabundant. Street men were offering $1 per thousand for the week-end accumulations on Monday morning. For the best blooms the top seems to be 50 cents per hundred. Stock must be exceptionally good to command a higher figure. Gardenias do not go above $3 per dozen and the short-stemmed ones use the street for an outlet when the weather permits it. Lilies are not overabundant and prices have held firm to date at $10 per hundred for the best of them. Valley is unchanged. Daffodils and freesia almost flood the market and stock, especially of Purity freesia, is exceptionally fine. Sweet peas also are overabundant, except the long-stemmed grade. The low price of orchids is extraordinary at this time of the year and must be discouraging to growers. All the popular varieties are here in great abundance. The department stores are again advertising their sale at less than wholesale values.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's meeting Monday evening, February 12, promises an attractive program. President Manda has returned from his western trip. Chairman Hendrickson, of the exhibition committee, announces it as carnation night and says he has the promise of all the novelties of the season. The essay committee will have some interesting reminders of Bermuda and the Detroit convention and Richard Vincent, Jr., will deliver his stereopticon lecture on "The Sunny Southland." Chairman Rickards promises a special brew and collation, so an attendance of less than 100 members would not be creditable. Full particulars as to the silver jubilee March 23, at the Park Avenue hotel, will be given by the banquet committee and tables may be reserved. Monday afternoon, February 2, the club's members will bowl at Thum's alleys, as usual.

Roman J. Irwin has just returned from a western trip and says business has been encouraging.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers held its fourth annual banquet at Mouquin's, Thursday evening, February 1, and menu, decorations, attendance and enthusiasm broke all records. President Marquardt conducted the services with becoming dignity. The committee received much praise and the program of music, vaudeville and magic was away above the average. T. R. Pierson, of Tarrytown, made the principal address. The fraternal spirit was greatly in evidence, nearly every prominent plant grower being there, the few who were absent being confined to their homes by severe colds. All the ladies were provided with corsages of orchids. Harry Bunyard gave some interesting exhibits of fancy dancing and Julius Roehrs, Jr., assisted the magician. Secretary Siebrecht, Jr., told how to make banquets successful.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society will hold its annual dinner at English's hall, East Orange, Saturday evening, February 17. Wm. Reid, of Orange, N. J., is the secretary.

Wednesday evening, February 14, the Yonkers Horticultural Society will have its annual banquet. No one misses the Yonkers banquet who can get there. Will McDonald is the secretary.

The Greek-American annual ball will be held, as announced in these columns several weeks ago, Wednesday evening, February 28, at Terrace Garden, Fifty-eighth street and Lexington avenue. N. J. Lales is chairman of the committee.

A visit this week at the establishment of Anton Schultheis, College Point, L. I., found everything in "apple pie order." The stock of Easter plants is larger than ever and gives promise of high quality at the finish. Three sons of the proprietor are winning high honors at Cornell University and the eldest son is the able lieutenant of his father in the florists' business.

J. Austin Shaw.

Wertheimer Bros. have just won a case against the government in the court that has the final word on customs matters. February 2 they established the correctness of their claim as to the duty on certain ribbons known as mousseline bands.

Valentine Hammann, rose grower at Summit, was fatally injured in an automobile accident January 31. He was returning home from a dinner, riding in the car of a friend, when the car got beyond control on a hill. Mr. Hammann was taken to Overlook hospital in Summit, suffering with concussion of the brain and an injured spine.

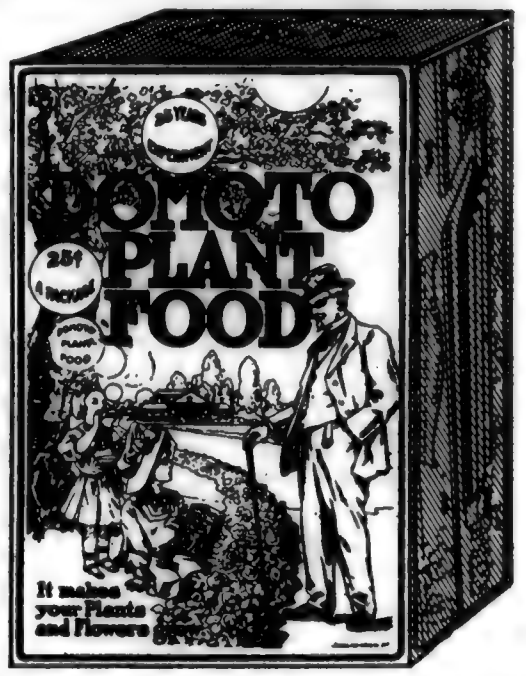
FRISCO A SHIPPING CENTER.

The shipping of cut flowers from San Francisco has become a large industry. Frisco flowers go up and down the coast from Los Angeles, or even San Diego, to Portland and all the cities of the north. They go east for many hundreds of miles and violets go regularly as far as Omaha and Kansas City. So large has the business of shipping violets become that the Wells-Fargo Express Co. recently undertook to introduce them in the east. Mrs. R. E. Darbee, who is said to be the pioneer in the business, supplied stock which the express company carried to all the larger eastern cities. It is said that the violets were salable when they reached New York city, and that they actually were sold by commission men and satisfactory returns made to the shipper, but thus far the business has not extended beyond the Missouri as a practical, every-day affair. The violets shipped from San Francisco are not counted, but are made into bunches, which vary in size and number of violets according to the supply of stock. This is the height of the season, and for the next two months a big business will be done. The variety grown is a single, and many of the gardeners have special strains of their own. For size of flower and length of stem, they are quite a different article from the greenhouse-grown stock of these.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Spring is here in splendid shape, and everything is lovely except that we are most awfully in need of rain. We have not had over one-half of the usual quantity and from present appearances there will be no further rainfall for some time. Stock of all kinds is plentiful, and for the first time since last fall we have some fancy roses to exhibit. Carnations are now at their best and, although the growers are not showing much of an inclination to put the prices down, they will have to do so in the near future owing to the excess of stock.



Violets by the million and narcissi and outside daffodils in any amount give the street hucksters, as well as the stores, plenty of cheap flowers to make an elegant showing. Many fruit blossoms are being sent into town and are proving popular with the flower buyers. Valley and orchids are in good supply, but are a little slow. Other lines of stock are about as usual, with nothing particular to mention except business, which is rather quiet at present.

Various Notes.

In their efforts to stimulate trade several basket men recently reduced the price of violets, which fact was resented by other hucksters in the neighborhood of the Chronicle building. A free fight ensued and hundreds of bunches were trampled on the sidewalk and three Italians taken in charge by the police before quiet was restored.

Probably the oldest florist on the Pacific coast died in Alameda, Cal., January 26, aged 89 years. She was Mrs. Julia Brock and, although she had not been in business in San Francisco for over twenty-five years, there are several well known retailers who learned the trade in her store, which at that time was located on Commercial street, then one of the most popular retail thoroughfares.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Business during the last week has been none too good. The brighter weather of the last few days is bringing out carnations in greater numbers and there is now rather an oversupply of these flowers. Violets, both home-grown and from California, are quite plentiful. Bulbous stock of most varieties is abundant and is not moving any too fast. Retailers and growers alike are hoping for a brisker demand to move the surplus stock.

Various Notes.

T. V. Wilson, at Bryn Mawr, is entirely renewing the interior of one of his large houses, preparatory to planting it with cucumbers.

H. E. Rees, of Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, was a visitor here on Sunday, January 28. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week was entirely satisfactory to all. Graduation exercises at the high schools, as usual, created a demand for stock, bright colors in particular. Carnations are plentiful, but the standard of prices is maintained, excepting in the lower grades. Roses are equal to demand, but the crop is being gradually shortened. Spring flowers are in profusion; the bright, mild weather will soon bring them from the outside. The call for rose bushes and shrubs is unusually early this spring, and the out-of-town trade is keeping the seed and plant houses busy.

Various Notes.

It has been said of champions in different sports that after being defeated "they never come back." This is entirely untrue concerning James Forbes as a champion pool shark. In a match game that took place recently between S. R. Lundy, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago; J. A. Mullen, of Julius Roehrs Co., and James Forbes, the latter certainly played in old championship style. It is claimed by all who watched the game that he is not a "has-been," but is still open to meet all comers.

Portland seems to be behind the times compared with other cities. What we need is a florists' club where the employers, employees and growers can get together and discuss topics of interest. So far, all efforts along this line have brought little response. Who will start the ball rolling? It will be beneficial to the florists as well as to the flower buying public; it will place the business on a higher plane of commercialism, so let's get together and do something. E. R. C.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

With our warm weather of the last few weeks in mind, it seems impossible to realize that there is such a thing as the zero weather which the east and parts of the west have been having lately. It is no unusual thing here to see roses blooming outside in some sheltered nook, and some of the earliest trees, such as the pussy willow, have already begun to open their buds. Many of the bulbs are pushing up through the ground and some of the hyacinths are beginning to bud on the lawns.

Business conditions are about as last reported, but stock seems to be more plentiful than at that time, though carnations, roses, etc., are still scarce. There is scarcely any valley to be seen, as none of the growers care to force any quantity, with the market uncertain and prices none too good. Tulips and Dutch hyacinths are arriving in small quantities, but the demand far exceeds the supply. Potted plants have moved slowly since the holidays, and those who were so unfortunate as to have primulas, cyclamens and other blooming plants left over at Christmas are still carrying them, with little prospect of unloading at this time.

The Market.

Though on some days it has taken quite a little hustling on the part of the wholesalers to clean up, there has been practically no surplus of stock and at the time of writing business has picked up considerably, and all lines, with the possible exception of violets, meet with an encouraging demand. As to the violets, one wholesaler, who had a big lot of stock that looked like piling up on him, cleaned it out at 15 cents the dozen bunches. A touch of spring is given by the appearance of the outdoor daffodils, Dutch hyacinths and other bulbous stock. The dry weather, though against some flowers, is really in favor of these where the soil is well fed and irrigated. As to roses and indoor carnations, little need be added to the last report on these. An abundance of good funeral work has helped clean up in all lines.

The shortage noted in sprays of Asparagus plumosus continues and this has led to a good demand for adiantum. Growers are reporting a good harvest on this fancy green. The demand for plants is not great; neither is the supply. It seems that if some of the pretty little plants of Primula obconica and other stock that one sees at the greenhouses were shown more freely at the retail stores, the demand would be stimulated. Orchids continue plentiful, but Valentine's day will probably find the bulk of Cattleya Trianæ past its best here, though northern growers say they will have a good supply. The weather continues perfect for sightseers and tourists, but nurserymen, seedsmen and all "native sons" want rain badly.

Various Notes.

Charles Brazee has about 2,000,000 bulbs of various kinds planted and to be planted at his famous bulb grounds at Wilmington. The writer never saw anything more promising looking than his daffodils, which will probably be in flower by the time these notes are printed. Six, seven and more shoots to a bulb are not uncommon. Mr. Brazee believes in feeding, and plenty of it. The whole of his immense cut will be handled by the Los Angeles Flower Market.

L. J. Stengel, of 261 North Johnston street, is an old-timer in the business, having established his present place in 1874. He has a fine stock of pines, ferns and eucalyptus, all in the hundreds of thousands and in the finest condition, but says trade is a little slow on account of the dry weather.

C. C. Terbush reports a falling off in business since Christmas. He has a fine stock of pot roses ready when the rain comes.

Howard & Smith have their new catalogue ready and the work in it is magnificent. Seldom have finer halftones been used in catalogue work. E. Howard is starting on another trip to Mexico in the interest of the Doheney collection. He will first go to El Paso, Tex., where a couple of carloads of stock have been shipped, to be used in beautifying some of Mr. Doheney's business property there. A field of del-

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

A NEW frost-proof storage and packing cellar is in use this season by the Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn. It cost $5,000.

ROCHESTER is proud of the Ellwanger & Barry establishment and the Post-Express of that city devoted a full column of its issue of January 29 to a review of the firm's 1912 catalogue.

EARL M. WILSON, for the last four years advertising manager of Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., Louisiana, Mo., has resigned to accept a position on the advertising staff of the Curtis Publishing Co., of Philadelphia. His headquarters will be in Chicago.

AT E. S. Welch's Mount Arbor nursery a carrier system is being installed in their big storage plant, which will be a valuable addition to the equipment. By the use of the carrier system trees and boxes can be transported from one part of the plant to another, and transferred to the cars. The system is being installed by the Richards-Wilcox Mfg. Co., Aurora, Ill.

A NURSERY company with a paid up capital of $58,000 is to be established immediately at Willow, Cal. The chief promoters and stockholders are L. C. Rice & Son, nurserymen of Los Angeles, and W. R. Chesley and F. H. Griswold, of Willows. The company is to incorporate with a capital stock of $100,000, and with headquarters in Willow. A site has been secured four miles from town.

AT the meeting of the Tennessee State Nurserymen's Association, at Nashville, January 26, the full program of which appeared in this column last week, the following officers were elected: President, E. W. Chatten, Winchester; vice-president, W. W. Twitty, Taft; secretary-treasurer, Prof. G. M. Bentley, Knoxville; sectional vice-presidents, Charles Pennington, Rutherford, west Tennessee; Joe Webb, Smithville, middle Tennessee; A. I. Smith, Knoxville, east Tennessee.

THE PLANT QUARANTINE BILL.

January 15 Representative Simmons introduced in the House of Representatives the bill prepared by Prof. S. J. Hunter at the request of and approved by the nurserymen's organizations to cover the subject of federal inspection and plant quarantine. The bill is as follows:

A BILL

To regulate the importation and interstate transportation of nursery stock, to enable the Secretary of Agriculture to appoint a Federal Horticultural Commission and to define the powers of this commission in establishing and maintaining quarantine districts for plant diseases and insect pests, to permit and regulate the movement of fruits, plants, and vegetables therefrom, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Federal Horticultural Commission shall be established with the powers and for the purposes hereinafter defined.

Sec. 2. That this Federal Horticultural Commission shall consist of the Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture, two members from the Bureau of Plant Industry, and two members from the Bureau of Entomology. This Commission shall be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture. The Solicitor of the Department of Agriculture shall be Chairman, and a Secretary shall be elected annually from the commission.

Sec. 3. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to import or offer for entry into the United States from any foreign country any nursery stock unless and until a permit shall have been issued therefor by the Federal Horticultural Commission, under such conditions and regulations as the said Commission may prescribe, and unless such nursery stock shall be accompanied by a certificate of inspection in manner and form as required by the aforesaid commission from the proper official of the country from which the importation is made to the effect that the stock has been inspected and found free from injurious plant diseases and insect pests; Provided, That the Horticultural Commission shall issue the permit for any particular importation of nursery stock when the conditions and regulations as prescribed in this section shall have been complied with: Provided further, That this section shall not be construed as applying to plants or plant products solely intended for and adapted to use as food, but to nursery stock or other plants or plant products for propagation; Provided further, that nursery stock may be imported for experimental or scientific purposes, without the certificate of inspection or the permit of the Horticultural Commission hereinbefore required, upon such conditions and under such regulations as the said commission may prescribe; and provided further, That nursery stock imported from countries where no official system of inspection for such stock is maintained, may be admitted upon such conditions and under such regulations as the Horticultural Commission may prescribe.

Sec. 4. That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury promptly to notify the Federal Horticultural Commission of the arrival of any nursery stock at ports of entry; that the person, firm, or corporation receiving such stock at port of entry shall, immediately upon entry and before such stock is delivered for shipment or removed from the port of entry, advise the Federal Horticultural Commission, or the proper State or Territorial Official in the State or Territory to which such nursery stock is destined, of the name and address of the consignee, the nature and quantity of stock it is proposed to ship and the district and country where grown; that no person, firm, or corporation shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier transport or receive for transportation, any nursery stock imported into the United States from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia, into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia without notifying the Federal Horticultural Commission, or the proper State or Territory Official in the State or Territory to which such nursery stock is destined, immediately upon the delivery of the said stock for shipment and before transportation is begun, of the name and address of the consignee, of the nature and quantity of stock it is proposed to ship, and the country and district where the same was grown.

Sec. 5. That no person, firm, or corporation shall import or offer for entry into the United States any nursery stock unless the case, box, package, crate, bale, or bundle thereof shall be plainly and correctly marked to show the general nature and quantity of the contents, the country and district where the same was grown, the name and address of the shipper, owner, or person shipping or forwarding the same, and the name and address of the consignee.

Sec. 6. That no person, firm, or corporation shall ship or deliver for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier accept for transportation or transport from one State or Territory or the District of Columbia into another State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any such imported nursery stock, the case, box, package, crate, bale, or bundle whereof is not plainly marked so as to show the nature and quantity of the contents, the name and address of the consignee, and the country or district where such stock was grown.

Sec. 7. That the Federal Horticultural Commission be, and is hereby, authorized to make such rules and regulations as may be necessary for carrying out the purpose of this Act.

Sec. 8. That whenever, in order to prevent the introduction from any foreign country into the United States of any tree, plant or fruit disease, or of any injurious insect, new or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States, the Horticultural Commission shall determine that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of nursery stock or of any class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, and seeds from a country where such disease or insect infestation exists, it shall promulgate such determination, specifying the country and district, and the nursery stock or the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds, which, in the opinion of the Commission, should be excluded, and, following the promulgation of such determination by the said Commission and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by it, the importation of nursery stock or of the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants or seeds specified in the said promulgation, from the country and district therein named, regardless of the use for which the same is intended, is hereby prohibited, and until the withdrawal of the said promulgation by the said Commission, and notwithstanding that such nursery stock, fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds be accompanied by a certificate of inspection from the country of importation, no person, firm, or corporation shall import or offer for entry into the United States from any foreign country specified in such promulgation any of the nursery stock or of the class of fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds named therein, regardless of the use for which the same is intended. Provided, That before the Federal Horticultural Commission shall promulgate its determination, that it is necessary to forbid the importation into the United States of the articles named in this section, it shall give a public hearing on the question, at which hearing any party in interest may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney.

Sec. 9. That the Federal Horticultural Commission is authorized and directed to quarantine any State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or any portion thereof, when it shall determine the fact that a dangerous plant disease or insect infestation new or not theretofore widely prevalent or distributed within and throughout the United States exists, in such State or Territory, or the District of Columbia; and the said Commission is directed to give notice of the establishment of such quarantine to common carriers doing business in or through such quarantined area, and shall publish in such newspapers in the quarantined area as it shall select notice of the establishment of quarantine; that no person, firm, or corporation shall ship or offer for shipment to any common carrier, nor shall any common carrier receive for transportation or transport, nor shall any person, firm, or corporation carry or transport from any quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, any nursery stock or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds, except as hereinafter provided; that it shall be unlawful to move, or allow to be moved, any nursery stock, or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from any quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory or the District of Columbia, in manner or method or under conditions other than those prescribed by the Federal Horticultural Commission; that it shall be the duty of the Horticultural Commission to make and promulgate rules and regulations which shall permit and govern the inspection, disinfection, certification, and method and manner of delivery and shipment of nursery stock, or any fruits, vegetables, bulbs, plants, or seeds specified in the notice of quarantine hereinbefore provided, and regardless of the use for which the same is intended, from a quarantined State or Territory or the District of Columbia, or quarantined portion thereof, into or through any other State or Territory, or the District of Columbia; and the said Commission shall give notice of such rules and regulations as hereinbefore provided in this section for the notice of the establishment of quarantine. Provided, That before the Federal Horticultural Commission shall promulgate its determination that it is necessary to quarantine any State, Territory, district, or portion thereof, under the authority given in this section, it shall give a public hearing on the question, at which hearing any party in interest may appear and be heard, either in person or by attorney.

NELSON'S FORCES CONFER.

The forces of Swain Nelson & Sons Co., with nurseries at Glenview, Ill., and general offices at Chicago, held their annual meeting Saturday, February 3, at Chicago. Present were the heads of the bookkeeping, advertisement and drafting departments, the sales force, the superintendent and nursery foremen. The president, S. G. Nelson, gave a brief report regarding the business in general, showing that as a result of increasing demand the nursery again has been enlarged by the acquisition of fifty acres of new land. The secretary, A. E. Nelson, spoke about several innovations and experiments which are soon to be tried. It was decided as often as possible during the year to hold meetings in order to bring the salesmen and office force in better contact with the nursery foremen. Orders booked are considerably ahead of preceding years.

After discussing the business a banquet was given at the Hamilton Club and a visit to the Cort theater followed.

Herkimer, N. Y.—One of W. D. Snell's boilers gave out during the mild spell preceding Christmas and he says that Giblin, the boiler man of Utica, made a record in delivery and setting up a new boiler in three days, thus saving the stock, which otherwise might have been ruined.

Carnation Novelties

Did you see "Wodenethe" at Detroit? If you did, you know that it has easily established its position as the best white, and also won the Sweepstakes over all other varieties.

The "knocker" might tell you this variety is not free enough to be grown as a commercial flower.

"Seeing is believing," so come and see it growing for yourself. This is all we ask.

We can still quote February delivery on "Wodenethe" and "Brooklyn," at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was quite a fair volume of business last week, several large social functions and a number of weddings helping to round out a satisfactory week. One of the noticeable features of this season's business has been the growing favor into which orchids, gardenias and others of the higher priced blooms are coming. The time is not far past when these were such a rarity in the Providence market as to be conspicuous, whereas now their absence has become equally pronounced. Prices ranged about normal, with a fair quantity of everything seasonable.

Various Notes.

Edward Edwards, for several years engaged in the grape growing and market gardening business at Newport, has accepted a position as gardener for Dr. McBurnie at Stockbridge, Mass.

Charles Johnston was taken to the East Side hospital last week, suffering from a partial loss of the use of his lower limbs.

Joseph Kopelman spent several days in Boston last week on business.

Macnair has replaced the large plate glass window that was blown out of his store by the heavy wind recently.

Miss Florence Willard, of the Hope Greenhouses, has just purchased a large number of gardenia plants from Albert Holscher.

Extensive alterations and additions are being made to the seed store of W. S. Pino, corner of Washington and Eddy streets.

Daniel J. Coughlin, of Newport, was called to Groton, Mass., recently by the death of his sister.

William E. Chappell has had several decorative jobs recently for Masonic gatherings.

The J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, is making large daily shipments of roses to the New York market.

Eugene McCarron has been busy the last month, having had a number of wedding decorations and considerable social work.

Saturday Johnston Bros. had one of the largest wedding orders ever given in this city, consisting entirely of orchids, gardenias, lily of the valley and maidenhair fern.

Peter S. Byrnes, of Wickford, was in the city last week and reports having had a good business all winter.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

A pleasant change has come o'er the scene and we are now enjoying temperatures as much above zero as we have lately suffered below. Stock still is scarce, but what there is is good, except Beauties, and the less said about them the better. Nothing seems to satisfactorily take the place of Beauties, however, which appears somewhat strange, especially with cattleyas listed at half the price of the former flower.

W. J. Jones, the orchid specialist at the Dale Estate, has a seedling now flowering for the first time, to which has been given the name Cattleya Dugganianum, in honor of T. W. Duggan, the present mayor of the town. Cattleya Dugganianum is a cross between Cattleya Mossiæ and Harrisoniæ and partakes much of the latter in shape of flower and color, but is much broader in sepal and petals, the lip being well open and having a large blotch of bright amethyst and yellow running well into the throat, with a white margin. POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held in this city January 24. A good turnout resulted in a most interesting meeting.

The society had as its guests Joseph Scott and M. F. Ross. Mr. Scott gave an excellent talk on the Detroit show. His descriptions of the many new varieties shown were so vivid that one could almost imagine himself at the exhibition.

A fine crimson seedling carnation was shown by Scott Bros., of Elmsford, N. Y. After careful examination by the society's committee on seedlings, a certificate of merit was awarded it.

After adjournment, the remainder of the afternoon was spent in bowling.

In the evening the annual banquet was held at Nelson House. The principal speakers were Mr. Scott, who represented the Tarrytown society; Mr. Walworth and R. E. Coons. The musical program was ably rendered by Chas. H. Hickok and Frank Scofield. Several solos, which deserve more than passing mention, were rendered by Mr. Chaundy, of this city. H. G. C.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

The Market.

We are having another spell of zero weather. We have had the coldest weather and more of it this winter than any time for fifteen years. Coal bills are high and flowers are scarce. Roses are off crop, so there are not nearly enough to go around. Carnations are more plentiful, but there are not quite enough of these. Business has been excellent at times, but poor at other times.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons will have to move one house at the south of the range, in order to allow Bell street to be opened up. A street car line will be built on this street and for the present will end right at the greenhouse. This will be a great convenience, as well as profitable for them. This firm is short of roses and carnations, especially roses.

The Blackman Floral Co. is building two new houses. Progress would be more rapid if it were not for the cold weather. Flowers are scarce and they have to buy considerable quantities from others.

Miss Nellie Goodge is cutting some excellent carnations on good, long stems. Her varied stock is in good shape and doing well. It has been reported that her place is for sale, but she denies the rumor. When she is ready to sell the sale will be made quickly, as there are several florists here ready to buy the greenhouses and the five acres of land. The place is valuable, being just at the entrance to Oak Hill cemetery.

Louis Fritsch has been cutting a nice lot of carnations each week. He has his new houses about completed.

Henry Seymour has been cutting a lot of carnations, but has had to buy quite a good many lately.

Royston & Fenton are still short of roses.

Austin Wallace had some trouble in keeping up steam enough on the night of February 3, when the temperature went to 6 degrees below zero, but he managed to keep from freezing up. His carnations are looking fine and are full of buds. E. L. F.

NOW IS THE TIME TO CONSIDER

CHRYSANTHEMUM

REQUIREMENTS FOR 1912

It is unnecessary to spend much time and money in setting forth the merits of our products. Our past introductions have (as every florist knows) been of the highest grade.

Our 1911 Novelties were the best offered last year.

Our 1912 Novelties are unequaled by any others.

Ask for our Catalogue. Send your order early and we will do the rest.

LINCOLN, NEB.

At the annual meeting of the Nebraska State Florists' Society, held in this city, the following officers were elected: President, Irvin Frey, of Lincoln; vice-president, J. W. Lawson, of York; secretary, Lewis Henderson, of Omaha; treasurer, J. E. Atkinson, of Pawnee City. Trustees, C. H. Green, of Fremont; Edward Williams, of Grand Island; W. E. Davidson, of Holdrege.

An increase of $200 in the state fair premiums was recommended, making a total of about $700 offered for flowers and plants.

After the meeting the annual banquet was held in the Lindell hotel and was largely attended, plates being laid for about 100 guests. C. H. Green, of Fremont, was toastmaster, and the responses were numerous, able and entertaining. Lewis Henderson, Sec'y.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Southampton Horticultural Society was held in the Memorial hall February 1, with President U. S. Ager in the chair.

The chairman of the show committee reported that the date of the summer show had been fixed for July 24 and 25.

Two new members were elected, W. H. Malcolm and Louis Ginnochia.

The members and lady friends were treated to a highly interesting lecture on "Old-fashioned Garden Flowers," by W. H. Malcolm. Mr. Malcolm was rather handicapped in not being able to show his fine collection of pictures of old English gardens. The meeting was held in the afternoon and the hall could not be sufficiently darkened to allow the pictures to be clearly seen on the screen. The lecturer was heartily thanked for his instructive discourse. He has kindly promised to show the pictures at the next meeting, under more favorable conditions.

William McLeod, Cor. Sec'y.

Mishawaka, Ind.—Larry Kuhn, formerly a vegetable grower at 611 North Charlotte street, is now out of the business.

East Liverpool, O.—Albert Logston, a farmer in the Hookstown district, is building a greenhouse in which to grow vegetables for the market.

The Market.

The continued cold weather is affecting business, especially the counter trade, as it is entirely too cold for flowers to be worn on the street. Roses are the only flowers that are scarce, but it is impossible to take care of the orders for them any day. Everything else is plentiful and bulb stock is coming in larger quantities and better quality every day. This is the season for variety. One can buy almost anything he can think of, except chrysanthemums. Several nice social affairs last week helped some, but aside from that, trade was quiet.

Various Notes.

Edw. McCallum made a week-end run to Cleveland to visit their store in that city.

P. J. Demas is quite enthusiastic about his new venture, the Nicolodeon, which he says is coming up to his expectations.

E. C. Reineman, who has been confined to his home for the last month with rheumatic trouble, is convalescing.

T. P. Langhans has been putting in his spare time laying out his vegetable garden, on paper, for next spring. He talks about it with so much enthusiasm you can almost smell the onions growing.

Fred Burki is one of the automobile enthusiasts. He knows an automobile almost as well as a rose, and that is saying something.

E. C. Ludwig is distributing lead pencils as an advertisement. It's a bad day when he is not hunting out something.

The A. W. Smith Co. had three men on the sick list last week, among them Earl Tipton. Mrs. Tipton was recently operated on at the hospital. All are on the mend.

Miss E. B. Maxwell, of Wilkinsburg, has the sympathy of her friends in the loss of her sister, who died suddenly last Sunday night.

Miss A. L. Wells, of A. L. Wells & Co., Steubenville, O., who has been identified with the cut flower business for years, severed her connection with that firm February 1. The business will be continued by Miss Jane McDowell, who was the other member of the old firm.

The South Side Trust Co., receiver for South View Floral Co., will sell the greenhouses, land, horses, wagons, etc., at a public sale February 21.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has just completed a model orchid house, 35 x 200 feet. This company has been having great success with orchids this year, but has even greater expectations for next year, when it can grow them under more suitable conditions.

Hoo-Hoo.

Athens, Ga.—The Athens Floral Co. completed an additional greenhouse last fall, but has not been able to meet the demand this winter and will put up another house in the spring.

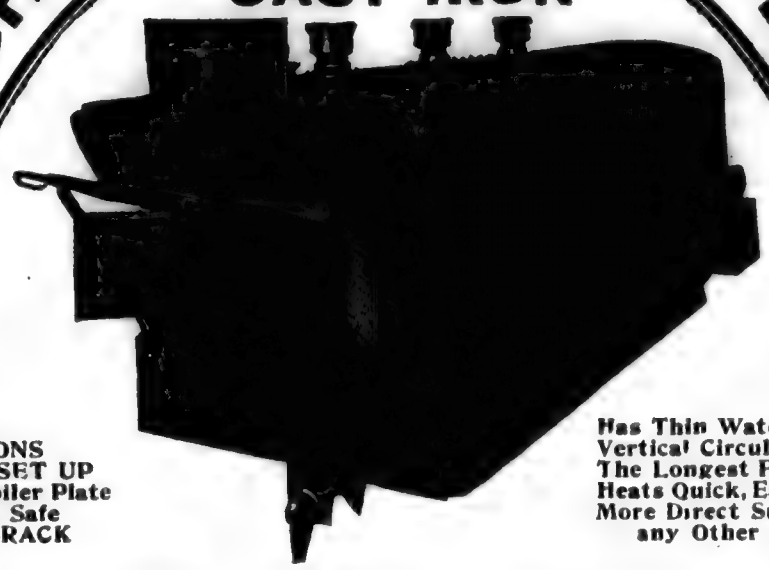
Greenhouse Heating.

THE HIGHEST POINT.

Regarding the inquiry of H. P. S., on page 86 of The Review for January 25, we wish to state that for years we used hot water on our place, until the range got too large or the fall on our place gave out; then we installed a steam plant, but at that time we had in mind, as all other greenhouse men seem to have, the idea that the highest point in a water system should be at the farther end of the main, together with the expansion tank. We gave the problem a great deal of thought and always had more or less trouble with it. Later we started a plant in another town. We drew plans and arranged the highest point of the entire system at the boiler, or as near it as possible, together with the expansion tank three feet above the highest point in the system. We did this more for experimental purposes than anything else.

This place was started with two greenhouses 100 feet long by twenty and twenty-four feet wide, with a main and fall of one inch to every ten feet, under the ridge to the farther end; then we gave the same fall back to the boiler on the returns, this being the same grade that we use in steam heating. While we know this is against the average heating expert's argument, we have never seen better results. We can heat a house at least as quickly as with steam.

If the above directions are carried out on any hot water plans, the results must prove entirely satisfactory. We had a florist friend who was all tied up, last fall, with his heating plant. We went at his request and planned the same scheme for him. He has had no trouble since. J. L. O'Quinn & Co.



CAPACITY OF MAIN FLOW.

How many 2-inch returns will a 2-inch flow feed, and how many 2-inch returns will a 2½-inch flow feed?

M. B.

The number of returns which can be fed by a main depends upon the length of the coils as well as upon the amount of elevation above the boiler. The higher they are elevated, the greater will be the rapidity of the circulation and the smaller the size of the main that will be needed. As a rule, a 2-inch main will answer for 200 to 250 square feet of radiation if the pipes are 100 to 150 feet in length. In using this estimate, the surface of the main should be counted in as radiating surface. Thus, supposing that there is a 2-inch overhead main running through a house 100 feet long, it could be used to supply two or three 2-inch returns. In a 150-foot house it would still be able to supply two 2-inch returns if they are four or five feet above the heater. A 2½-inch flow pipe will carry 400 to 450 square feet of radiation, or nearly twice

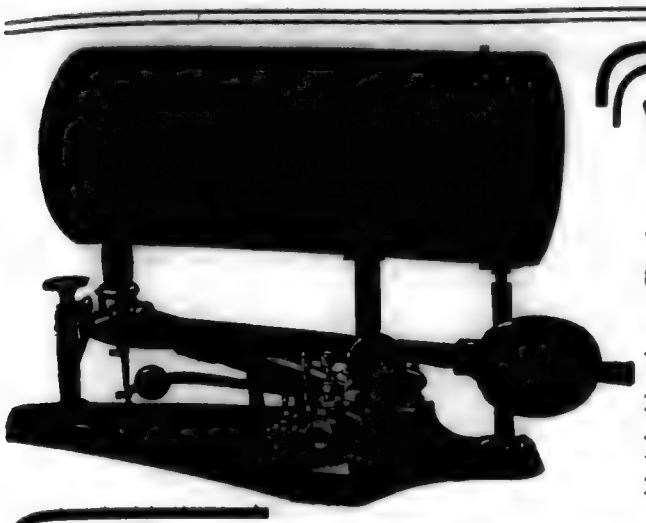
Gentlemen:-

Your new Kroeschell Boiler is heating 15,000 sq. ft. of glass, and it would take care of 5000 ft. more. We can maintain any temperature from 55 degrees to 70 degrees and have had no trouble to keep proper temperatures even in the coldest weather.

Your boiler has given entire satisfaction, and we use gas for fuel. We are more than pleased especially with your piping plan, which, in our opinion, is perfect. We have almost 45,000 sq. ft. of glass and use three (3) boilers.

We can heat the 15,000 ft. connected to the KROESCHELL boiler with 25% less gas than used with either of the CAST IRON boilers, and with a great deal more satisfaction. We shall be glad to have any prospective customer inspect our new range



Yours very truly,

TWO VEGETABLE HOUSES.

I have a greenhouse 24x100 and thirteen and one-half feet high to the ridge. It contains twenty-two lines of 2-inch pipe and one 4-inch feed pipe. Will this piping furnish enough heat to grow cucumbers, roses or tomatoes? There is a generator attached. I intend to build an additional house, 30x100. How many lines of 2-inch pipe will be needed to grow parsley or lettuce in this house? Where can I obtain reliable information in regard to the growing of tomatoes and cucumbers? I am located in northwestern Illinois. E. C. S.

As to the present house, 24x100, a good deal will depend upon the height of the coils above the top of the boiler. There is no reason why the house can not be heated by means of the piping described, if it is well arranged and is well above the boilers. For the house 30x100 feet, to be used for growing lettuce, etc., it will be a good plan to put in three 2½-inch overhead flows and twelve 2-inch returns. Place one flow on each plate and connect each with four 2-inch returns. The other flow should be about two feet below the ridge and the returns should be distributed under the benches, or in the aisles if solid beds are used.

LOS ANGELES NOTES.

phiniums in full bloom, at the firm's nursery at Montebello, is a sight worth going a long way to see, and fully justifies their claim that their strain is "everblooming."

A. Blomquist, of the Baird Park Nursery, is now alone in the business, his son, owing to an attack of asthma, having to leave. Stock looks well here, but business has been a little slow since the New Year.

Jack D'Ortignac has opened a flower stand in the Alexandrian hotel lobby, where he has made a creditable start. He has again shown his good judgment in placing Mrs. Dolphin in charge; or perhaps it would be more correct to say he was fortunate in securing this lady's aid in his new enterprise.

Tucked away on one of the hills on the way to South Pasadena, the Yokohama Nurseries grow quite a lot of good stock and K. Hiraiyumi is a busy man. Good palms, citrus and rose stock are his specialties and all are well grown, creditable stock.

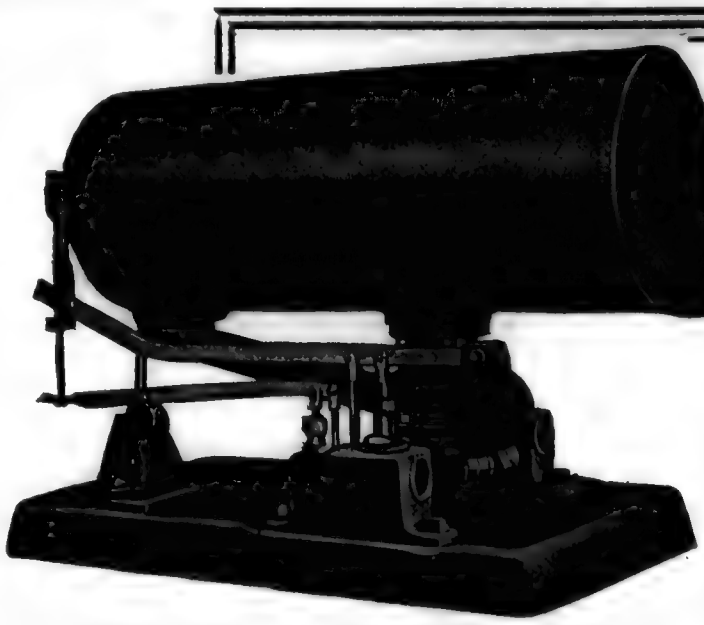
The H. N. Gage Co.'s daffodils are now in full cut and are arriving in excellent shape from the Hollywood place. Everything in stock is plentiful, Mr. Gage says, but the good demand cleans it all up daily; hence the smile.

All hands are kept busy at the Los Angeles Flower Market to move the increasingly large amount of stock now arriving from the firm's growers. C. Morton reports business keeping up remarkably well, with indications of a most successful spring business.

Morris Goldenson is handling a high grade of orchids now and reports business excellent.

A. F. Borden says his January business made that of last year look like the proverbial 30 cents.

Big business at receptions and parties is the report from the Angelus Flower Shop. Some beautiful brass-work vases here help materially to show off the fine flowers and plants handled.



Business at the Freeman-Lewis store is reported as picking up well.

Wright's Flower Shop has been exceptionally busy with funeral work and receptions and the trade at the store has been fine.

Funeral work still keeps the help at the establishment of the Redondo Floral Co. on the jump. Albert Knopf says he has about 30,000 bulbs of Freesia Purity planted and looking fine.

Among the visitors this week was Fred Sperry, formerly of Vaughan & Sperry, Chicago. He may locate here permanently. It is to be hoped he will, as there is room here for men of his type. J. J. Karins, of the Henry A. Dreer corporation, Philadelphia, is also here on his annual visit; also A. J. Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., Milwaukee, Wis.; J. Seulberger, of Oakland; John Morley, superintendent of parks, San Diego, and D. MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., San Francisco.

DES MOINES, IA.

Saturday evening, February 3, James S. Wilson, Jr., second son of Mr. and Mrs. James S. Wilson, was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Johnston, of Eagle Lake, Minn. The marriage took place before a bank of palms and Easter lilies, over which was a canopy of white bells and smilax. Miss Clara Wilson, sister of the groom, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the bride and groom, unattended, took their places. Immediately following, Miss Perle Fulmer sang "As the Dawn," after which the beautiful ring service was read by Rev. H. E. Van Horn. At the close of the ceremony, Alex. Wilson sang, "Love Me and the World Is Mine."

Mr. Wilson is associated with his father in the Wilson Floral Co., of this city. He and his bride left at once for a short visit with Mrs. Wilson's parents at Eagle Lake, after which they will be at home at 626 Thirty-fifth street, in a cozily furnished apartment which Mr. Wilson has ready. F.

DUNDEE, N. Y.

Lewis J. Brundage, proprietor of Sunnyside Farm, in this city, and C. G. James & Son, of Hornell, N. Y., have joined forces and purchased a fine location on Main street, Penn Yan, N. Y., where after April 1 they expect to conduct business under the name, Lake Keuka Floral Co. As soon as weather will permit, work will be begun upon the greenhouses at the new location, where will also be moved the present greenhouses of both parties. A concrete store will also be erected adjoining the street. They will conduct a general line of florists' business, dealing also in bulbs and seeds. Dahlias, one of Mr. Brundage's specialties, will be largely grown both for wholesale and retail, as will also be a full line of primroses, cyclamens and cinerarias, which are now Mr. James' specialties. A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been having its ups and downs lately. Some days trade is more than can be nicely handled and the next day there may be little doing. Stock is scarce, excepting dark colored carnations. Shipments of bulbous stock are already quite heavy, but even this is well cleaned up.

Various Notes.

Leopold Mallast, of Mt. Clemens, is shipping some exceptionally fine peas and snapdragon to the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House.

Carnations and peas at Stevens' place in Mt. Clemens are bringing good returns. Robert Klagge, just across the way, can be proud of his single violets. Some of his houses, those in which his thousands of bulbs are coming into bloom, remind one of the pictures of the bulb fields in Holland.

Fred Breitmeyer's whole plant is in the pink of condition. The roses look especially fine. The old range is partly devoted to vegetable growing and brings nice returns. Carey's roses were always famous and this year is no exception. Aug. Von Boeselager, also of the City of Baths, is growing a few orchids. Here is a man who believes in making his employees comfortable, evidence of which is a pretty bungalow just finished for his foreman.

Mrs. E. A. Fetters has been appointed on the board of directors of the Ladies' Society of American Florists by the president, Mrs. James Boone, of Baltimore.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. C. H. Maynard and Mrs. E. A. Fetters by the Detroit florists for their coöperation in entertaining the visitors to the rose and carnation convention.

The work on the beautiful new store and conservatory of the Bemb Floral Co. is progressing nicely and Mr. Pochelon should be nicely settled in his new quarters by Easter. The florists of Detroit can surely feel proud of an establishment such as Mr. Pochelon is building. He is overflowing with good ideas and all are being embodied in this new store. H. S.

About This Very Greenhouse

ALL about it, and a good deal about some 50 others, is told and illustrated in our new catalogue. And such splendid illustrations as they are! Many of them occupying a full page—one of the interiors is printed in five colors. But, best of all, it tells just the things you want to know and in just the way that it's no trouble to find them. That's the kind of catalogue it is—the kind of catalogue you want if you want a greenhouse.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

PROCRASTINATION.

Do you recall that for the few days before Christmas it was difficult if not impossible to procure good red ruscus?

Then, early this week supply houses were flooded with telegraph orders for red heart-shaped violet boxes—but the stock had become exhausted.

The moral? Don't put off ordering Easter novelties; get what you want by ordering early.

SIMPLICITY IN WINDOWS.

Two Cardinal Rules.

A clever retailer, one whose windows were always attractive, said that he had two cardinal rules that he never broke, under any circumstances. The rules were: Always to use as simple methods as possible in his window displays, and to change them frequently. There is no doubt that customers are attracted to a store where they expect to find something new every day or two, while simplicity, if the material used is good of its kind, is an unfailing drawing card to people of taste.

It is quite an item in the daily routine to have to change the window or windows, but when once the habit is formed of never leaving the same stock in two days, it becomes easy. It is not quite so easy, however, to think up new ways of drawing the customer daily, and a decorator who can and will do it is deserving of all the success coming his way. And a good deal of it will come.

Crowded Windows Not Artistic.

A crowded window is never an artistic success and seldom a financial one. Jars of roses, sweet peas, carnations or other flowers, set out in rows like a drummer's samples, only appeal to people who are anxious to buy just that class of flowers and these will come to the store anyway. The true function of the well dressed window is to suggest something to the would-be patron, to bring the hesitating customer to a decision and, incidentally, to give a finish to the whole establishment. And a simple arrangement, frequently changed, will do the trick almost every time, certainly oftener than an attempt at elaborate displays in which one class of goods detracts from another, either in beauty of form or color. Here is where the florist must endeavor to raise his window above the level of that of the grocer or the confectioner.

A Begonia Window.

A few really good plants of Begonia Glory of Cincinnati, on a window cloth of deep green velvet, with a winding or snake-like effect of ribbon of the same tint as the begonia flowers, gave a charming effect in a local retailer's window recently. The plants were purchased a few days before they were needed for a decoration, so the display cost nothing except the little trouble of fixing it up.

An ornate window, but one that could be copied only at a time when orchids are plentiful or by a store that does a good business in them, was composed entirely of Cattleya Trianæ and Adiantum Farleyense. Here the grower of the orchids shipped the plants to his retailer customer and he agreed to cut and use all the flowers within three days, so the plants were not injured. The Farleyense were from stock. There is no other setting so perfect for orchids, and especially cattleyas, as this adiantum; the somewhat heavy pinnules and the pretty, soft green tint suit them perfectly.

Violets and Acacia.

A window of quite a different character, but equally effective, was made by a clever young decorator the other day. Violets were so cheap they could hardly be given away, so he lined the whole of the window with them and overlaid these with loose bunches of the feathery acacia or mimosa. The contrast between the bright yet soft green of the mimosa and the violets was exquisite, while the rather heavy setting of the latter was relieved by the grace and lightness of the mimosa.

"Nothing really new or striking about this," someone may say, and the impeachment must be admitted, but there may be some readers who have not tried these simple yet effective methods of decoration and are trying to get away from the sample style of window. They may, perhaps, find a useful hint herein.

Wreath of Galax and Roses by Fred C. W. Brown.

MODERN SALESMANSHIP.

[A paper by Fred C. W. Brown, read before the Buffalo Florists' Club, at Buffalo, N. Y., February 6, 1912.]

The florist of today finds many obstacles in the making of sales. He should give careful thought and attention, therefore, to the methods employed. Modernism and adaptability to existing conditions are most necessary.

The first great and successful step in changed methods was when we began to realize that we must be on the plane of the prospective customer. So, to gain the confidence and respect of the buying public, we threw away our counters and met our customers on an equality that removed the store aspect. In this we are pioneers in what I believe will be an almost universal method in the sale of the higher class of merchandise.

A Peculiar Condition.

Our salesmen are confronted by a peculiar condition in the judging of customers. The feeling has always existed, and does exist still, even between florists, that certain salesmen are adepts at securing high prices. This feeling is often conveyed to customers, when at some inopportune time they enter the establishment and are quoted flowers at a lower rate than their regular clerk has been in the habit of charging. Hence it is sometimes difficult to explain matters, particularly to the purchaser.

The raise in price is justified, for we are dealing with people who want and can afford the now almost necessary luxury of flowers.

Our man with modern methods somewhat overcomes this difficulty in regard to the seeming raising of prices. He realizes that his purchaser is desirous of sending the best and so he has, by his ability to gain confidence in his superior knowledge of blooms, so trained or directed his trade that, instead of receiving an order for a dozen of this or that, he receives an order for a box of roses or flowers at the amount the purchaser wishes to invest. By this method the price is elastic; the salesman is enabled to pick from a jar the choicest blooms and supply to an exacting customer only that which is perfect, whereas, if he were to sell at dozen rates, he is in duty bound, if fair to his remaining trade, to take the blooms as they come, unless he has raised his price to merit the special selection.

A Delicate Task.

The modern salesman also has a delicate and exacting task to perform when there is necessity for what is termed "switching."

A majority of our prospective buyers enter the store with only a desire to purchase "flowers." It may be flowers for a friend, flowers to wear or flowers for a funeral, but there is no set decision as to the variety. Naturally, the first suggestion to their mind is roses; or, if the purse is small, carnations.

Roses and carnations, perhaps, are scarce or our stock is short, but spring flowers are in abundance; so also are plants. Our modern man suggests a plant; he suggests spring flowers; he shows roses and carnations, but by suggestion he leads to the articles he desires to move and so he satisfies a customer and disposes of that which might be a loss. This is sometimes called "forcing," but if heavy persuasion or arbitrary tactics are used he will, though perhaps making the sale, lose a regular customer through thoughtless, overbearing methods.

The most noticeable changes are to be found in our methods of selling designs and flowers for memorial purposes. We are breaking away fast from the cumbersome and freakish set design and are each day greatly adding to the demand for the artistic and beautiful wreath and cluster.

In some sections of the country, and even in different sections of the same city, some of our florists find great trouble in satisfying their trade with anything else than the old set piece, but let me say this word to you: Do not be discouraged; remember that what you were years in educating your public to, you cannot break them of in a day.

Educating Public Taste.

Our modern methods are here waiting for some big strides in improvement, and we must look carefully around to find, if possible, the best and safest means to prove to the buyer our contention that the gates ajar or broken column, which they have entered our store to order, is not as artistic, elegant or suitable as the rich basket, bunch or wreath. In this day of competition it is up to us to "show" them. We have at our hand the means to accomplish this, though few seem to have availed themselves of the results of the camera, through which means we are able to place before the eyes of our trade positive proof of our contention that we can produce something more suitable and more elegant than the old, solid-detailed monstrosity.

Our trade is being elevated to its sphere. The process of elevating is tedious at times, but by perseverance and persistence we will evolve from the old to the new method. We must evolve, for though our tools are the hands of man, our material is nature's highest form of art, and though by mistaken, mercenary methods we have created a demand for the ridiculous, we are surely leading back to nature's arrangement and are fast driving to oblivion our first errors.

The Persuasive Photograph.

The floral photograph plays a most important part in this educating, as well as greatly aiding us in securing the highest amount a purchaser desires to spend. The old method of the wire frames, or a play on the imagination with the assistance of a tape line, is giving place to the graceful and true delineation of the camera lens, so that many now are able to place before their buyers a reproduction of work that is far more subtle in its persuasion than any word description.

Above all, remember in our elevating methods that we are in our positions to serve the requirements of the customers, and to those customers, whether they come with 5 cents or $5, is due courteous treatment. Deference will ever remain the strongest lever in modern methods of salesmanship.

Eagle in Flowers by J. B. Nugent, Jr.

NUGENT'S DESIGNS.

The illustrations in this issue show two of the pieces by John B. Nugent, Jr., made for the opening of the Weber & Fields theatrical reunion at a New York theater February 8. The showing made by the basket of carnations will be considered distinctly good. The other piece is one of those oddities which frequently attract more attention than a really artistically arranged basket of choice blooms. The widespread wings of the eagle were made of red and white carnations, with a feathering of pampas plumes. The base of the design was built, appropriately, to represent rocks.

RHODODENDRONS FOR EASTER.

Please let me know how to grow rhododendrons for Easter flowering. I received a few eight or ten days ago and potted them at once, but do not know what temperature to give them.

M. S.

Rhododendrons started early want a cool house. A night temperature of 45 to 48 degrees would suffice. They will flower in time for Easter in such a house and be of better quality than if subjected to hard forcing. If preferred, you could have delayed until the middle of February, giving them a warm house, with a minimum temperature of 60 degrees. Spray them over freely until the buds show color. Move them into a cooler house as they expand.

PLANTS FOR A SUN PARLOR.

I should like to ask what kind of plants you would advise to put in a box in a solarium, or sun parlor. The boxes are about five feet from the floor and back from the light, against the wall. Is there anything that will live and bloom in such a location? There is Asparagus plumosus and Vinca variegata in them now. I shall be thankful for any information. J. W. L.

Flowering plants would not do well so far from the light. The following foliage plants, in addition to those you have been trying, will thrive satisfactorily: Ficus elastica; the trailing Ficus repens; dracænas in variety, particularly D. Australis or indivisa; Aspidistra lurida and its variegated form; Asparagus Sprengeri; Phœnix rupicola, Canariensis and Roebelenii, and, if sufficiently warm, with a minimum temperature of 55 to 58 degrees, any of the crotons should do well. If any flowering plants would succeed in such a location it would be some of the fibrous-rooted begonias, such as Vernon and Erfordii. C. W.

STORAGE FOR BULBS.

Will you kindly give me some instructions as to the construction of a pit to keep bulbs in until they are ready to be brought up? I intend to build one in the near future, and any information on the matter will be greatly appreciated. J. H. S.

Many growers place their bulbs in coldframes, covering with ashes or sand and protecting with straw, leaves and other material as cold weather arrives. Others prefer to keep them outdoors all the time, digging out the ground to a depth of twelve to fifteen inches and of any required dimensions, where water will not stand. Place boards around the sides and a generous layer of coal ashes on the bottom, the latter to preserve the drainage by keeping worms out. Then pack between the pots with soil. Leave exposed until frost comes; then cover well with ashes or soil and mulch well with leaves, straw and matchboards. Good flowers can be produced in this way, but unless they are all wanted late it means many a disagreeable job in removing snow, etc., and getting at them during winter, and it is impossible to tell how each kind is sprouting until they are uncovered.

A pit or cellar in which to store bulbs could be made below any existing buildings. If an independent one is desired, locate it, if possible, on a hillside where the drainage will be good, and, if possible, have the entrance facing south. It can be built of any desired size of wood, stone or concrete. The concrete is now mostly used. The outside of the roof can be of tar or tar paper; I prefer tar, as it is quite waterproof and durable. The sides of the cellar can be covered with earth, and the roof itself, which needs only a slight pitch, can be protected by straw when severe weather sets in. It is an advantage to have one or two windows or ventilators. Double doors, of ample size to allow the entrance of a team, should be provided. These can be left open except in severe weather. As to the height, I should prefer to have it not less than ten feet to the ridge. In such a place you could store, in addition to bulbs, vegetables in variety, shrubs and trees of doubtful hardiness, bay trees, hydrangeas, hybrid tea roses and much other stock. Bulbs in such a place can be examined and taken out at any time. If intended for bulbs only, your cellar can be made of just sufficient height so that a person can walk around with comfort. C. W.

BROWN LEAVES ON CYPERUS.

How can I prevent the ends of the leaves of my umbrella plants from turning brown? S. E. P.

The leaves of Cyperus alternifolius, umbrella plant, naturally turn brown when old and should be cut off. As they are semiaquatic plants, they require a copious water supply, and any dryness at the root will cause the ends to turn brown. C. W.

COLORED ROMAN HYACINTHS.

Kindly inform a southern subscriber whether there is a hyacinth in red or pink which can be had for Christmas, like the white Romans. If any such exist, please let me know what they are. F. J. U.

There is a pink Roman hyacinth and also a light blue one, but I do not know of any red one. The pink and blue can be had from any of the bulb specialists advertising in The Review. The earliest red hyacinths you could get would be by purchasing miniature bulbs offered for forcing, of such Dutch hyacinths as Garibaldi. These, however, will not flower until January under the most favorable conditions.

CARNATIONS

STIGMONOSE.

As we are beginners in the growing of carnations, will you kindly tell us what ails the plants of which we are sending you samples? The varieties we are sending are White Enchantress, White Lawson and Lady Bountiful. They are all planted in the same bench. In another bench we have other varieties of Enchantress, Harlowarden and Victory, but they are doing well. Please give us the name of the disease and state whether it spreads, as we believe it does. Is there any cure for it? Would you advise us to take cuttings from the plants or not? J. L. M.

The disease you complain of is stigmonose, which has been the subject of numerous discussions in these columns this winter. By looking up your back numbers you will find the information you seek. I might add that this disease does not spread from one plant to another, except in case a plant is inoculated by means of the punctures of insects. Unless you keep your plants scrupulously clean, there is, of course, great danger of this.

A. F. J. B.

CUTTINGS OR BLOOMS—WHICH?

I write to ask something about the rooting of carnations. I read each week what A. F. J. B. has to say and think he is O. K., but what I wish to know is this: My carnation plants are making a good many shoots around the bottom of the plants, about five to six inches long. Will these make good cuttings? Or, if left on the plants, about what month will they flower? I can sell 25,000 to 40,000 cuttings from March to the first part of May, if I had them. In other years I bought them unrooted and rooted them, but I have been thinking of taking those bottom shoots instead of buying unrooted ones. I also remember that when I threw the old plants out, about the first part of July, there were about twelve to fourteen nice green tops on them, about twelve to sixteen inches long, and if these had been put in sand when four or five inches long I would have had more rooted cuttings and would thus have been turning these green tops into cash. I shall be much pleased to have A. F. J. B.'s opinion on this point. G. A. R.

You are in exactly the same fix in which most of our carnation specialists have found themselves at one time or another, especially those who grow for both cut blooms and cuttings. Each has also found, sooner or later, that it is impossible to secure both in satisfactory quantity from the same plants. To get a maximum of cut blooms from your plants, you must take off no shoots except those which would be taken off with the blooms. When growing for cut blooms alone, you can secure enough of these shoots to supply all the stock needed for your own planting, but not much more. To get a maximum of cuttings it is necessary to keep the blooming shoots topped back from the very beginning in the fall, to induce the young breaks to come. With a fair market, either one will pay better than to try to mix the two, as has been found by experience.

When we buy new varieties we let them come into crop, and then, about the first of the year, or whenever we begin to propagate, we go through them and take off all the available cuttings. Then, as the breaks appear where the blooms were cut, we keep taking them off. By the last part of March there are usually few buds left and we are running the plants for cuttings, as long as we wish to propagate them. We practice this method because it gives us a chance to get an accurate line on the productiveness and desirability of the variety through most of the season, and at the same time we manage to get a good lot of stock for the next season.

But, to get down to your own particular case, I take it that you want to cut blooms, and about all you can cut, up to the end of the season, which would be July 1. Cuttings which you would sell during March and April would have to go into the sand at least four weeks earlier than the time of delivery. That would mean that you would take off the shoots during February and March. These same shoots would flower during May and June. The shoots of which you speak as being twelve to fourteen inches long when you take the plants out in July would have been too late to propagate satisfactorily. So you can see that it simmers down to the question of whether you want to grow for a maximum cut of blooms during May and June, or whether you are willing to sacrifice a part of the cut for what cuttings you propagate. But this much is certain: Every young shoot you take off in late winter or early spring means one flower less ten to twelve weeks later. You can not eat your cake and have it too, and, in the language of the faker, "you pays your money and takes your choice."

SUBSTITUTE FOR HARLOWARDEN.

Will you please give me the name of a good carnation that will take the place of Harlowarden? Our stock of it seems to be going backward and is not giving the satisfaction it should.

L. S. H.

Since the time when Harlowarden was introduced there has not appeared a crimson variety which took among the trade as Harlowarden did. In the west it has been Harlowarden and in the east it is Harry Fenn. Nothing seems to have been able to displace them. Last season my firm dissemi-mated a variety under the name of Pocahontas. The sales were limited, as a crimson naturally will not sell in such quantities as other colors, and most of the lots sent out were comparatively small. We are hearing from all sides this year, among those who bought it last year, and it is being propagated largely for next season's planting. We are sold up for the season and we are unable to advise where you can buy it, as everyone seems to be holding onto what he has. Next year you can, no doubt, buy it from a number of places. Hang onto your Harlowarden another season and then try Pocahontas. A. F. J. B.

VARIEGATED CARNATIONS.

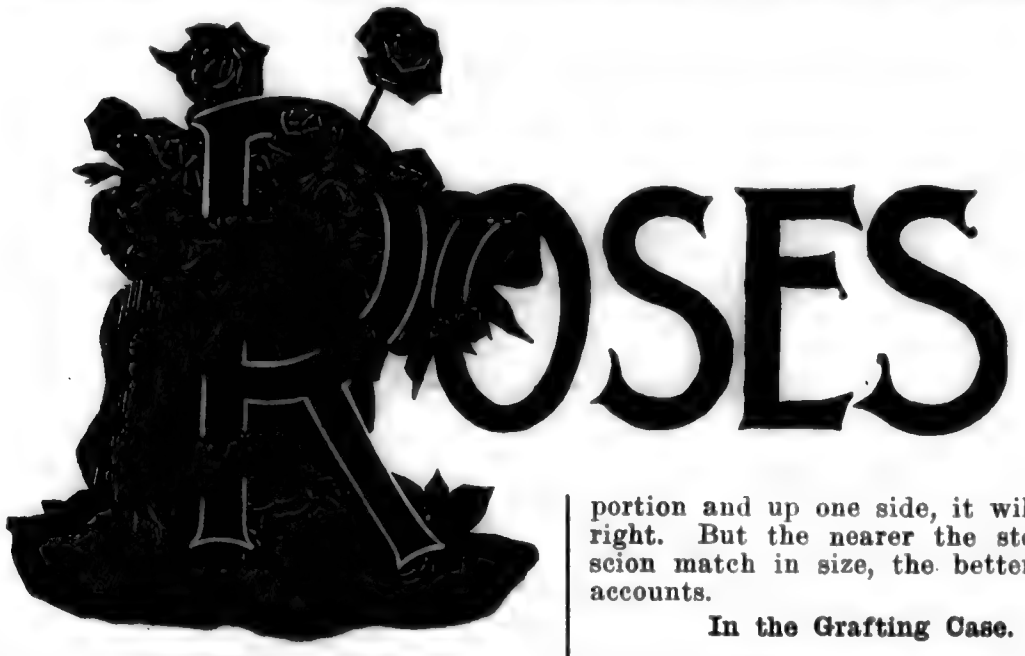
It has been a long time since variegated carnations have been offered in the markets in any quantity. It appears that within the next year or two the possibilities of large sale will be put to the test. Years ago Mrs. Bradt was popular with the customers of the retail stores, but the variety had faults which put it out of the race. Of a different type, but probably as well liked as any carnation ever offered in the stores, was Prosperity. Its fault was that it could not be grown to sell at anything like the prices of other carnations. Within the last year or so a number of varieties have appeared more or less on the order of Bradt or Prosperity. Two of those of the Bradt type of marking are shown in the accompanying illustrations. One is an eastern variety, raised by Peter Fisher, which has been seen at most of the exhibitions within the last year. The other is a seedling raised by the Chicago Carnation Co., which is as yet little known outside of the Chicago market. Each is a pure white flower with pencilings of bright red. Mr. Fisher is disseminating his variety, Benora, this season and it is said that in the east, especially in the vicinity of Boston, it will be planted heavily. The western firm plans to disseminate its seedling next season at the same time it sends out its red variety, The Herald.

Peter Fisher's Carnation Benora.

CARNATIONS IN LETTUCE SOIL.

We now have the second crop of lettuce on soil taken from fertile sod, never plowed until last summer. The sod was piled up and rotted until November, when we put it into the benches. The lot had been pastured for about five years. To the soil we added every fifth load of well rotted stable manure. It grew an excellent crop of lettuce, after which we added a liberal quantity of sheep manure, worked it up well and sprinkled the top with good wood ashes, with a little air-slaked lime; then we planted the second crop. Will this soil be all right for carnations, to be planted in July? C. B.

I hardly think that the lettuce would have exhausted the soil enough to render it unfit for carnations, and if it seems in a good, sweet condition, I would not hesitate to use it. In such cases it is usually not so much a question of fertility as it is of the condition of the soil. If fertility were the only thing to consider, then we could easily supply the deficiency, but when a soil is soured and has that honeycombed look one sees in soil which has been in use a whole season, then it is just about impossible to doctor it up. Your experience as a grower should tell you whether the soil is in good condition to grow plants. A. F. J. B.



CARNATIONS IN OPEN FRAMES.

I have eight coldframes, each 4x10 feet, and should like to grow carnation plants for blossoms in them this summer, outside. I should like to grow them in the open frames, without the sash on. Can they be grown outside, in the open, and produce long stems and good blossoms? I would set out about 3-inch pot plants in the latter part of May. What varieties would you recommend and what kind of soil should I put them in? How far from the top of the frames should the surface of the soil be? When would 3-inch pot plants begin to blossom, set out that way, and how many of these plants would it be safe to set in each frame? I am located in northern Ohio. L. S.

Your plan of growing carnations outdoors is quite feasible, though it is a question as to whether you can make it pay if you mean to dispose of the blooms in the wholesale markets. During the summer months, when asters are so fine and sold so cheaply as they now are, there is not much chance to get enough for your carnations per hundred to make them profitable. You certainly could not sell them for the same price as the asters and make as much money.

However, if you want to grow carnations for blooming in the summer (and the foregoing statements may not apply to your case at all), you should lose no time in getting your plants under way. If you have none in pots, I would advise you not to wait until you can propagate them, but buy them at once. All the Enchantress varieties will do well, grown that way; also White Perfection, White Wonder, Gloriosa, Fair Maid, Queen, etc. Get the plants into 3-inch pots by early May, and topped at least once, so that they can come right up into bloom without having to be topped any more. Plant about eight inches each way. Your coldframes are all right, but it is not necessary that the side boards come up very high. All you want is that they hold the soil around the edges and keep the water from running off when you water them. After they are planted a few weeks, give them a good mulch of spent stable manure to help hold the moisture. These plants should begin to give you blooms about the last of July and continue until frost cuts them down. A. F. J. B.

GRAFTING ROSES.

To Graft or Not to Graft?

"Do roses do better grafted or on their own roots?" is a question frequently asked. Much depends on the soil in which they are to grow, and a good deal depends on the variety. Where a grower has a light soil to deal with, there is no doubt the Manetti stock, upon which most kinds are grafted, is good. Even in a heavy soil the Manetti will push more roots than weak growing teas or hybrid teas. In solid beds on the ground the Manetti sometimes shows a disposition to go to rest in winter, just when the grower wants his stock to move freely, but this is not the case in raised benches, where the heat reaches the roots. Some popular kinds are too slow in growth on their own roots and are much improved by grafting. Take Mrs. Marshall Field, for instance; it practically refuses to grow in some soils on its own roots, while it makes a fine growth on the Manetti.

I have little doubt that nearly all the popular hybrid teas do better grafted than on their own roots. As to the best stock, that is another story, but the Manetti is usually the easiest to get hold of and is used more largely than other and possibly better stock.

Some Hints to Beginners.

The operation of grafting has been so frequently described that it is hardly worth while to go over the ground again, so I will presume that the cardinal points are known and try to point out a few rocks upon which beginners often founder.

Stocks are frequently potted too deeply. The rose unites more freely on the root portion, or that which has been buried in the nursery, than on the portion carrying green bark. I have frequently grafted roses on pieces of wild brier roots that have never borne a leaf or any bark. Stocks should always be potted with about an inch of straight stem just above the soil, for grafting on. This is easier to work on than a crooked stem and insures the point of union being buried when the final planting takes place.

When the stock is larger than the scion, do not try to make the latter fit all across, or the cambium layers on the stock will not be fully exposed and a good callus will not result. As long as the cambium layers of stock and scion meet at the point of the cut portion and up one side, it will be all right. But the nearer the stock and scion match in size, the better on all accounts.

In the Grafting Case.

The grafting case should be as nearly as possible air-tight. This is not so much on account of the heat required, but it enables the grower to maintain abundant atmospheric moisture in the case without frequent moistening of the plants overhead.

No reasonable amount of fire heat will injure the plants while the process of grafting is going on, but the sun must be carefully excluded. One hour's sunshine will probably ruin every plant in the case, so shade regularly and thoroughly.

From ten days to two weeks, according to the amount of heat given, is sufficient time for the plants to callous, and after this takes place a little air should be put on the case at night after the house is closed. For the first couple of days a label, placed the flat way under the light, is ample, and this should be removed and the plants lightly sprayed with an atomizer before the house is ventilated the next day. Let the change from an absolutely close case to the ordinary rose house temperature be as gradual as possible.

Raffia is good for tying material. There are several adhesive preparations on the market, and I have seen good results from their use, but millions of good plants have been grown with the common raffia for ties, and it is the cheapest of all.

KILLARNEY AND RICHMOND.

Will Killarney and Richmond roses do better in separate houses than when grown in the same house?

B. J. M.

Though Richmond and Killarney require practically the same night temperature in winter, 58 degrees being about right, and are often grown successfully in the same house, they will undoubtedly do better in separate houses. Each of the forcing roses has some little peculiarity. For instance, Killarney has tender foliage compared with Richmond and falls an easier prey to spider and mildew. Then again, it is always easier to make little temperature and other changes with one variety than with two or more. It will certainly be well to grow the varieties separately if accommodations will permit.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

We are getting a much colder winter than a year ago, and with Easter coming, as it will, nine days earlier, it will be necessary to keep close watch on the lilies, and any laggards should at once be placed in more heat. We have now a bare eight weeks in which to flower the plants. It is always better to have them in flower a few days ahead of time, as they can easily be held back in a cool house, rather than have to subject them to severe forcing near the time they are wanted in flower. To be sure of the flowers being on time, the buds should show distinctly forty days before Easter. That time will be here almost before we know it; therefore move late plants without delay to as warm a house as you can give them. Syringe them freely and hurry them all you can. On the other hand, those with buds already showing may be kept a little cooler. The house should not go below 50 to 55 degrees at night, however.

With an early Easter there will be fewer flowers of the Ascension lily, L. candidum, seen than usual. This variety resents hard forcing; it causes the spikes to become spindling and the flowers are always much smaller than under cooler treatment. If the candidum buds show by March 1, it should be possible to flower them in an average night temperature of 55 degrees, but this should be the absolute maximum at night. Once a week the plants should be fumigated or sprayed for green aphis.

Liliums speciosum and auratum, if fall potted and kept in a cool house, are now a few inches high and should be given a bench where they will be close to the light. They prefer a moderately cool house. These are always found useful in June and July.

Rambler Roses.

Rambler rose plants intended for Easter flowering should now be nicely started into growth and given a house with a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Ventilate with care. On many days the sky, which has been clear, will suddenly darken and the temperature will drop quickly in the houses. A cold, clammy atmosphere must be avoided as much as cold drafts. On the first appearance of mildew, dust the affected parts with flowers of sulphur, using a powder bellows, and if you use steam, paint some on the flow pipe. Ramblers that were pot-grown through the summer will need feeding at once, while those potted up in the fall can wait a little longer. Be sure the roots are kept moist, and only spray over on clear mornings when you are tolerably sure the plants will be dry before nightfall.

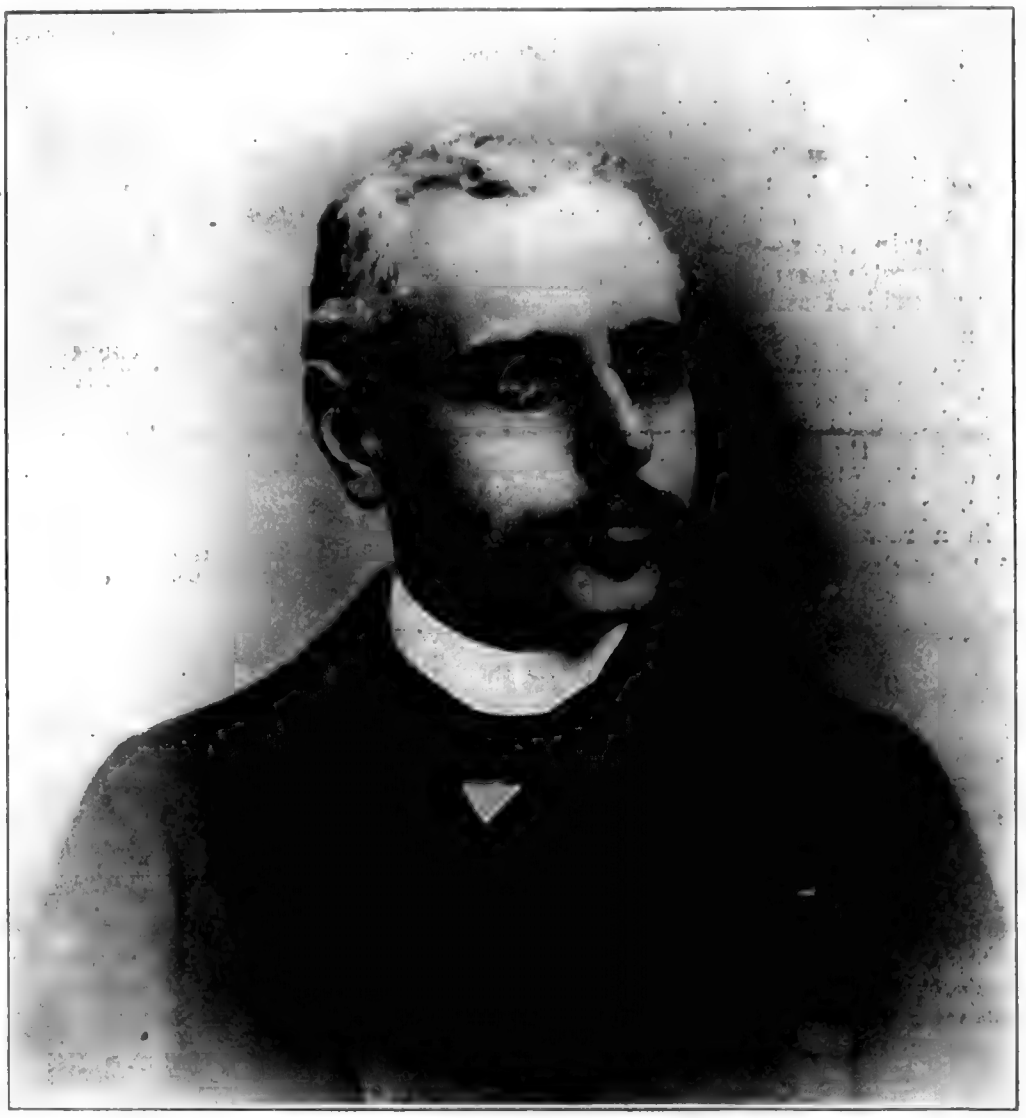
Hybrid Perpetual Roses.

Hybrid perpetuals are always better if started cool. There is not the call for them that once existed at Easter, but such varieties as Frau Karl Druschki, Brunner, Mme. G. Luizet and reds like the old Jacqueminot sell well. These will be on time if given a house such as the ramblers have. Roses of the Baby Rambler type and Clothilde Soupert, if just breaking away, will flower for Easter. Their treatment should be the same as that of the climbing ramblers.



Dutch Bulbs.

Many inquiries come to hand at this season asking when to place Dutch bulbs in heat to flower them at Easter. It is virtually impossible to give any precise answer, owing to the extreme variations in temperature which may be experienced after they are housed. In some cases a month may be needed. In the case of tulips and trumpet narcissi three weeks should suffice, in a temperature of 50 degrees at night. Some growers keep their plants in cold-frames, and in this way the nicest, stockiest plants can be had. If perchance we get a cold March, it may be necessary to place some of the bulbs in heat to have them in on time. It is an easy matter to keep them back for a few days on the floor of a cool cellar.

After this time tulips, hyacinths and narcissi will be sufficiently well sprouted and will give stems of ample length if placed on the benches in full light at once. A batch should be started at least once a week, in order to keep up a continuous supply. The severe weather experienced so far in 1912 has made difficult and disagreeable work for those who continue to keep their bulb stock in pans and flats outdoors, for, no matter how well it may be protected, it takes considerable time and much patience to get a fresh batch in each time it is wanted. If the same bulbs were stored in a cool cellar they could be examined any time, and no one will claim that bulbs thus stored are not fully as good as those buried outdoors.

Show Pelargoniums.

The show pelargoniums are now making quite rapid growth. All should now be in the pots in which they are to flower. Pinching of the leading shoots should now be discontinued. For an early Easter it is hardly possible to have these pelargoniums in good bloom. They are usually at their best during May and early June, although some will flower in April. Grow them cool; it is useless to try to hurry them in a warm house. It will only mean weakened plants and more green aphis on them. When well rooted, feed freely. Such manures as Clay's fertilizer and Bon Arbor, alternated, are excellent. Fine bone also makes a useful medium for surface dressing. Either fumigate or spray once a week and your plants are sure to be clean.

D. Fuerstenberg.

Deutzias.

If the deutzias have been pot-grown they will flower in six weeks in an average night temperature of 60 degrees. If they were dug up and potted late in the fall they will neither break so freely nor flower so well. These and such shrubs as Spiræa Van Houttei, pyrus, prunus, forsythias, etc., need not be started yet for Easter. Some of these shrubs come into bloom quickly, notably the forsythias and prunus, and a month before Easter is sufficiently early to start them.

Schizanthus.

A last sowing of schizanthus should now be made. Do not place the seed in a warm house. It soon germinates, and if not kept all the time near the light will soon become drawn. It wants to be grown quite cool all the time and always without shade. Plants of earlier batches are better if pinched to keep them shapely. Of course, S. Wisetonensis is naturally a dwarf grower, but even this can be improved by judicious pinching. When well rooted they appreciate copious waterings, and liquid manure and a chemical top-dressing should be alternated every three or four days. The cooler the schizanthus is grown and the nearer the light, the stockier will it be. If grown cold, few stakes are needed. If grown too warm it needs considerable staking to keep it erect.

Larned, Kan.—The Larned Greenhouses are conducted by Joel Smith, florist, and Louisa Smith, designer. Another greenhouse, 30 x 130, is being built and will be used for a crop of vegetables this spring, to be followed by mums and carnations next season, for the demand grows steadily.

NEW IDEAS IN PRODUCTION.

The Florex Gardens, of North Wales, Pa., represent to the entire floral world new ideas in construction. Their monster house has been read about, wondered at, and visited by florists all over the land, even by visitors from abroad. The keynote of their idea, that the wide, flat house affords the greatest economy in construction, as demonstrated by the monster house that succeeded a slightly less monstrous house in four years, is known everywhere. Its height, length, width, every detail of construction is familiar to all well informed florists; they have wondered much, trembled a little; for these monster houses might reasonably be expected to distance them in economy of production. Gradually they have become accustomed to the existence of such houses. While interest is still keen, fear has vanished, just as the small craft float happily on the ocean beside the sister leviathan.

The new ideas in production that are being tried at North Wales are not generally known. No one, not even the active brains that control the destinies of the Florex Gardens, has attempted to give these ideas in detail. They are so interesting and so clearly defined that I shall attempt to describe them as they exist today, merely prefacing my description by saying that these ideas are the result of years of experiment at Edgely in addition to the few years that have elapsed since the commencement of the great place at North Wales.

The first idea governing production at North Wales is, "A flower for the million." This idea is clearly shown in the methods employed in the growing of roses, carnations, sweet peas and snapdragon, as well as in the varieties selected. Perhaps the idea is most clearly brought out in the growing of roses. The fancy or special rose is discouraged; the shorter grades are desired—roses that are within the reach of buyers of moderate means at any season of the year. In the carnations this idea is shown in the varieties rather than in the methods of culture, while in sweet peas the cultural methods are as evident as in the roses.

The next idea, and one that is not generally understood even by those who have visited the Florex Gardens, is clearly shown in the monster house. This idea is that every rose should be an outside plant. To those accustomed to planting three, four or five roses in a row in each bed, this idea seems preposterous; yet it is feasible and most ingeniously carried into execution. In the first place it was decided that, while every rose plant must be an outside plant, there must also be exactly the same number of roses in the monster house that it would have held under the usual method of planting. To do this, each walk was narrowed two inches; between these walks the solid beds were made of just the width required for two rows of plants; the plants were set out in these beds in the same way that the spots appear on a "five" in playing cards. This will show how every plant becomes an outside plant, securing the largest possible amount of light and air. The beds are made two inches narrower than would ordinarily be the case, while the plants are kept from encroaching on the walks by two rows of galvanized wire running horizontally.

The roses grown in this monster house are Maryland, Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney, Bridesmaid and Bride.

The idea brought out most strongly in the second monster house, about one-half filled with carnations and the other half with sweet peas and snapdragon, is the planting of carnations in solid beds. This may be familiar to growers in certain sections of the country, but the principal growers in the neighborhood of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia are unanimous in favoring the raised bench. To see half a house, containing thousands of plants and hundreds of thousands of buds, all in solid beds, was unusual. The varieties grown are Enchantress, White Enchantress, Beacon, Winsor, White Star (an own seedling), Ruth (another seedling named for Mr. Bernheimer's little daughter), and Dorothy Gordon. The two last named were in another range of two houses, in raised benches.

The heating ideas in the North Wales power plant may be briefly summarized as centering in the battery of marine boilers and in the reducing valve. The great length of the marine boilers, it is asserted, makes them more economical than the return tubular boiler, while the reducing valve, whereby a pressure of forty, thirty or twenty pounds may be reduced to two, one or even one-half pound, solves the problem of heating the monster house.

There are, of course, other ideas of value and of deep interest now being evolved at the Florex Gardens, but these are sufficient to give an idea of what is being done in one of the largest establishments in the country, and will give food for thought to growers who are determined that their places shall stand second to none in the march of improvement. GLASS MANUFACTURERS MEET.

A well attended meeting of glass manufacturers was held at Pittsburgh February 7 to 9, and the feeling expressed at that meeting was such that some sort of an arrangement is pretty sure to be instituted that will mean better returns for their product. With any one who thinks on the subject, it goes without saying that it is absolutely impossible for any window glass factory in the United States to sell 16x18's and 16x24's in carload lots at the rate of a little over 3½ cents per square foot, f. o. b. factory. They cannot do it. It has been demonstrated to them and they now seem ready to bury the hatchet on past performances and start anew with the hope of getting at least six per cent on their investment.

THE JOHN YOUNG PROPERTY.

The John Young property at Bedford Hills, N. Y., is well known to the trade. The first greenhouse built was 54 x 700 feet and was of the flat iron rafter construction. Three years ago another large house, 54 x 561 feet, of the King iron frame type, was erected, and later a house, 21 x 561 feet, of the same type, was built. The John Young Co., owner of this range, became financially embarrassed and the property was sold at public auction at White Plains, N. Y., December 29, 1911, on account of proceedings taken by Mr. Schenck, holder of the second mortgage, for $14,000, against the property. There were many judgments against the property, the largest of which was held by the King Construction Co., for about $10,000. The property was bought at this public sale by R. O. King, in the interest of the King Construction Co., for the sum of $37,100. The property was sold February 7 by Mr. King to Charles L. Roberts, of Basking Ridge, N. J., for $48,000. The property will be managed and the product sold by Messrs. Moore, Hentz & Nash, New York city.

FARMERS' WEEK AT CORNELL.

The Fifth Annual Farmers' Week at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., will be held February 19 to 24. An invitation to be present is extended to everyone in any way engaged in tilling the soil.

The program includes a number of features of interest to florists, among them the following:

Tuesday, February 20, "Greenhouse Construction," an illustrated lecture by W. R. Cobb, of Lord & Burnham Co., New York.

Wednesday, February 21, "Greenhouse Construction and Heating," illustrated lecture by R. O. King, of King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y.

Thursday, February 22, "Filling Window Boxes," demonstration by C. E. Hunn.

Friday, February 23, "Opportunities in Floriculture for Men and Women," by Prof. A. C. Beal.

Friday, February 23, "The Aster and Its Culture," by George Arnold, Rochester, N. Y.

Friday, February 23, "Flowers as a Field Crop," by I. S. Hendrickson, Flowerfield, L. I.

Friday, February 23, "The Gladiolus as a Special Crop," illustrated lecture by Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.

Many other lectures also will be of interest, treating on spraying, nut culture, vegetable growing, etc., etc.

TO REPAIR CRACKED CISTERN?

Does anyone know of a cement or anything to calk a brick cistern that has cracked by freezing? Our cistern is twenty feet in diameter and six feet deep, built in barrel shape, built of brick laid in cement. The brick are laid the flat way and one ply, banked around by earth, but not covered. If you know of anything to repair the damage, please let us know as soon as possible. G. N. Garland.

Finleyville, O.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

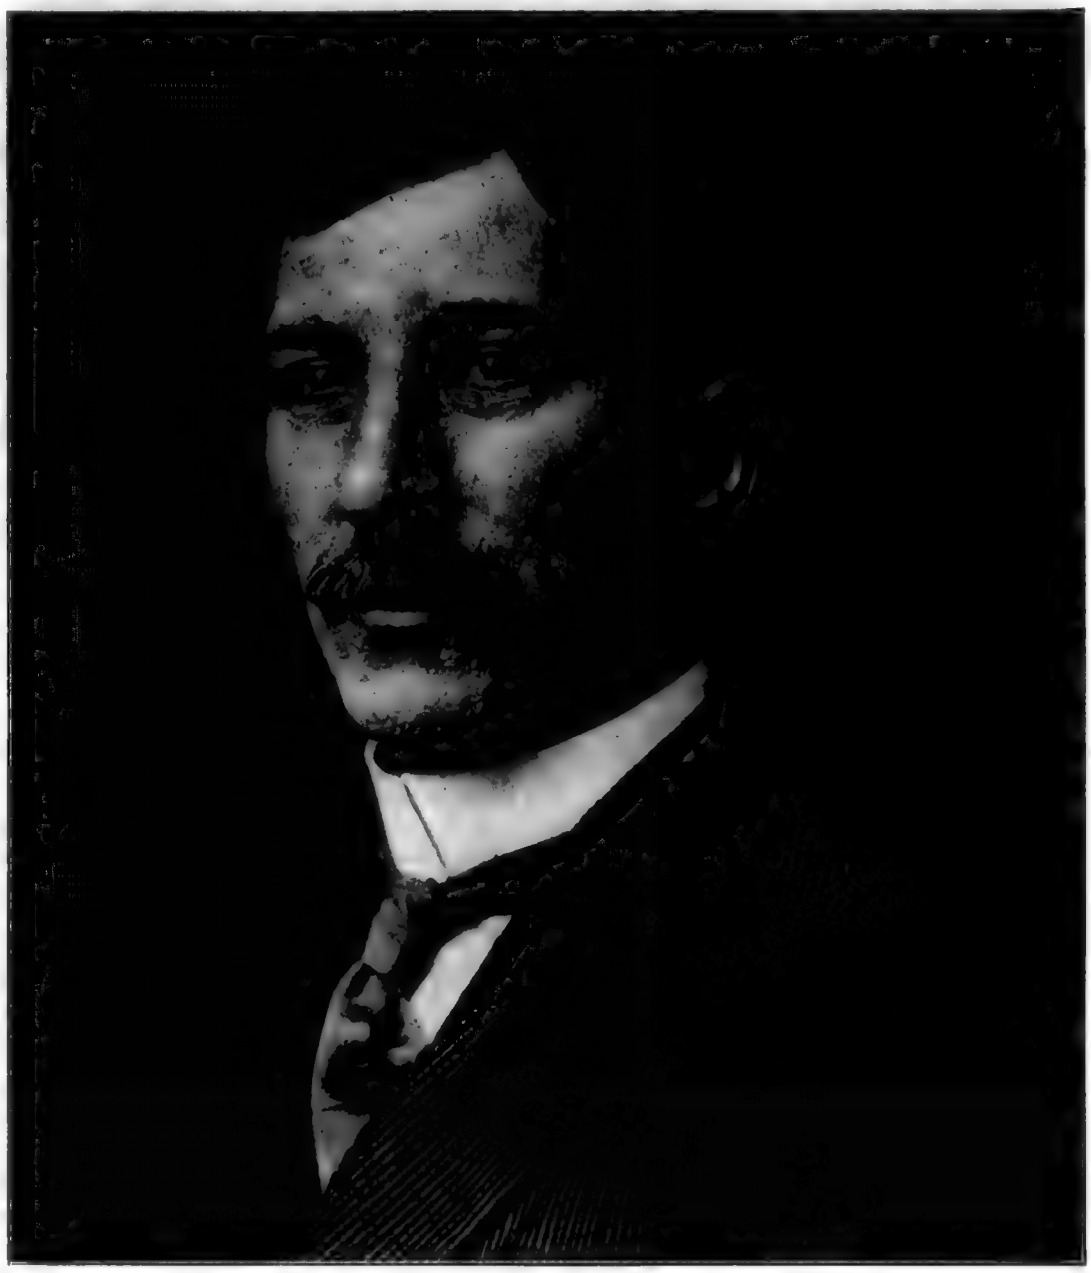
Public notice is hereby given that the following varieties of gladioli offered by John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., have been registered by the Nomenclature Committee of the American Gladiolus Society:

Gladiolus Alaska, 1911; now offered for the first time; a pure white variety, having a strong constitution and producing a long spike of well formed flowers. This variety was exhibited at the convention of the S. A. F. at Philadelphia, in 1907, as No. 27, and was awarded a certificate of merit.

Gladiolus Silver Sheen, 1911; a fine white variety, the petals of which have the appearance of being overlaid with a coat of glistening silver; very fine and effective. A. C. Beal, Chairman.

FLORISTS BUYING GLASS.

During the last few weeks the popular sizes of greenhouse glass have been selling well below $2 per box, at the lowest prices on record. As a result, growers have taken round lots. Some of the recent sales reported by Sharp, Partridge & Co., Chicago, have been as follows: One car each to F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind.; to Frank B. Smith's Sons, Danville, Ill., and to Andrew Peterson, Hoopeston, Ill.; two cars to the University of Illinois, Champaign, and four cars to E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.



WHERE THE MONEY GOES.

The trade is interested in several provisions of the agricultural appropriation bill, which was reported to the house of representatives recently and will be taken up this week. These provisions include the following: $285,680 for the free seed distribution; also $1,425,850 for the general expenses of the Bureau of Plant Industry; over $5,000,000 for the forest service, nursery investigations, etc.; $290,000 for investigations and studies of soils; $624,880 for investigating and combating injurious insects; $100,000 for investigation and extermination of rodents and other animals that interfere with the horticulturist and agriculturist; $1,500,000 for horticultural experiment stations; $87,000 for enforcing the insecticide law. H. C. H.

Montpelier, O.—L. W. Franks announces that he is now out of the florists' trade.

PITTSBURGH CLUB'S NEW HEAD.

The new president of the Pittsburgh Florists' Club is E. C. Ludwig, who not only was a charter member of the club but is one of the oldest retail florists in that city, having been engaged in the business for over thirty-seven years. His principal place of business is at 710 East Diamond street, but he also has a stand in the North Side market. He is one of those who do with all possible energy anything that seems worth doing at all and, as he was an active candidate for the club presidency, it seems assured that he will not permit the strong interest now taken in the organization to abate at all during his term of office.

E. C. Ludwig.

OBITUARY.

John Bischoff.

John Bischoff, of Niagara Falls, N. Y., is dead, at the age of 46 years. A wife, one daughter and two sons survive.

A. R. Meserve.

A. R. Meserve, horticultural commissioner of Los Angeles county, died of heart failure at his home on Eagle street, Boyle Heights, Los Angeles, Cal., February 7. The deceased was 79 years of age and was active right up to the last, having been around the city attending to his duties only a day or two before his death. Mr. Meserve was father of the late Elmo R. Meserve, who died a few months ago, having been for many years a wholesaler in Los Angeles and a partner in the Los Angeles Flower Market.

The aged gentleman's business brought him in contact with practically everyone in the trade in the city and county of Los Angeles and all will feel his loss.

Mrs. John Burrows.

Aletta Iantha Morgan Burrows, wife of John G. Burrows, of Onset, Mass., passed to the higher life January 23. Mrs. Burrows was born in Pickton, Ontario, Canada, January 17, 1837. For several years Mr. and Mrs. Burrows lived at Fishkill, N. Y., where Mr. Burrows carried on business as a florist. Mrs. Burrows was beloved by all who knew her. Her health had been impaired for a long time. She was conscious to the last and shortly before leaving the physical body she made a request that the body in which she had dwelt whilst here should be cremated.

Thomas J. Totten.

Thomas J. Totten, of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., died February 6 at Daytona, Fla., where he went several weeks ago for his health. Mr. Totten was born at Saratoga Springs June 26, 1853, and had always lived there. He was educated in the local schools and at the Christian Brothers' academy in Albany. He was a Republican and had held the office of trustee. He was a member of the Royal Arcanum, all the Masonic bodies of the village and Oriental temple of Troy.

William Smith.

Dean of the nurserymen, and possibly richest in this world's goods, was William Smith, who died at his home in Geneva, N. Y., February 6. He was 94 years of age and reputed to be worth a million dollars. Born in Canterbury, Kent county, England, he came to America when he was 24 years old, without a dollar. Four years were spent at a number of temporary occupations and in 1846 he and a brother located in Geneva, acquiring twenty-five acres of land and founding what is now the W. & T. Smith Co. With painstaking care, close attention to detail and the most scrupulous square dealing, the business was built up until it is today one of the largest in the country. Mr. Smith became one of the leading men of the community, as he early was of the trade in which he engaged. He was one of the founders of the Standard Optical Co., the largest concern of its kind in the country, and was its president. He also was a director of the First National Bank and was interested in several other business enterprises. With increasing fortune and leisure he turned to science and philanthropy. Hobart College owes much to him, for he not only endowed it, in 1906, with $500,000, but it was his work that brought many of the strongest men to its faculty.

Columbus, O.—For the approaching centennial celebration an official flower is wanted and S. F. Stephens recommends the zinnia, offering to donate 1,000 packets of seeds to the Centennial Flower and Garden Club in case his suggestion is adopted.

OIL FOR FUEL

And How to Use It.

I noticed in The Review of November 30 an inquiry concerning the use of fuel oil for greenhouses on the Pacific coast. Kansas, where I am in business, is not on the coast, but the fuel oil produced here is similar to that of California, I am sure. I will therefore try to describe a burner which gives splendid satisfaction with us, and which can be used with a steam heating plant where the boiler pressure can work at twenty pounds or over.

The principle of the burner is the vaporizing and atomizing of the oil by a jet of live steam.

The burner is simple and can be made in the workshop with the tools found in almost every greenhouse plant.

For the ordinary steam tubular boiler of twenty horse-power or over it is best to have the burners set in pairs, and two of them will handle the oil for any size of boiler up to 100 horse-power.

To Make the Burner.

Take a section of ¾-inch pipe, eighteen to twenty-four inches long. Thread both ends. Provide a cap for the end called the nozzle end. In the center of this cap drill a hole just large enough to let a piece of ¼-inch pipe slip through. For the other end of the ¾-inch pipe provide a tee and screw the pipe into one end of it. For the other end of the tee provide a bushing, reducing from ¾-inch to ¼-inch.

Next take a piece of ¼-inch pipe and cut a thread on one end long enough so that the pipe can be screwed through the bushing from the inside, and project far enough outside so that an elbow can be screwed onto the threaded projecting end. This small pipe is for oil.

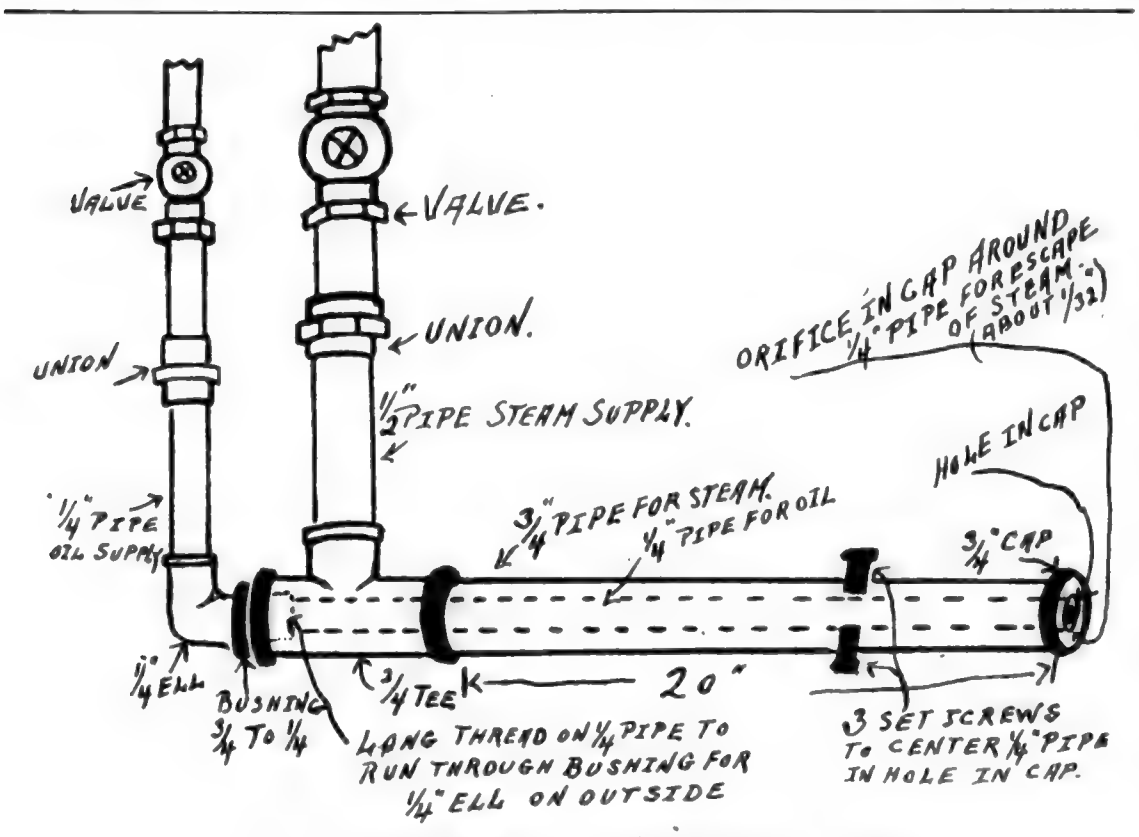
After getting the ¼-inch pipe threaded and through the bushing, a careful measurement should be made, and the pipe should be cut to such a length that when the bushing in which it is fastened is screwed into the ¾-inch tee the ¼-inch pipe will pass through the tee and the ¾-inch pipe and just come flush with the outside of the cap on the nozzle end of the ¾-inch pipe. This end of the small pipe would best be cut with a hack saw; or, if cut with a roller cutter, the end of the pipe should be reamed out just enough to remove the burred or crimped-in edge of the pipe, and the outside should be filed down smoothly and evenly all around and made small enough so that where it comes through the ¾-inch cap there will be a small space all around about the thickness of the point of a knife blade. This space is for the escape of steam from the ¾-inch pipe, which thus acts as a steam jacket to the ¼-inch pipe which conducts the oil.

About six or eight inches from the nozzle end of the burner three small holes should be drilled, an equal distance apart, around the ¾-inch pipe. These holes should be threaded and small screw bolts or set screws set in, projecting through and centering upon the ¼-inch pipe, thus gripping it and adjusting its position to an exact center in passing through the cap at the nozzle of the burner.

Setting the Burners.

The burner is now completed and only needs to be properly connected to begin its service. As previously stated, it is best on most boilers to provide a pair of these burners, although in small boilers, as well as in those of medium size, of the firebox type and with one furnace door, one burner would probably do the work satisfactorily.

Remove the doors and close up the openings with brick, leaving an opening about two and a half inches square, near the center, for the introduction of the burner.



Before closing the fire-door opening the grates should be covered with some pieces of sheet iron, and on top of the sheet iron should be placed a few inches of ashes. Leave a space uncovered at the front edge, about six inches square, to supply air to the fire. These openings should be as nearly as possible directly under the nozzle end of the burner, which should project into the furnace or firebox far enough to come well over the front edge of the grate.

In setting the burners I think it well to pitch them slightly toward the center. This relieves the side walls of the furnace, and in case only one burner is being used, which often happens, the flame is better located.

Connecting the Burners for Steam.

In connecting up the burners we run a ½-inch pipe from the dome of the boiler to the front and down one side of the front of the boiler to a point on a level just below the flue doors, putting in a valve at a convenient height on this vertical section and screwing a tee vertically onto the lower end. Put a drain cock into the lower end of this tee, to drain the condensation from the feed pipe before starting the fire.

Into the side of this tee connect a line of pipe, running across the front of the boiler above the fire-door openings and connecting by means of tees and nipples with each burner. Each connection should have its own valve and a union between the valve and the burner.

W. H. Culp's Sketch of the Oil Burner He Uses.

Connecting for Oil.

The oil should come from a feed tank so set that gravity will run the oil to the burners; a height of four or five feet above the burners will do. A ½-inch or ⅜-inch pipe will do for the main feed pipe, which should branch to ¼-inch when near the burners. This main feed pipe should have a stop cock, and in addition there should be a ¼-inch valve for regulating the flow of oil to each burner, with a union between valve and burner. These oil feed pipes connect to the ¼-inch elbows on the back of the burners.

Setting the Feed Tank.

The feed tank may well be of galvanized iron, about 24-gauge and large enough to hold 100 gallons or a little more. It should be set where it will not get very cold; somewhere in the potting shed, overhead and near a steam pipe is a good place. The feed pipe should come from the side, about one inch from the bottom, and a drain cock should be set in below the feed pipe outlet, to drain off any water which may possibly accumulate in the tank.

The oil is pumped by a common tank hand pump from the oil reservoir into the feed tank. Our reservoir is made like a cistern and walled with cement, and is below the floor of one of our sheds.

Operating the Burners.

These burners, like all burners which use steam for vaporizing, will not work unless there is some steam for them to use. Therefore, after the boiler is once steamed up, it is well not to let the steam pressure get below five or ten pounds, unless another boiler is steamed up and may be called upon for a supply of steam to the burners; or a small auxiliary boiler can be used for a supply of steam till the steam in the main boiler is up.

When we close down our fires in the morning, which we usually do if the sun is shining and the weather will permit, we cut off the steam from the houses as soon as the boiler pressure gets down to about ten pounds. We close all drafts and dampers in the chimney and hold the heat in the furnace and boiler all day easily, and the steam pressure will stay around the 10-pound mark till time to fire up in the evening.

When we start the fire we usually run the pressure to the 20-pound mark or higher before turning the steam into the houses. We do this because we find the burners work better at twenty or twenty-five pounds than at a lower pressure. At the higher pressure the steam is hotter and will more perfectly vaporize and atomize the oil.

The Trick of Firing.

One of the great secrets of success with this burner is its adaptability. The hotter the fire you need, the hotter and higher the steam pressure you can carry. On some cold nights we carried thirty pounds and got results in the firebox that would be almost impossible with coal.

The burners should supply an almost white-hot flame, with no smoke, and the quantity of oil and steam should be so proportioned that enough steam is used to vaporize and atomize the oil properly without sufficient excess to act as an extinguisher to the flame.

A low lattice wall of fire-brick across the furnace, about three feet from the nozzle of the burner, is a good thing. It steadies the flame and also spreads it. These brick become extremely hot and their presence is a benefit in aiding the perfect combustion of the oil. Our lattice wall fell down after a few weeks and the top of the rough pile of fire-brick in the furnace seems to serve the same purpose. W. H. Culp.

NEW YORK CLUB MEETING.

There was an attendance of 125 at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club February 12, when R. Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., gave a splendid address illustrated with the stereopticon. J. H. Pepper showed views of the Detroit conventions and J. A. Shaw showed views in Bermuda. C. H. Totty told of the preparations for the National Flower Show.

The following were elected to membership: H. M. Robinson, Boston; P. J. Foley, Chicago; Thos. W. Head, Bergenfield, N. J.; Wm. Macdonald and Wm. Muir, Yonkers; Arthur Buckholz, Woodside; G. F. Neipp, Chatham, N. J.; F. C. Read, Orange, N. J.; Herman Mende, Secaucus, N. J.; C. C. Trepel, Brooklyn; Robert Leach, Jersey City; J. C. Silbert, Paul Meconi and Jos. H. Vocke.

Proposals numbered twenty, as follows: Patrick Welch, W. N. Rudd, J. A. Valentine, W. F. Kasting, R. Vincent, Jr., W. R. Nicholson, F. W. Armitage, Max Richter, G. H. Mustoe, Wm. Setton, Frank Whitney, Peter Buerlein, Oscar Boehler, F. B. Abrahams, Julius Chevalley, B. A. Snyder, Geo. Cotsonas, Fred Smith, W. C. Otte and F. C. Scherer.

Chairman Kessler reported for the outing committee the selection of July 2 and Whetzel's. The dinner committee reported tickets selling fast for the anniversary banquet March 23. There were many other reports and much miscellaneous business, with many discussions, making the evening a full one.

The exhibits were as follows:

From A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass., Stocks Queen Alexandra, Empress Elizabeth and Princess Alice, awarded cultural commendation and certificate.

From H. B. McKnight, Newark, No. 2, a dark pink seedling carnation, cross of Victory and Winsor, given thanks of club.

From J. D. Cockcroft, Northport, L. I., Carnation Northport, scored 86 points, preliminary certificate.

From A. L. Miller, Brooklyn, particularly fine O. P. Bassett carnations, voted thanks of club.

From Frank Niquet, Patchogue, N. Y., Carnation Improved Enchantress, given thanks of club.

From C. H. Totty, Carnation Wodenethe, previously certificated.

From Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, No. 618, white seedling, awarded preliminary certificate.

From John F. Marsden, Far Rockaway, White Enchantress and Mrs. C. W. Ward carnations, given thanks of club.

From Henry Weston, Hempstead, N. Y., pink seedling, given thanks of club.

From Traendly & Schenck, Carnation Salmon Beauty, scored 88 points, preliminary certificate.

From F. E. Whitney, Fishkill, N. Y., sport of Winsor, given thanks of club.

From Charles Weber, Lynbrook, N. Y., Carnation Brooklyn, already certificated.

From A. Demeusy, Flatbush, Carnation White Wonder, given thanks of club.

From Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., Carnation Gorgeous, scored 90 points, preliminary certificate; Carnation Benora, scored 85 points, preliminary certificate.

From Wm. Tricker, Arlington, N. J., Lachenalia Nelsoni, voted thanks of club.

From John Lewis Childs, Floral Park, N. Y., alla Elliottiana, voted thanks of club.

From W. W. Mathews, Great Neck, L. I., reesia Purity, voted thanks of club.

Monday afternoon F. H. Traendly gave a dinner in honor of President Vincent, at Cavanagh's, thoroughly enjoyed by the nearly twenty who were present.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

Club Meeting.

Yellow is the color most affected by the 1912 debutantes in the world of roses, according to a talk delivered by S. S. Skidelsky at the monthly meeting of the Kentucky Florists' Association, held February 7, at 560 Fourth avenue.

Two new members were added to the association, bringing its total membership up to fifty. They were Miss Emma Baumer and M. Pontrich. Henry Fuchs was elected trustee of the association for a term of one year. The question of securing a permanent hall for the meetings was discussed, and several offers read, but no action was taken.

A spirited discussion followed the suggestion that the association endeavor to secure the 1913 convention of the Society of American Florists. After several speakers declared warmly in favor of the plan, and others were no less emphatic in demanding that all idea of securing the convention be abandoned, it was decided to hold the question open until the next regular meeting in March, which will be held at the establishment of Henry Fuchs.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Bloomington, Ill.—George Callahan, formerly with the Phoenix Nursery, has gone into partnership with W. T. Hempstead.

Fargo, N. D.—C. Siebrecht, Jr., formerly manager of the Siebrecht Floral Co., at Winona, Minn., is now manager of the decorating department of Smedley & Co., in this city.

Sandpoint, Idaho.—W. L. Foster has completed one greenhouse, 21 x 100, and intends to erect two more houses during the coming summer. He will grow a general line of stock for the trade.

Independence, Mo.—In spite of the fact that the greenhouses, office and growing stock of the S. Bryson Ayres Co. were recently destroyed by fire, the firm is again in a position to fill orders promptly.

Hornell, N. Y.—C. G. James, of C. G. James & Son, announces that he is going into partnership with L. J. Brundage, of Dundee, N. Y., and that about April 1 the firm will begin the erection of 10,000 square feet of glass at Penn Yan, N. Y.

Middletown, O.—H. G. Behrens and G. A. Beckman have opened a store at 136 West Eighth street under the name of the Busy Bees Floral Co. They state that they will build a range of greenhouses in the spring.

Waukon, Ia.—Mrs. R. L. Van Nice, of the Van Nice Greenhouses, has purchased materials from the John C. Moninger Co. for another house. She has been growing and marketing vegetables and flowering plants for some years.

Bay City, Mich.—Martin Keit is preparing to put in new heating apparatus during the summer. He has about 20,000 feet of glass, heated by steam from a boiler in a pit, but the boiler has aged rapidly during the severe weather of the last few weeks.

Navesink, N. Y.—The will of Mrs. Elizabeth H. Latham, probated February 3, gives real estate worth $25,000 to William Do Vesty, who was her employee in the florists' business. The will says the bequest is made as a mark of appreciation of his long and faithful service.

Saco, Me.—The business conducted for some years on Beach street, near Laurel Hill cemetery, by George L. and James D. Mahoney has been sold by the Mahoneys to the Saco Flower Co., Frank Banigan, manager. Mr. Banigan has been connected with a similar business in Boston for many years. The Messrs. Mahoney will continue the branch of the business dealing in shrubbery, evergreen trees, etc.

Morristown, N. J.—R. A. Elliott reports good business. He has a grand lot of carnations.

Wappingers Falls, N. Y.—Joseph Jones & Sons are cutting quite freely on their carnations and keeping busy with the coal pile this cold weather.

Seguin, Tex.—The shipping season is on and H. L. Neal reports everyone working overtime. His whole force has been laid up with the grip, but the urgency of business will not permit of sickness.

Louisville, Ky.—Fire January 31 destroyed the building on Jefferson street in which the store of William Walker was located. The total loss was $50,000, to which the florist contributed between $2,000 and $3,000.

Syracuse, N. Y.—D. M. Edwards, president of the E. W. Edwards & Son dry goods store corporation, has built a range of greenhouses at 817 James street and states that they are to be used for commercial purposes.

Columbus, O.—A residence belonging to Frank F. Miller, of the Columbus Floral Co., and located on his farm on the Groveport pike, was totally destroyed by fire on the night of February 4. The dwelling was occupied by Paul M. Halbrooks, who manages the farm. The loss was estimated at over $3,000.

Brighton, Mass.—W. H. Elliott delivered an address at a recent meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Association, held in French hall, at the Agricultural College, Amherst. On the same day he also lectured before the class on floriculture, with "Commercial Roses" as his subject.

Middletown, N. Y.—J. Meiklejohn, formerly the decorator at the Cafe d'Opera and the Hotel Knickerbocker in New York, has opened a store at the corner of Wickham avenue and North street, and a branch in the Wallace block. Mr. Meiklejohn had a formal opening January 31 and presented his customers with handsome souvenirs.

Mancelona, Mich.—Henry Lesher, fern dealer, entertained his fern workers of the past season with a dance and banquet, February 7. The hall was decorated with evergreens, ferns, and streamers of pink, green and yellow. The dining room was decorated with evergreens and the tables with ferns and carnations. Covers were laid for sixty guests. All enjoyed the evening and hoped it would be an annual affair.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THE price of greenhouse glass continues extremely low.

MANY houses send only retail price lists to those who do not write on printed letter-heads.

THE Horticultural Society of Chicago has offered two silver and two bronze medals and one grand silver and one grand bronze medal for competition at the National Flower Show to be given in New York in 1913.

E. H. WILSON, of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston, has been awarded the Victoria medal of honor, a decoration never before conferred on any one outside of the British isles, because of distinguished services to horticulture.

WE are a hard people to please; our trade never is good in summer, and this winter has been too cold for brisk business. That's like the iceman who last winter complained that it was not cold enough to make ice and this winter laments that it is too cold to cut it.

L. MERTON GAGE, secretary of the American Gladiolus Society, is distributing Bulletin No. 4 of the society, consisting principally of the proceedings of the Baltimore meeting, with which is included the preliminary schedule for the exhibition to be held at Chicago in August. Those wishing copies should address Mr. Gage at Orange, Mass.

WHILE Bradstreet's comparisons of wholesale prices show most of the necessities of life to be at the high point of cost, building materials are an exception. Lumber is not much changed, but glass and pipe both are considerably cheaper than two years ago and some cheaper than in January, 1911. Bricks are higher, but nails, lime and cement are lower.

THERE has been another week of severely cold weather, general throughout the United States. For the greenhouse man long continued below-zero temperatures make more or less real the slang phrase about "everything goin' out and nothin' comin' in." This has been the hardest winter in many years, but, with all deference to the little animal that saw its shadow recently, it can not last much longer.

WELL posted jobbers of window glass predict that there will be a rather sharp advance in the market before the end of the present month. During the last few weeks greenhouse glass has sold at the lowest prices on record and there has been much unrest among the manufacturers, many of whom have been unable to operate their factories at prevailing prices. In spite of the great quantity of glass sold last year, much of which has not yet been used, florists all over the country have been buying in the last few weeks as heavily as ever before, in many cases taking advantage of the low prices to anticipate future needs. It is an old device to hasten buying by the prediction of an advance in prices, but this is an argument not heard for many months in the glass trade.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

NATIONAL SHOW SCHEDULE.

The preliminary schedule of plant classes and premiums has just been issued for the Third National Flower Show, to be held in the new Grand Central Palace, Forty-sixth street and Lexington avenue, New York, April 5 to 12, 1913. Embracing, as it does, including the American Rose Society's plant classes, a total of 273 classes, it is the most comprehensive schedule for plants ever issued for an American exhibition, with medals and money premiums sufficient to insure that the classes will be well filled.

The National Flower Show committee consists of Charles H. Totty, chairman, Madison, N. J.; W. P. Craig, Philadelphia; W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; J. A. Valentine, Denver; Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass., and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J. The local governing board in New York consists of Frank H. Traendly, chairman; Harry A. Bunyard, Walter F. Sheridan, W. H. Duckham and Joseph A. Manda.

A complete schedule, which will include all cut flower classes of the American Rose Society, Carnation Society, Sweet Pea Society, Gladiolus Society, National Association of Gardeners, and kindred associations, will be issued in August, 1912.

Those wishing copies of the plant schedule, now ready, or information, should apply to John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The latter part of the week ending February 10 was again severely cold, and the week, which had started with some increase in demand, gave an unsatisfactory result because of the dull business the last three days. The flowers in heaviest supply were those which require moderate temperatures for their satisfactory sale.

The present week opened with a rush of business for St. Valentine's day. February 14 has come to be a day that retail florists should reckon with; the demand has increased decidedly in each of the recent years, but the possibilities of the day are only beginning to be appreciated. The number of late orders by wire, both for cut flowers and for St. Valentine's day supply specialties, proved that many retailers had underestimated the demand. Both Monday and Tuesday there was a heavy shipping demand, and Tuesday and Wednesday local retailers bought freely. The call was for certain specialties. Everybody wanted red roses. Violets were the biggest seller, but pink sweet peas were in scarcely less request, and the call for orchids and valley was the heaviest known in weeks.

Unfortunately, St. Valentine's day demand did not affect the call for carnations to any appreciable extent. Several bright days, even if cold, have gone a long ways toward bringing on the carnation crops, and the supply in this department has become rather

We have a big crop of
CARNATIONS
Fancy Stock--All Colors

We are on with a cut of Carnations that is of importance to every buyer in the Chicago market. It solves all difficulties as to supply and price. The crop is so large that we are able to quote a lower price in spite of the fact that quality is right up to the best midwinter standard. All the leading varieties in each color. Now is the time to push Carnations. Glad to quote special prices on special quantities.

FANCY SWEET PEAS

Long-stemmed stock, all colors

These are fine Peas—no better ever were offered at this season of the year—the best winter-blooming varieties done to perfection. These Peas have made a hit the last two winters, and our growers increased the supply for this season. We ship fresh from the vines, putting the stock in your hands with all its first fragrance.

Beauties

We never are without Beauties. Your orders always will be filled if you send them here. A big cut of short Beauties now on.

Killarneys

The quality of our Killarneys is the talk of the town—and we have quantity, too, but most of them are select and special lengths.

VIOLETS

We handle the cream of the crops

Our Violets are not only the best in the market, but our supply is the largest. If you haven't tried our Violets, let us show you how good they are and what a nice profit you can make by pushing them.

Cattleyas

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always get your orders filled if you place them with us.

Fancy Valley

Fine Valley is something you need every day in the year. We always have it.

Fancy Cattleyas

FINEST IN THE LAND, $5.00 to $6.00 per doz.

Our Cattleyas should not be confounded with the ordinary stock found in the cut flower markets—it is much finer than what is ordinarily offered. Splendid, large flowers, highly colored—a quite superior quality. And we have quantity. We have many standing orders for regular shipments of these. Don't you want to place such an order?

LILIES
Giganteum Rubrum Auratum

There is no flower now in market that makes as big a show for the money as these Giganteums do. We can supply in thousand lots as easily as by the dozen. Glad to quote special prices on quantities.

CARNATIONS

We handle more Carnations than any other house in the west and do a very large shipping business with them because the buyers know our stock will carry. If you are not quite satisfied with the stock you are getting, it will pay you to write us about it. Let us quote on quantities.

VIOLETS
Princess of Wales Marie Louise Californias

We are able to supply all the popular varieties in quantity and the season of large crops, fine quality and low prices is here. From now till Easter is the best time for pushing Violets. You push them; we supply you.

WHITE LILAC

The only supply in the west. Extra fine stock. Can furnish at $1.50 per bunch.

FANCY FREESIA

This is PURITY, the long-stemmed, pure white Freesia, and it is fine.

SWEET PEAS

We can furnish nice, long-stemmed Peas in all colors.

VALLEY

Always headquarters for the finest cut Valley—any quantity.

greater than the present demand calls for. Prices are weakening. Probably when the trade at large realizes what good carnations can now be had in quantity at moderate prices the demand will increase, but there is little likelihood of any shortage from this time on. There has been some complaint of lack of keeping qualities, but this seems likely to be remedied by a few days of moderate weather.

It is in roses that the only shortage exists. Beauties are scarce and none too good, but there is no extensive demand for these, though Valentine's day made a spurt. Short roses of all varieties are difficult to supply, but there is plenty of the high-priced grades. Sweet peas were scarce for a couple of days, but in general the supply is good. Following the St. Valentine's day special demand for violets there was a sharp reaction in the prices. Orchids continue abundant, with prices low. The best tulips are Klehm's Novelty, but some first-class yellows also are seen. A few Murillo are coming in, but are not yet what can be called good. Daffodils are more abundant. Bulb stock had a few days of better demand early in the week, but generally is rather overplentiful.

Mexican ivy is the green in greatest request. Almost everybody is using it, and for all sorts of work. It has made adiantum an unprofitable crop.

Various Notes.

The violet train, due at 8:45 Saturday evening, arrived at noon Sunday, and the train due Sunday evening got in so that delivery was made at 3 p. m. Monday. The wholesalers have had a great deal of trouble with shipping orders delayed by the non-arrival of the violets, but there has been no time up to February 13 at which the market was cleaned up.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is doing business this week in its new store at 72 and 74 East Randolph street, second floor, one door east of the A. L. Randall Co. and the E. C. Amling Co. The new Poehlmann quarters have new fixtures throughout. The work was completed before the store was occupied, so that when removal was made it was accomplished during the noon hour Saturday. At 11 o'clock business ceased in the old store, and at 1 o'clock it began in the new place. The new store is 40x167 feet, one-third of the rear being double-decked. The new ice-box is 11x50 feet. The new zinc-topped tables are double width, so that sorters can work on both sides, handling the longest stock without interfering with each other. The office force has fine quarters across the front of the building. A private office has been fitted up for John Poehlmann, though those who know the activities of the president of the company consider it the one feature of the equipment which will have no use — he always is too busy selling to sit in an office.

Hans Yepsen is in Frances Willard hospital, where he underwent an operation February 9.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is getting estimates on material for two houses, each 50x300 feet, though it has not yet been settled that they will be built this season.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., says they already have sold more

MAGNOLIA LEAVES

$1.50 per hamper this week. (to Feb. 22)

We made this special introductory offer good only for the week of Feb. 1 to 8 and it brought a flood of orders. But not all were in time—every mail brings letters from those who say they would like to get in on this big bargain. So, to let everybody have another chance.

WE ARE REPEATING THE SPECIAL OFFER

We are willing to stake our reputation on the quality of this stock. Probably all users of this now indispensable article know that there are as many qualities as there are salesmen, but there are no finer Magnolia Leaves than these—money won't buy better. We are selling them to the largest users and the most critical trade. Average 1000 leaves to the hamper. We are so sure they will suit you that we will ship anywhere on approval—send them back at our expense if you want to—but you won't.

Customers having orders for these goods placed with us for later shipment are invited to take advantage of this special offer by having the shipment go forward at once.

SPECIAL—We want to hear from buyers who can use 50 hampers or more a year. For these we have a very special contract proposition. Not necessary to ship all at once. Will make deliveries as wanted. Write today. There's money in it.

After spending several weeks in Chicago and vicinity, Sydney B. Wertheimer left for the east February 13.

George Asmus, who has been manager of the Chicago flower shows for years, will act in that capacity again for the spring show. He will open downtown offices this week. Instead of competitive classes for retail florists, the Horticultural Society has decided on non-competitive awards and placed the matter in the hands of a special committee. A class for the best display of sweet peas has been added to the premium list, with $10 for first prize and $7 for second. The final premium list is on the press and will be put in the mails this week. Advance information as to the extent of exhibits in the show will be greatly appreciated by the manager, as he has no experience on a spring show to guide him in anticipating space requirements.

W. N. Rudd will address the Detroit Florists' Club February 19. His topic will be "Where Some of Us Are Lame." No trouble at all telling who picked out that title.

Weiland & Risch thought they had enough fuel on the place to carry them through the season, but because of the severe weather they are this week taking in ten additional carloads.

A. L. Vaughan says that the tulips in demand are Couronne d'Or and Novelty, though there was a call for red before Valentine's day.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association says that New Orleans customers are being heard from with orders for stock for Mardi Gras, which comes at the opening of next week. The shipments will go out Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

January 9 M. C. Gunterberg lost her uncle, A. M. Gunterberg, and February 11 his daughter, Clara, died. She was 20 years of age. The mother is left alone in the world.

C. A. Samuelson says that since Christmas he has had about as good a run of funeral work as he ever has known. Most of his business comes over the telephone, and the severely cold weather has not been nearly so important as the scarcity of roses.

Two candidates have developed to contest with Peter Reinberg for the Willow Bowl-shaped Handle Basket

A basket that will appeal to the heart of every true florist at once because of its numerous possibilities is seen in the illustration at the left. The mere sight of this basket (which is finished in Blue Antique, also Havana Brown and Natural Willow) suggests a nest for Scotch heather ornamented with dainty ribbon, or for genistas and daffodils.

This basket can be used charmingly for plants or flowers. One of the many attractions is the handles beginning an inch or so below the top rim—rather out of the usual.

The Rice Standard in baskets is the best, as in all other florists' supplies.

While doing the work, Otto Wittbold offered encouragement to the proposed Edgebrook-Morton Grove road by cutting off the northeast corner of the houses to allow the required space between the range and the railroad. Stock is in fine shape and Mr. Wittbold says the occasional day or two of warmer weather is helping to move it more rapidly.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Roses are rather scarce. Carnations are plentiful in all colors. Narcissi are in good supply. Romans are good and the supply is plentiful. Orchids are good and plentiful. Tulips are now coming in. A few Dutch hyacinths are now to be seen. Violets are plentiful, but the demand is light. Blooming plants sell well and are in good supply. Sweet peas are plentiful, but the stems are not as long as last year.

Various Notes.

Arthur Newell is preparing to open a store at the northeast corner of Tenth street and Grand avenue, which is one of the best locations in this city. The store has four large, long show windows, providing the best means of display in the city. The floor of these windows will be white tile and the whole interior will be finished in white enamel. Mr. Newell says that he will spend about $2,000 in fitting up this place. He has a five-year lease on it. We wish him success in his new location.

Mr. Stevens, head grower for W. H. Sawvel, has entered into partnership with two neighbors and the three will at once build three greenhouses, 27½x200 feet. They will be built on Mr. Hipton's farm, across the road from Mr. Sawvel's place. Broken stone is already on the ground. The walls will be of concrete. The J. C. Moninger Co., Chicago, has secured the contract for the material. Work is to commence at once and be completed in time for the carnations, to which the entire plant will be devoted. Getting water to this place will be the greatest task.

A visit to W. H. Sawvel's greenhouses found everything in fine shape except his roses, which are off crop for the present. His carnations are among the best that are grown. He has no trouble in disposing of them and can not supply the demand, as the stems and blooms are extra large. He is now rooting large quantities of carnations for next year, as the whole plant will probably be devoted to carnations and greens. His sweet peas are extra fine and in full bloom. Lilies are grown here in large quantities; some are in bloom and others are timed for Easter. He finds a ready sale for all that he grows at 12½ cents a bloom. His bulb stock is in fine shape. He had a narrow escape from a water famine in the last severe cold spell, as the creek from which the supply was taken froze up almost solid.

Violets seem to be plentiful this winter. The Flower Shop, on Eleventh street, had one-third of the show window devoted to a violet display.

The window of the Rock Flower Co. has recently contained a rich display. Orchids and valley were the leading features. Their decorators are kept quite busy throughout the city.

Ed D. Ellsworth is doing a good business. His early daffodils are fine. His Easter lilies look promising. He is making great preparations for Easter. His spiræas, lilacs and roses are in fine shape. An extra fine lot of hydrangeas in bud are coming in on time for Easter. Mr. Ellsworth has two oil burners in his boilers; he burns the black oil as fuel, paying 2 cents a gallon for it, and states that it costs him about one-half what coal would cost.

H. Kusik, the wholesale commission man, has worked up a splendid trade. He can not supply the demand. At times most of his stock is gobbled up as soon as the express company delivers the shipment. Mr. Kusik is now reaping the benefits of the long looked-for house of this kind. He gets the most of his stock from J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, Ia.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. had the best window display last week that has been shown on Grand avenue for some time. Primroses, cyclamens and azaleas were chiefly used. This window looked good enough for Easter.

D. Freudenthal has been quite busy with funeral work during the last week. He is going to have two new neighbors, the Rock Flower Co. on the south side of his place and Arthur Newell on the north side. This makes six flower shops on Grand avenue now.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade is not at all steady. Some days it makes a spurt, then it slows down, and it keeps one constantly guessing what it is going to do next. There have not been many funerals, and consequently the accumulation had to be dumped, causing a heartache now and then, but, taken as a whole, the growers cannot complain about stock that has been consigned to the dump, for all season it has been barely noticeable.

Tea roses continue to be scarce, although the crisis has passed and we look for improved conditions shortly. Beauties are also scarce, although the crop is improving right along.

Carnations have been a little in excess of the demand, but there has not as yet been any great glut. Prices have remained steady, there being no legitimate reason for cutting. McKinley day passed by without any extra demand for carnations.

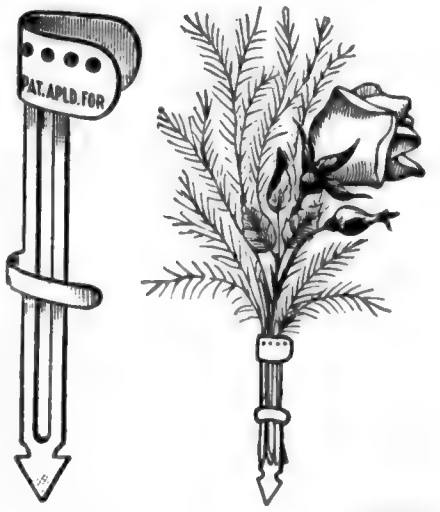
Violets are selling well, and the growers are ready with an extra amount for Valentine's day. There is an abundance of daffodils, but many of them are of an inferior grade.

Club Meeting.

The Colorado Florists' Club had another interesting meeting Monday evening, February 5, at T. M. A. hall. William Horlacher read a paper on "Seeds, Plants and Cut Flower Growing Near the Mediterranean," which was enjoyed by all. Mr. Horlacher visited in Europe years ago, and told of his experiences and the impressions he received at that time, and what he looks for in the future.

Several eastern concerns shipped novelties which were exhibited. F. Dorner & Sons, of La Fayette, Ind., sent some Rosette carnations. From the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., came the new rose, Sunburst. A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., shipped Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney; also some Asparagus Hatcheri. These two roses came through in excellent condition and were much admired. Peter Fisher, of Ellis, Mass., sent blooms of Carnation Benora, also Gorgeous, and it was surprising to note their perfect condition after being cut six days.

Claude E. Cartwright and S. R. Lundy were elected to membership. Applications were received from August Cassier and Verner J. Davis, of Denver, and E. Randall Bierbauer and C. U. Fohn, of Colorado Springs.



The entertainment at the next meeting is in the hands of Charles A. Benson, Will Wilmore and William Horlacher.

Various Notes.

Emil Glauber is bringing in some extra select Killarney and White Killarney.

The Elitch-Long Greenhouses are fortunate in having at this time a good supply of fine Beauties. It is needless to say they find a ready market.

ST. PAUL, MINN.

With more than $3,000 already in the guarantee fund, the promise of cordial coöperation from Minneapolis florists and a pull-together spirit at home, the St. Paul Florists' Association, at its semi-monthly meeting, was greatly encouraged in its plans for the great flower show in the Auditorium next November.

An executive committee was appointed, consisting of L. L. May, O. R. Eckhardt, E. W. Reid, O. J. Olson and A. C. Hansen. The premium committee is made up of L. L. May, Max Kiser and O. J. Olson, of St. Paul, and John Monson and Louis Boeglin, of Minneapolis. The selection of a publicity committee was left in the hands of the executive committee.

Mr. May said that the Minneapolis florists would enter enthusiastically into plans for the St. Paul show, and he added that the Oakland Cemetery Association might do much in the line of exhibits, imitating the Lakewood Cemetery Association, of Minneapolis, at the time of the show in that city.

F. D. Willis thought the association should take especial pains to interest the women, and so insure success.

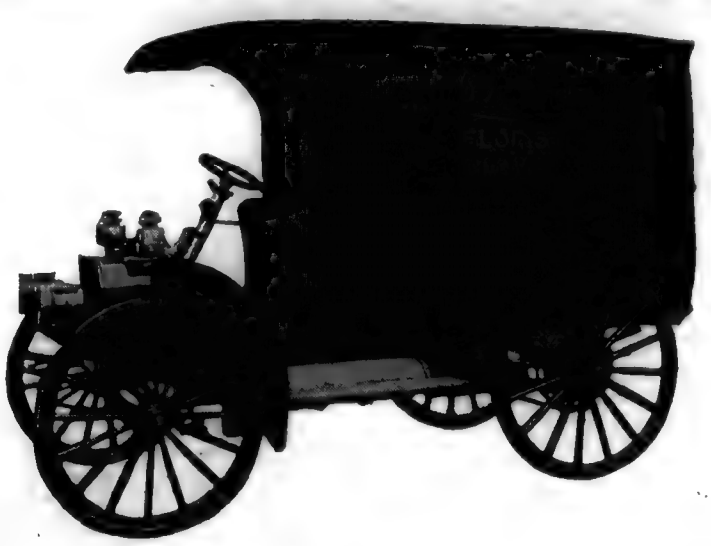
BOSTON.

The Market.

We have had exceptionally severe weather for some days, and this, as usual, has had an adverse effect on the cut flower trade. February 10 was the coldest day of the winter, the maximum temperature hardly rising over the zero mark, with a cutting wind blowing all day, and several shipments of flowers arrived in a frozen condition. The business of the numerous street fakers was tied up for several days. These dealers dispose of large quantities of flowers which would otherwise be wasted, and their absence always is felt.

Roses continue to sell better than any other flowers and are still in rather short supply. All varieties and grades are selling well, prices being about the same as a week ago. Carnations, on the other hand, have been a veritable glut on most days and prices are unusually low, even on fancies. The quality leaves little to be desired. Violets, which were druggy early last week, have recovered and are selling fairly well. Sweet peas are in tremendous supply and prices on even the best quality are not what they should be.

Bulbous stock is abundant, and few of either the best narcissi or tulips bring over $2 per hundred, many going at half this price. Some good antirrhinums and mignonettes are seen. There is quite a good sale for these, also for marguerites. Lilies and callas are each in good supply. Much of the valley coming in is of poor quality. Pansies are not plentiful. Freesia is still abundant, but the quality is below par on much of it. For dimorphothecas and calendulas there is a good call. Cattleya Trianæ is too abundant; $4 per dozen is the average price. There is a good supply of Lælia anceps, dendrobiums and other orchids. Gardenias are of fine quality, the better grades moving well. Asparagus and adiantum are selling quite well. The severe weather has adversely affected plant trade.



Various Notes.

F. H. Houghton, on Park street, always has his windows and store arranged with exquisite taste. Baskets containing a mixture of dimorphotheca and calendulas were taking, also others containing Acacia pubescens. Mr. Houghton states that trade is good, the sale for old-fashioned bouquets being particularly good of late.

William H. Elliott is getting moderate shipments of roses from his Madbury establishment. Rhea Reid, as grown by him, is good. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Bon Silene and Safrano are all in demand. Mrs. Waddell is also proving quite popular. Asparagus elongatus is something of a novelty, but Mr. Hutson, the head salesman, states that it does not take well.

I noted in H. R. Comley's window on Park street some pots of the pretty Tritonia crocata last week.

E. H. Wilson, of the Arnold Arboretum, has just been awarded the Victoria medal of honor by the Royal Horticultural Society of England for his distinguished services to horticulture. There are sixty holders of this coveted medal. When one dies, another is se-

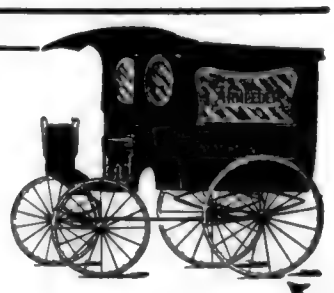
From Every Standpoint
The Perfect Delivery System for Florists

It means money and reputation to a Florist to get his plants and flowers delivered quickly—an hour or two of delay often means a loss of their first crisp freshness.

When decorating a house or church it is most necessary that the Florist and his plants should get there in a hurry and back in a hurry.

AN INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL CAR

will make deliveries in one-third the time required with a horse-drawn vehicle. It means better service—lower cost of delivery—a larger territory—and as a result, more business.



The International Commercial Car is the most practical car on the market. The motor is simple, well built, and economical in fuel consumption. The wheels have solid rubber tires—no delays due to punctures and blowouts. The International Commercial Car is sold at the lowest price consistent with high-grade materials and the best workmanship.

Write and tell us what conditions you have to meet and we will be glad to furnish you with figures showing the saving an International Commercial Car will make for you—figures based on the experience of other business men.

Waterproof Crepe Paper

The use of Waterproof Crepe Paper has become universal.

It makes a fine plant more tempting, adds a dressiness and a finish that enhances its value.

The advantage of Waterproof Crepe Paper is that the plants may be dressed ahead of time; the paper that won't spoil when wet is the paper you need.

It can be had in these colors: Nile, moss, lavender, violet, white, pink, yellow and red.

The Rice Standard in Waterproof Crepe Paper is the best, as in all other florists' supplies.

Fine antirrhinums, mignonette and myosotis from R. P. Petersen, of Saxonville; excellent Richmond roses from R. T. McGorum, and splendid single violets from Nelson & Johnson, of Framingham, are being received by W. A. Hastings at the Boston Flower Exchange.

William Sim is cutting a grand lot of sweet peas, many thousands daily. His leading sorts are Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. F. J. Dolansky, Christmas Pink and Florence Denzer. He finds a heavy call for violets and is obliged to pick closely.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, who grows some 50,000 carnations, is this season having excellent success with White Enchantress, Queen, of which he is still a large grower; Pink Delight, Beacon and Enchantress.

Penn, on Bromfield street, had a pretty window arranged with yellow trumpet narcissi last week. Plants of Phœnix Roebelenii and Cibotium Schiedei were used. In one window a group of crotons with pans of yellow narcissi, the pans hidden by cork work, was effective.

Robert Cameron was the lecturer at the usual Saturday meeting in Horticultural hall February 10, his subject being, "Flower Culture, Particularly Annuals." It was the most severe day of the winter, but a good audience enjoyed the lecture and later discussed it in an animated manner.

William Nicholson leaves February 20 for a western trip and will include Chicago, Joliet, Richmond, Lafayette and other carnation centers in his itinerary. He has quite recovered from his recent sickness.

John Barr has a seedling carnation, something in the way of May Day, which proves popular at the stores. His new Mrs. B. P. Cheney keeps up its good reputation, and Pink Delight is fine with him.

The Boston Cut Flower Co., on Bromfield street, reports trade as good. They are making special offers of yellow trumpet narcissi and sweet peas and sell immense quantities.

W. D. Howard, of Milford, is an excellent carnation grower. His flowers of White Perfection, White Enchantress, Beacon, Fenn and Pink Delight are equal to the best seen at the Boston Flower Exchange.

Thomas Roland is sending some fine acacia in variety, and amaryllis, to the Flower Growers' Sales Co.

H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, has some fine light pink stocks and Prosperity tulips at the Boston Flower Exchange, in addition to his heavy line of trumpet narcissi.

Among the carnations coming from the Halifax Garden Co., Apple Blossom, White Wonder, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Gloriosa and Pink Delight are excellent.

Paul E. Richwagen, of Needham, has a beautiful pink antirrhinum of which no other growers seem to have stock; E. J. Rogean sells it on sight.

The directors of the Boston Coöperative Market held a meeting February 10. Business at the market has held up well, even through the recent somewhat dull period.

The meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club February 20 will bring out one of the largest gatherings in the club's history. Many novelties, especially in roses and carnations, will be shown. J. Otto Thilow's stereopticon lecture will also be a great feature.

N. H. Silverman, on Winter street, reports excellent business.

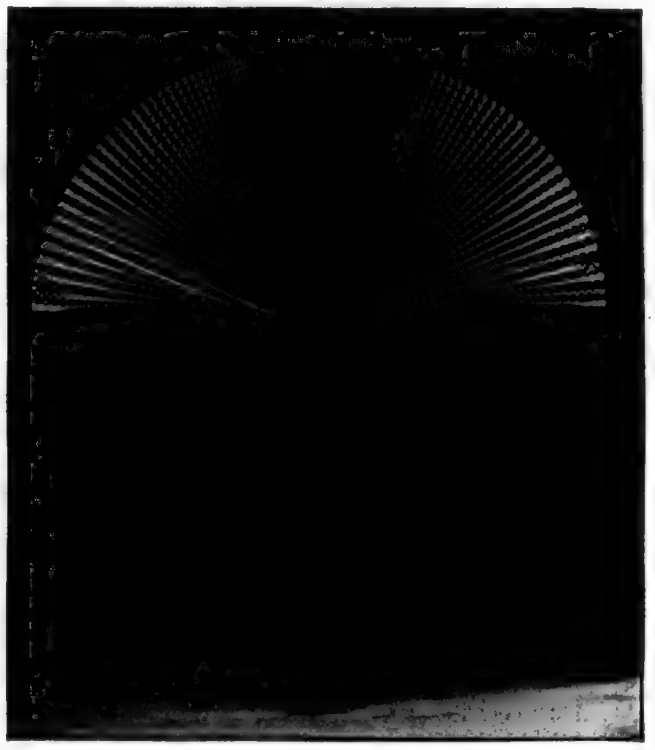
The Market.

We have had a return of zero weather and with it came frozen shipments and a demoralized state of business at the week's end. Saturday night prices fell rapidly and the ice-boxes were crowded with the surplus. The weather was moderating as this week opened and it is hoped the last of the cold waves has been seen for this season.



There is an abundance of everything and a surplus of daffodils and freesia. Also tulips of the short-stemmed grade are not moving at all. The drop in values of carnations was especially marked last week, large sales of the finest being made as low as $2 per hundred. The prices of roses have retrograded about twenty per cent, but this does not apply to the novelties, for these are always snapped up on sight and most of them are made the attraction, carefully labeled and exploited, in the windows of the retail stores.

There is no reduction in the orchid shipments. It is a problem where they all come from. Prices are very low and the shipping demand is light. A good many shipments of these were badly injured by the zero weather. Valley drags, little of it going above $2 per hundred. Gardenias are finding their top at $3 per dozen and they must be especially long-stemmed and selected to bring this figure. Most of the receipts sell below $1 a dozen. The best lilies are selling at $1 a dozen and under, and violets in large quantities go at the buyer's option. Even in hundreds 40 cents was the top quotation last week. There is no shortage of anything in the line of sweet peas, tulips, pansies, narcissi, daisies, lilac or mignonette.

Various Notes.

This may safely be termed banquet week in this section. Wednesday evening, February 14, the third annual dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society took place, with H. A. Bunyard as toastmaster. Thursday evening, February 15, the Greater New York Florists' Association, of Brooklyn, will celebrate its second anniversary at Raub's, and Friday evening, February 16, the New Jersey Floricultural Society makes merry in its annual dinner at East Orange. There will be a big attendance from New York at both of them.

H. M. Robinson returned to Boston February 10, more than pleased with his reception in the metropolis. Store and basement are insufficient for the business and another floor is to be added.

Julius Loewith, who represents Conrad Appel, of Darmstadt; A. Rousset, of Paris; Linersan, of Rotterdam, and other European houses, will make his annual trip to Europe in May.

Bowe, McConnell, Davis, Myer, Bunyard, Schling, Clarke's Sons, Lee and many others have been busy with banquets and receptions and funeral designs of great size and beauty during the first weeks of February.

Charles Millang met with a serious accident while on his way home in his auto Wednesday evening, February 7. He was making good speed when the brass pipe attached to the horn shook loose and caught in the wheels. The jamming of the wheel caused the machine to skid and overturn. Mr. Millang was caught under the car. It turned again and left him lying unconscious in the roadway. He was taken to the Flatbush hospital, where it was at first feared his injuries were fatal. Over 100 stitches were necessary to close the cuts. Mr. Millang is known and liked by everyone in the trade in this section and it is the unanimous wish that his recovery will be rapid.

Another musician has been added to the family of George Burnett, of Burnett Bros.

The veteran J. K. Allen is again on deck, fully recovered from his recent indisposition.

Frank Adelberger, of Philadelphia, was in the city last week because of the serious illness of his brother.

L. H. Lord, of the Lord Plant Box Co., Minneapolis, called on New York customers last week on his way to Boston.

Fred Schumann, formerly of the wholesale firm of Perkins & Schumann, has purchased the Metz retail business at 182 East One Hundred and Sixteenth street.

Woodrow & Marketos say they have done a heavy plant shipping business ever since New Year's, in spite of the severe weather.

Messrs. Schraeder, superintendent for John D. Rockefeller, and Fay, formerly with Dr. Seward Webb, were in the city February 10, the guests of Arthur T. Boddington.

The Lenox Horticultural Society held its annual ball February 2. This is an event which is eagerly awaited by the whole community. Dancing was indulged in until 1 a. m., with Escher, of Pittsfield, to supply the music, and a splendid program was gone through. In view of the fact that this is leap year, the ladies had to be considered, and they made their choices in one or more of the dances; the novelty of this was much appreciated. Refreshments were excellently served by Mr. McDermott, of this town. About 150 people were present and all the arrangements were well carried out by the various committees.

A regular meeting of the society was held February 3. There was a full attendance of the officers, and about fifty members and friends were present. Henry Heeremans and Murray Scott were elected to active membership.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

St. Valentine's day, an increasingly popular flower day, closed a week that was more active at the close than at the beginning. Flowers, with a few exceptions, were plentiful, affording plenty of good material for the orders. The out-of-town demand was a feature of the week, many excellent orders going out from the wholesale houses that make a specialty of shipping. Local business was fair. The fashionable florists were particularly busy.

Beauties are extremely scarce. It seems as though all the growers are completely cut out. Orders that could easily have been filled a fortnight ago now cause grave anxiety and are almost impossible to fill. Other roses are in fair supply—the shorter grades and white are most difficult to obtain. The rose market generally is buoyant. Carnations are just the reverse. Many of the flowers coming into town are superb, but the supply exceeds the demand and prices are declining. Sweet peas are abundant; the quantity consumed is large, but they often require pushing and the poorer grades must be offered cheaply to sell them. Daffodils continue low in price. Double Von Sions are becoming an important factor, but they do not seem more popular than Golden Spur. The modest violet came forward more prominently on the two days following Lincoln's birthday, prices becoming firmer. The cold weather, bad for flowers generally, has been particularly so for the gardenia; so, too, for the disposal of odds and ends so generally looked forward to on Saturday by the wholesale houses.

The February Meeting.

So great was the interest shown in the meeting of the Florists' Club last week that it has awakened ideas of the possibilities of this meeting among the bright minds in our profession. An attendance that taxed the capacity of the club room; an exhibition worth coming miles to see; an interchange of opinion of greatest value; all these are worthy of encouragement from those interested in floricultural advancement and in the club's welfare.

Samuel S. Pennock suggests that the February meeting of the Florists' Club be devoted in future to an exhibition of novelties and that the meeting be held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall, thus affording abundant seating capacity and a good exhibition room. Mr. Pennock also advocates that invitations be sent to the wives and daughters of the members, their sisters, their cousins and their aunts, to attend this meeting. His idea is that the future of the novelties rests mainly with the ladies and that their judgment on these novelties will be of incalculable value in determining merit or lack of it. President Thilow thought so highly of Mr. Pennock's idea that he at once endorsed it warmly and proposes recommending its adoption in the near future.

John R. Andre, Doylestown, Pa., has replaced his well and cistern with an artesian well, 6-inch bore, worked with a Standard pumping engine.

B. K. Hedrick and Byron Thomas, both carnation specialists of Quakertown, Pa., thoroughly enjoyed last week's Florists' Club's meeting in this city.

Robert A. Craig paid a flying visit to Pittsburgh and Youngstown February 9, returning on Lincoln's birthday.

Walter P. Stokes left February 10 for a fortnight's trip to Bermuda, to recuperate after his recent illness.

A cablegram received February 8 from Robert Craig announced the safe arrival of his party in Porto Rico.

M. Rice & Co. have their second story show room filled with interesting Easter novelties and staples. Their stock is an object lesson in the wonderful strides made in supplies.

are something entirely new that will attract instant attention when filled with Irish Shamrock. They make a combination simply irresistible.

Telegraph, telephone and mail orders should be sent promptly. Don't order too few; this is a good thing, worth pushing.

H. BAYERSDORFER & CO., 1129 Arch Street, PHILADELPHIA

A. N. Pierson spoke of his intention of building a greenhouse 112 feet wide. Mr. Fuerstenberg considers this as an indication that the wide house is gaining in favor with large growers. It is well known that Mr. Fuerstenberg is the foremost exponent of the wide house.

Frederick J. Michell believes that the high price of many vegetable seeds, due to short crop, will be an advantage rather than a detriment to the market. The advances are not sufficient to discourage any but those who grow in immense quantities, for canning, for instance, from sowing their usual quantities of seed.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report St. Valentine's day business as far exceeding that of previous years.

John Wilson, who has been ill, is again at his post.

Berger Bros. are pleased with the location of their new store, it is so easily reached from all sections of the city, as well as from out of town.

William Swayne has returned from Florida.

William J. Baker, it is pleasant to tell, is out again after over a month's detention from his accident.

M. Henry Lynch says the Dingee & Conard Co., West Grove, is rapidly recovering from the loss by fire, which was not nearly so serious as it might have been. The ends of the damaged houses are closed in and work on the heating plant is progressing.

The Market.

The market is again well stocked in most lines. The opening day for this week showed a considerable quantity of blooms that had been held over from the close of last week's business. The general demand has, as a whole, remained steady. The superfluity is caused by the gradual increase in the influx of stock. Prices, while easier, have remained fairly steady. The out-of-town customers utilize many flowers and much green.

Roses of all kinds are still short of the call for them and as a result they clean up at sight almost every day. This shortage has held up the price on other stock, particularly carnations, which are again plentiful; in fact, more than plentiful. The dark colors accumulate most rapidly. The white clean up fairly well, and the Enchantress come next. Since this line has become again sufficient a large part of the call for bulbous flowers has disappeared.

All flowers available for corsages hit somewhat of a slump last week; the cold weather seems to have put a damper on the call for these. Sweet peas are coming in very much stronger and

Various Notes.

Judging from the way C. E. Critchell is still getting in galax, he must intend to supply the country with them. He is storing many more than in any previous year.

H. Moorman & Co. have sold their store, fixtures and supplies and have retired from business.

I regret to report that Ed Buschle, of C. E. Critchell's, has lost his mother. She died February 12.

Miss M. M. Carroll has returned from a successful trip in the south. Miss Carroll has not opened a place of business in Norwood, as erroneously reported last week. She merely receives her mail through Norwood because she is on the road almost entirely. Her warehouse is in Cincinnati and this is her shipping point.

DIRECTION OF HOUSES.

I should like to ask a question regarding east and west greenhouses, as compared with north and south ones, for coolness during the warm season. Is there any decided difference? My location is best suited to north and south houses. I am in the latitude of southeastern Kansas. H. P.

During the hours from nine until four o'clock, when the sun is generally brightest and the mercury the highest, rather more shade will be afforded by the sashbars of a house if it runs north and south than if it stands east and west. There will also be a rather freer movement of the air, without having

DOUBLE CRIMSON COSMOS.

Is there any record of a double crimson cosmos, and will the seed saved from a double one produce double cosmos again? Florists here are of the opinion that it will be single next year. These are the conditions: One stalk among hundreds of crimson produced all double flowers—sixteen petals. It bloomed in early August. G. C. H.

I do not know of any double crimson cosmos on the market, but have seen occasional double, or rather semi-double sports, none of which, however, proved permanent. It is doubtful whether seed produced on a plant which had only one stalk double will yield, at best, more than a small fraction of double flowers. They are more likely to come single altogether. You could perhaps have perpetuated your sport by rooting some cuttings and carrying them over winter in a cool house. If these gave double flowers, further propagation could be carried out. The cuttings root quite readily. C. W.

Bostic, N. C.—The Valdesian Nurseries say that everything is going nicely; big fall trade and the outlook for winter and spring business encouraging. They are preparing to erect a greenhouse in connection with the nursery, on a fine new farm of bottom land they have recently purchased in the incorporate limits of Bostic.

DOUBLE CRIMSON COSMOS.

Is there any record of a double crimson cosmos, and will the seed saved from a double one produce double cosmos again? Florists here are of the opinion that it will be single next year. These are the conditions: One stalk among hundreds of crimson produced all double flowers—sixteen petals. It bloomed in early August. G. C. H.

I do not know of any double crimson cosmos on the market, but have seen occasional double, or rather semi-double sports, none of which, however, proved permanent. It is doubtful whether seed produced on a plant which had only one stalk double will yield, at best, more than a small fraction of double flowers. They are more likely to come single altogether. You could perhaps have perpetuated your sport by rooting some cuttings and carrying them over winter in a cool house. If these gave double flowers, further propagation could be carried out. The cuttings root quite readily. C. W.

Bostic, N. C.—The Valdesian Nurseries say that everything is going nicely; big fall trade and the outlook for winter and spring business encouraging. They are preparing to erect a greenhouse in connection with the nursery, on a fine new farm of bottom land they have recently purchased in the incorporate limits of Bostic.

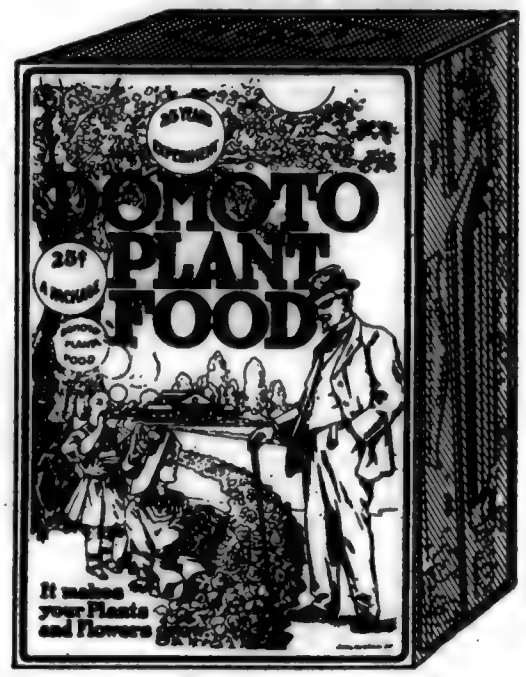
Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies five pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

Hayward, Cal.—Ernest Lundgren, proprietor of a nursery and vegetable garden here, says the weather has been so good on the coast this winter that there "has been no time for anything but work."

Portland, Ore.—Crout & Wilson, who are said to be the largest growers of greenhouse lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers on the Pacific coast, are just picking a crop of 150,000 Asparagus Sprengeri seeds, indoor grown.



San Bernardino, Cal.—Probably the largest funeral ever held here was that of W. F. Buck, a Santa Fe official, February 5. R. D. Schuman says it gave him the biggest day's business he ever has had. Besides the local designs, dozens of others came from all points along the line of the Santa Fe and there was a carload of floral pieces from Los Angeles.

The Market.

We have had a few showers of warm rain, but only enough to lay the dust and freshen outside stock a little. Flowers of all kinds, which have been getting more plentiful for the last few weeks, are now in full bloom, and prices all along the line are lowering in a noticeable manner. Roses and carnations are of as good quality as it is possible to have them, and, with several weeks of continued warm weather and lots of sunshine, springtime is here in all its glory. The early narcissi and daffodils have never been in greater profusion or better form, and the public takes kindly to them, so that they are, with the possible exception of violets, the most popular flowers.

Fruit blossoms of half a dozen sorts sell well, and tulips, while not so much in demand as last season, seem to move fairly well. Freesias, Romans and valley are seen mostly in funeral work, and the growers complain of too much stock being produced. From advices and observation, there will be plenty of lilies for Easter, and some patches are already flowering profusly. In other kinds of stock there is little or no change, and as long as this beautiful weather continues prices will be low.

Various Notes.

The H. M. Sanborn Co. has sold the Dwight-Way Nursery, Berkeley, to A. Rossi & Co., the well-known green goods firm.

Leading nurserymen of Alameda, Santa Clara and several other counties formed a delegation last week and proceeded to Sacramento and were successful in having the horticultural inspectors remove the quarantine laws against fruit trees from their respective localities.

The Market.

Business has been fine since last writing, and stock of all kinds cleans up well daily. There has been quite a shortage in medium and short grades of roses, but no difficulty is found in filling orders for long-stemmed stock. The demand for Beauties has almost doubled and several of the retailers had to call on the northern growers, owing to scarcity of local stock. The best, or greenhouse, carnations are not too plentiful, but there is no shortage in outdoor stock.

Bulbous stock is coming in fine shape and it will take some pretty tall hustling to move the large numbers of flowers that will be in the market by the time these notes appear. Golden Spur and Maximus are leaders in the narcissi. Freesias are plentiful and good from indoors and from cloth houses, and the dry weather is all in favor of these flowers where irrigation is carried on. Sweet peas and violets are both plentiful and there is an abundance of stocks, centaureas and other outdoor flowers.

The almond boughs in full bloom that are now offered in quantity are fine for decorations, several retailers using them with good effect in their window displays. Acacia is also in. The scarcity of greens seems to have been overcome—at any rate there is no longer any complaint on this score. Orchids in variety and lily of the valley are plentiful. Big funeral orders have helped materially to clean up

Society Meeting.

An interesting meeting was held in Kruckeberg hall February 6, when Ernest Braunton was scheduled to speak on "Palms for Outdoor Culture" before the members of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society.

In the absence of President Payne and Vice-president Reese, J. J. Reeves presided and, after a few business matters had been disposed of, called on Mr. Braunton, who said he had not had time to prepare a set speech, but he made a most interesting extemporaneous talk on the California fan palm, Washingtonia filifera.

The speaker has traveled considerably and told of the climatic changes that have taken place in the habitat of this palm, owing to the recession of the sea from that part of California, thus making a more arid, cooler climate than formerly. For this reason Mr. Braunton contends that it is only a matter of time before this palm will become extinct, as seedlings are not plentiful under the altered conditions of climate and the palm does not live to a great age.

An interesting discussion followed, in which many members took part, but Mr. Reeves kept things moving and was able to adjourn at a reasonable hour.

The next meeting will, it is hoped, be a public one in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

Various Notes.

J. Dieterich has received another consignment of large sago palms from Japan. These are surely quaint looking objects when they arrive and they attract a good deal of attention.

Several weddings and other decorations have kept the staff of The Roserie on the jump of late. Several changes have been made in the personnel of the staff.

Business has been exceedingly brisk with the H. N. Gage Co., large shipping orders to distant points going forward daily. Among the more prominent of the stocks noted here were fine Freesia Purity and F. refracta alba from indoors, but the outdoor stock is just about ready. Daffodils are good and plentiful.

The Freeman-Lewis window was most attractive this week. It was treated with almond boughs in full bloom and some fine white lilacs in pots. A suggestion of gray in the ribbon used was pretty.

The Angelus Flower Shop made a gorgeous showing of orchids this week, especially good cattleyas, white phalænopsis and Dendrobium superbum being among the best.

Albert Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., was under the weather a few days, but is back at the store again.

At the funeral of the late Mr. Buck, superintendent of construction for the Santa Fe railroad, an enormous amount of work was used. Morris Goldenson had to charter a special car to take his pieces down to San Bernardino, where the deceased had lived, and J. Gordon had charge of the floral end. The railway shops were closed and 1,200 employees followed the body to the grave.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

ican Beauty roses was filled recently by the Hayward Floral Co. The window is always attractive here and good stock is shown.

Tassano Bros. keep busy at both stores and, in addition to their business in greens, handle large stocks of cut flowers.

Trade at the Los Angeles Flower Market has kept up beyond the most sanguine expectations of Manager C. Morton. Five men are constantly employed now and have all they can do. The first of the Brazee daffodils came in February 2 and about 6,000 a day is the rate of cutting now. The Purity freesias from Fischer's and Young's ranches at San Gabriel are handled here exclusively. Trade in supplies is also increasing.

At the Superior Nursery, Fifty-ninth and Compton streets, Mr. Gutting is propagating Boston and Amerpohlii ferns largely. Besides being the largest local place devoted to pot plants, this firm also has a tract of land near Wilmington, where choice nursery stock is grown. They are now shipping dormant field-grown roses.

Creutz & Co. have moved from their old location at Fourth and Broadway to 403 West Eighth street. Business seems to have a tendency to go south and the change will probably be a good one, especially as there are much better facilities in the new place with which to handle this firm's increasing business in greens and cut flowers at wholesale. Mexican ivy is a strong specialty here, as is also good valley.

Propagation of all classes of young stock is going on briskly at the Dieterich & Turner greenhouses at Montebello. There are large and healthy blocks of Boston and other ferns, roses in all the popular and many new varieties and a big stock of the new marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander. A big season's shipping business is foreshadowed in the large number of advance orders received.

The news of the death of A. R. Meserve, horticultural commissioner for Los Angeles county, as recorded in the obituary column in this week's issue, was received by all in the trade with great regret. H. R. Richards.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The last week was a busy one for the local florists, as each one had a generous amount of funeral work, which cleaned up what at first had looked like an oversupply. The death of Ex-Representative Shutt and of Thomas Berry, both prominent men of this city, called for a great deal of the finer designs, and many expensive and elaborate pieces were put up. One casket cover, made entirely of violets, lily of the valley and orchids, was undoubtedly among the best ever seen in this city. Stock is coming in more plentifully, especially carnations, many of which are of poor quality, with weak stems. Bulbous stock is plentiful, but sells well, and the same can be said of potted plants of all kinds.

Various Notes.

George Seaverns, manager of the Northwestern Floral Co., reports business good, especially along the line of nursery stock. This city has felt the need of a good nursery stock to select from, as buying from outside parties has been unsatisfactory.

Arrangements have been completed for the annual rose show, to be held in this city sometime in June. This carnival has come to be second to none in this part of the country and is meeting with the generous support it deserves, not only from those closely connected with the enterprise and those engaged in the trade, but also from other residents of the city. Suitable prizes will be given to both professional and amateur exhibitors.

At the regular meeting of the Florists' Club, February 1, it was decided to entertain the florists' ladies at the next regular meeting. A committee was appointed to provide entertainment and refreshments. It was also decided not to have the talked-of chrysanthemum show this fall, but rather to coöperate with the Seattle club, the show to be held in that city. There was much discussion in regard to the taxation of growing stock in the greenhouse. It seems to be the general opinion that this stock should not be taxed, as is possible under the present laws of this state. The next regular business meeting of the Florists' Club will be held March 7.

J. L. S.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

The flower business last week was not any too encouraging. Stock of all kinds is overabundant. Carnations have been practically a glut on the market and have been selling for prices that are unprecedented at this time of year—at prices so low as to induce some of the department stores to have special sales of cut flowers. Unless prices improve shortly, there is a probability of flowers getting scarce; at these prices the flowers will not pay for help and fuel, and the growers will go into the vegetable business. Daffodils and all bulbous stock are selling at unremunerative prices. Good roses are now plentiful and lilies are in small demand for funeral work. Cyclamens, cinerarias and primulas are plentiful.

Various Notes.

George Roede, for some time with the Fremont Floral Co., has leased the greenhouses at Sixty-seventh street and Fourteenth avenue, northwest, in Ballard, lately occupied by C. W. Bridges.

Andrew Mathieson is taking a two weeks' vacation at Oakland, Cal.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business last week showed a slight increase over the last report. Stock is becoming more plentiful along all lines, hence the drop in the prices. Carnations are in excess of demand, and, with the increasingly balmy weather, the market will be glutted. Roses are plentiful in all varieties. Spring flowers are plentiful; daffodils and tulips predominate. Valley, orchids and local violets are plentiful, and move well. Green goods are the scarcest commodity on the market, which is the normal condition at this season. The California market is relied upon to supply the deficiency.

Various Notes.

The opening of the Multnomah hotel, which is the finest of its kind in the northwest, created an unusual demand for plants and flowers. Lubliner supplied the plant decorations and filled the window boxes. Martin & Forbes had the flower decorations. The lobby and ball room were arrayed with American Beauties, using about 600 in all. The rest of the florists had their share of the business.

Gus V. Peterson, of the Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, was a week-end caller.

PORTLAND'S SILVERTHAW.

January 6 Portland, Ore., was treated to one of its own brands of winter weather that we in this jungle call silverthaw. Back east it would be a protracted sleet storm. The rain poured down steadily for the whole day, freezing tightly on everything it touched, the temperature being 30 degrees. Toward evening trees were breaking in every direction under the load of ice, telephone wires not faring any better.

A lesson was to be learned from this storm which is worth observing by Review readers. All the well trimmed shade trees were not harmed a bit, while those that have not seen a gardener under their branches for years were all broken to pieces or completely ruined. I had the daily papers take notice of this feature by a short article well to the point, trying to impress the public with the importance of proper professional care of shade trees. However, many trees are standing yet, witnesses of the carelessness of their owners. But I will take care to draw

The Market.

The market last week was in better condition than it has been for some time. The consignments at the four wholesale markets were large. One good feature of the market was that the trade could obtain their full orders in roses and carnations. These flowers, our local growers say, will be quite plentiful from now on. The prices on these have also gone down a notch or two; the quality of the bulk of them is fine.

The supply of violets has been more than the demand could consume. This week, for Valentine's day, the price will be $7.50 per thousand and the market will afford thousands, as the weather is just right for them. Bulb stock is obtainable at all the markets in any quantity. The quality of tulips, Von Sions and valley seen last week was the best. Lilies are abundant; also Romans and Paper Whites. The retail trade expects much business during the few days left for the social season.

Fellows' building. There were twenty-five members present when President Windler called the meeting to order.

A letter was read from President Vincent, of the S. A. F., requesting the club at its meeting to offer a subject for discussion at the next meeting of the S. A. F., at Chicago. On motion, the subject was left to a committee of five, to report at the March meeting. The chair appointed as this committee W. C. Young, E. W. Guy, J. F. Ammann, F. W. Bruenig and Geo. B. Windler.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, exhibited a vase of variegated seedling carnations, No. 56 of 1907 and No. 91 of 1908. The committee, Messrs. Ammann, Vennemann and Ogle, made a favorable report on them.

On motion of C. C. Sanders, the club will hold a combination rose and carnation exhibition for the March meeting. This exhibition will be left in charge of the trustees and will be held at one of the wholesale houses, as no exhibitions can be held in our meeting rooms.

Mr. Ammann spoke at length on President Vincent's letter and hoped the committee would get to work at once and work along the lines suggested by the president.

All business having been transacted, the chair called W. C. Young to start his discussion on "Pot-grown Roses." In this he was assisted by Frank Weber and C. E. De Wever. As all these gentlemen have full knowledge of the subject and the members displayed great interest by asking questions as the discussion advanced, this was one of the most interesting meetings the club has held for some time.

C. W. Wors, who has been at the hospital all the week, has submitted to an operation on his neck. This, the doctors say, will save his life, and, according to reports, he will be out in a week.

The following is a list of near-by florists who spent Thursday of last week in the city and attended the club meeting in the afternoon: W. J. Pilcher, F. Vennemann and W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood; A. Jablonsky and C. E. De Wever, of Olivette; John Connon, of Webster Groves; W. E. Ogle, E. W. Guy and Gust Grossart, of Belleville; Charles Hecht, of Clayton, and J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, and all were glad they came.

The Retail Florists' Association of St. Louis held its annual banquet on Monday evening, February 12, at the Washington hotel. Fred H. Weber, Alex. Geranios and Theo. Muller had the arrangements in charge. Next Monday night, February 19, the association will hold its regular monthly meeting in the Knights of Columbus hall, when a new secretary will be elected. INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade has been lively for the last week, funeral work being the main factor. The weather continues cold, with little sun. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily now and is finding ready sale. Jonquils are especially in demand this year. Freesias, tulips and sweet peas find a quick sale. Paper Whites and Romans are abundant. Violets and valley have a steady demand. Potted plants are finding a ready market.

Various Notes.

Pearl James, formerly with A. Wiegand & Sons, has taken a position with the Brandt Floral Co.

Bertermann Bros. made a delivery of funeral flowers to Edinburg, Ind., a distance of about thirty miles, one day last week.

Alfred Pahud, Sr., has a fine lot of Boston ferns.

Charles Pahud spent a few days in Chicago last week.

Visitors last week were B. F. Haugh, of Anderson, Ind.; F. G. Nelson, with the Burlington Willow Ware Co.; W. Dykes, with the A. Jenson Co., New York; J. Lembke, with the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago; Guy Reburn, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago; Chas. Jones, of Richmond, Ind.; W. Rolker, New York; F. W. Schmitz, New York; H. Knickman, with McHutchison & Co., New York, and W. W. Coles, Kokomo, Ind.

Adolph Baur, secretary of the American Carnation Society, is making arrangements to complete the Dorner Memorial fund and it is the intention to offer the medal at the National Flower Show at New York, in April, 1913.

Baur & Steinkamp have been cutting some of the best red carnations seen in this market. Their cut of carnations in general has been large for January and February and the stock has been good.

H. C. Berning, of St. Louis, spent a few hours with friends in the city February 12.

The Smith & Young Co. has been shipping some extra fine Brides and Maids.

FLOWER BOXES

Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE agricultural appropriation bill now before Congress provides $285,680 for the congressional distribution of free seeds in 1913.

A CORRESPONDENT says that 12,000 acres of peas have been contracted for this season in Fremont county, Idaho. Developments will be watched with interest.

THE Clinton Seed Co., Clinton, Okla., has been incorporated, with $4,000 capital stock. The incorporators are H. B. Lipscomb, E. A. Humphrey, C. E. Gamaway and H. W. Smith.

WM. C. ATHERTON has bought out Rothenbush & Co., Hamilton, O., whose line was seeds and fruits. Mr. Atherton already had a store on Court street and will specialize in seeds at the Rothenbush stand.

D. M. CAMPSEY, Washington, Pa., who deals in wool and seeds, says the shortage of the hay crop caused an extra demand for timothy seed in that vicinity, his sales approximating 1,000 bushels at $7.50 per bushel.

AT the approaching election J. C. Vaughan will make another attempt to unseat James R. Mann, minority leader in Congress and the author of several bills to regulate the sale of seeds. Neither candidate will have opposition at the primaries.

SINCE the Department of Agriculture began scouring the world for grasses, plants and other products which might prove of value in this country, more than 32,000 shipments of seeds and plants have been received here, according to Dr. David Fairchild, in charge of this work.

SOME of the large seed houses that are located to do a country trade as well as a catalogue business have found it more profitable to distribute the catalogues thickly within the community radius rather than scatter them the length and breadth of the country through advertising in the magazines of national circulation. In certain suburbs a house to house distribution is made just about planting time.

DURING the sessions of organized agriculture in Lincoln the last week in January, the Nebraska Pure Grain and Seed Growers' Association was formed. From time to time the department of experimental agronomy of the experiment station has developed superior strains of the different cereals and has turned them over to the farmers of the state. But there has never been any way of keeping in close touch with the growers and the seed could not be kept pure for any length of time. All such improved seed will now be turned over to this association as soon as it has been fully proved to be superior and the members agree to keep it pure. A skilled inspector will visit and inspect the fields of the members each year and report on the purity of their grain. Representative samples of each man's grain will also be sent to the secretary's office for inspection. Purity, soundness and germination tests will be made of all such grains.

PEAS AT ST. ANTHONY.

A. J. Nimmo, of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., was at St. Anthony, Idaho, the first part of February, booking acreage for garden peas for seed.

The Fremont County News for January 31 said: "T. H. Hopkins, representing the John H. Allan Seed Co., of Sheboygan, Wis., is here making contracts for seed peas. Mr. Hopkins hails from Sturgeon Bay, Wis. He has contracted for a large acreage in the short time he has been here and is looking for more."

John T. Wilcox, formerly with the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, has started in seed growing here and has returned from an eastern trip.

It is said that to date of February 1 over 12,000 acres have been contracted to peas to be delivered at St. Anthony in the autumn.

ASSOCIATED PRESS HEARS NEWS.

The scarcity of seeds has become a matter of general news—the Associated Press sent out the following February 9 under a Kansas City date line:

"Drought during the summer of 1911 caused a shortage in seed and this year dealers predict that the majority of varieties will be higher than usual. Carrot, beet, turnip, radish, blue grass and clover seed are scarce and all are higher by about twenty-five per cent. The ordinary garden seeds, such as lettuce, onion, tomatoes, melons, beans, cucumbers and sweet corn, are about normal in both supply and price."

PEAS AT BOZEMAN.

The following is from a newspaper published at Butte, Mont.:

"Bozeman will have two new industries this year of 1912, according to O. E. Meyer, of Bozeman, who is in Butte on a business trip. The Gallatin valley city will send out all over the country garden pea seeds and sweet pea seeds. Inquiries from all parts of the country have convinced the residents that in those lines is a new outlet for the energy of the Gallatin valley boosters. The valley, famous as the second largest naturally irrigated valley in the world, the valley of the Nile being the greatest, has passed through the best January in its history. Mr. Meyer says that they have had rain during the month, a condition which never obtained before.

"'Last year,' said Mr. Meyer, 'a Detroit firm supplied garden pea seed to a number of farmers in the neighborhood of Bozeman for the purpose of getting garden pea seed for sale all over the United States. The experiment was a distinct success and the company considered Gallatin valley the best spot in the country for this purpose. Now the people of the valley have got together and will gather the seed of the sweet pea, for which Bozeman is famous from one end of the country to the other, and establish proper markets for the sale of the seed. Several carloads of garden peas were shipped out and it is expected that this success will be duplicated this year with the sweet peas.'" seeds bill drafted by Congressman Mann provided for the dating of packets. At the last hearing at Washington this phase of the subject appeared to specially interest Congressmen Esch, of Wisconsin, and Sims, of Tennessee. In discussing the subject with Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., they said:

Mr. Esch. This bill states, provided there does not appear plainly on the packet the year of packeting. Is it possible, or is it the practice of the seed houses, to warehouse seed a year or two before packeting?

Mr. White. That very frequently is the case, because the only way to determine the quality of seed is to plant part of it. Take, for instance, radish; the only way to determine the quality of that seed is to have a trial in the ground, and compare all the radishes, and see how true they are to the type. In order to make the requisite quality trials, it frequently is necessary to carry that seed over to another year; and the best buyers of seed—when we sell seed to another seed house or when we have occasion to buy seed of another seed house—would not think of buying seed that was not at least a year old, in order that these quality trials might have been obtained.

Mr. Esch. So that the purchaser of a packet would not know, within one or two or three years, possibly, of the time of the production of that seed?

There are certain laws over which we have no control, and which we must either follow or suffer for it. The law of gravitation, for instance—the law that all bodies are drawn together in a certain well-defined ratio. If you violate it, you must take the consequences. Now, there are certain laws governing lily bulb growing as well. You may violate them and take the consequences, or you can obey them and apply them to your business and get the benefits and advantages of obedience. But you can't change the laws. One of these laws is the Law of Quality. Nature, over whom you have no control, demands lily bulbs of quality if she must produce good results therefrom. You can violate this law and suffer from it, or you can adhere to it and profit by your better judgment; but you can't change the law. So the Law of Quality is superhuman in the lily bulb business—you just must have the best there is. Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are produced to conform to that Law of Quality. They are not grown merely for price, by cheap labor, grinding out the lives of women and children in the process, but by experienced men—men who know. And the prices are extremely reasonable this year, so why should you not buy this brand altogether? There are none better produced, and no one appreciates your orders more than we do.

Not How Cheap But How Good

RALPH M. WARD & CO.

71 Murray Street

NEW YORK

Mr. White. He would not.

Mr. Esch. What is the percentage of deterioration a year of seed; is there any known schedule?

Mr. White. There is no known schedule. It not infrequently happens that seed tests better the second, third, or even fourth year, than it did when it came in from the farm. All that the buyer can do is to trust to the self-interests of the seller to sell him goods that will redound to his credit.

Mr. Adamson. Will garden seed generally germinate after three or four years?

Mr. White. It depends altogether upon the kind.

Mr. Adamson. Not on how they are kept?

Mr. White. Of course on how they are kept. I stand corrected.

Mr. Esch. So that the placing of the year on the packet is not of so much real advantage to a purchaser?

Mr. White. I do not see how it is of any advantage except to this extent, that it might be that seeds which are sold by concerns which sell their packets outright might lie around in a country store for two or three years after they were received by the retailer, and in that case, if they were marked with the year in which they were packeted, the buyer would have an opportunity to know how long the retailer had had them in his possession.

Mr. Sims. Does not your company take up all the seed each year for which there are no buyers?

Mr. White. Yes.

Mr. Sims. I mean for retail purposes.

Mr. White. Yes; our concern takes it all up, and it never sends out a packet a second time.

Mr. Sims. If it is as good as it was the first time, why not?

Mr. White. Because of this fact, that viability is a matter which we have very little control over, and when you come right down to it, not very accurate knowledge of. It is to our interest to see that the viability of the seed that goes out is as good as we can make it, because we want to sell them again.

Mr. Sims. What do you do with these seeds you take up?

Mr. White. When these seeds come up there are certain seeds, like parsnips, which have to be destroyed or used for other purposes. We have a farm. We have at present 2,000 sheep and 180 steers on the farm, and a good many old seeds which have lost their viability we cook up into a ration.

Mr. Sims. In other words, you retest them, and only send out those which are still good?

Mr. White. Those that are still good we have no hesitation in sending out again.

The Chairman. Where do you test your seed?

Mr. White. They are all tested at our trial grounds in Detroit.

The Chairman. That is, it is inside, under glass?

Mr. White. All our viability tests in winter are of necessity inside. In the summer we open the windows and get it as cool as we can, because it gets very hot in Detroit.

The Chairman (Mr. Mann). Did I understand you to say you never sent out any seed until the second year?

Mr. White. Oh, no. Sometimes we are compelled by the necessities of trade to send out seed without having kept it a year.

The Chairman. But you ordinarily keep your seed a year before it is sent out?

Mr. White. The majority of it is so kept.

The Chairman. And you deem it practical to keep that seed a year before sending it out?

Mr. White. Quite so.

The Chairman. That is, you would not send out seed produced in 1910 before 1912?

Mr. White. That would be the probability.

The Chairman. That is the ordinary custom of your house?

Mr. White. That is the custom of our house. I want to say that the results of the viability tests of seed sent out by our house, as indicated by the Department of Agriculture, you will find on investigation are altogether to our credit, I have no hesitation in saying.

The Chairman. Do you want us to publish the tests?

Mr. White. I should be delighted to have you publish the tests of our house; I do not speak for anybody else.

The Chairman. We have your consent?

Mr. White. You have my consent to publish the viability tests of the seed of our house, and the more you publish them the more we will like it.

NEEDED QUANTITIES OF SEED.

About how much seed will I need of each of the following flowers, for 2,000 plants of each: Begonia Vernon, Lobelia Emperor William, pyrethrums, and Cineraria maritima? R. O.

To produce 2,000 plants of the varieties named you should sow one-fourth ounce of Lobelia Emperor William, one-half ounce of Cineraria maritima, one ounce of Pyrethrum aureum and one 50-cent packet of Begonia Vernon. These amounts should give you an ample supply of plants, but, of course, careful seed growing, in suitable compost, and, above all, good seed, count for a great deal. C. W.

Minneapolis, Minn.—W. D. Desmond says it has been a struggle to keep the Donaldson greenhouses from freezing up this winter, with day after day that the temperature outside ran 20 degrees below zero.

APHIS ON LETTUCE.

Is there any way to fight green aphis in a lettuce house? Last spring we threw away over 500 pounds of fine lettuce on account of these pests. This year we wish to prevent them from getting started. Our lettuce house is connected with our flower and plant house, and there are a few aphis in it, among the snapdragons and mums. We clean them out, but they come on again. Is there any way to fumigate successfully for green aphis? Could we use cyanide gas in a lettuce house? Would it kill the lettuce or leave any poison on it that would not wash off or that would be dangerous? The lettuce is all small now and of course the leaves on it will all fall off before it is grown. C. W. R.

For aphis on lettuce, fumigate lightly and frequently to keep them from getting a start. Do not wait until damage is done. Even a few of the pests hurt the sale of lettuce. Whether a woman buys lettuce regularly or occasionally, she will not buy again for a while if she finds bugs on one lot of it.

Aphis are easy to keep down. You can fumigate lightly with tobacco stems one evening each week. This is the cheapest way, but if they have a good start and are not easily subdued, get some nicotine extract and pour a tiny stream on the hottest pipe in the house, using an oil can, and you will get out more quickly than the aphis. It does not work so well on hot water pipes as on steam pipes. H. G.

FERTILIZER FOR TOMATOES.

Will you kindly inform me as to what you consider the best fertilizer for forcing tomatoes under glass? Also state when and how such fertilizer should be applied. C. D. C.

A good coat of rotted cow manure, turned under with spading forks when preparing the soil for planting, will be enough to start with, providing the soil is reasonably good and has not been used previously for tomatoes. After they get to growing, they should be fed light doses of liquid manure occasionally, but some commercial fertilizers should be used also and not too much manure, because they will stand to be fed considerably more phosphoric acid and potash than nitrogen. Manure alone is not properly balanced for tomatoes, being strongest in nitrogen, which may make a rank growth of foliage; the ground might thus be considered too rich when really not rich enough in the other two ingredients which make complete fertilizers. You can get the phosphate in bone meal, but also get some nitrogen. For potash buy muriate or sulphate.

If no manure is used after planting or not much, then the bone meal and potash will be excellent, but if plenty good manure is to be had, cut out the bone meal and use phosphate rock and potash mixed together. Put this on frequently in extremely light doses. It can be dissolved in water or dusted over the top of the soil as if sowing grain, and watered in afterward. H. G.

SOWING EARLY CABBAGE.

Kindly inform me when to sow early cabbage seed to have the plants ready to set out by the middle of April. I expect to grow them under glass, without heat. I live in northern Ohio. W. C. H.

About March 1 will be a good time if your coldframe is in a protected place, where it is not too cold. Do not sow too thickly or wet too heavily. If sowed thinly they will not spoil if not transplanted at the right time. If you do not intend to transplant them, you might be soon enough by planting March 10 to 15. H. G.

Canutillo, Tex.—A new range has just been completed here for the Rio Grande Nursery Co. A Kroeschell hot water boiler will be used for heating.

Livingston's Extra-Select

represent the most perfect strain of this desirable type of onions. Bulbs ripen early and evenly, are of bright, uniform color and distinct, attractive shape. Yields enormous crops (see illustration), the bulbs almost pushing each other out of the row to make full growth. They are solid mild and keep well. Their remarkably uniform color caused a satisfied customer to send us this letter: "It may interest you to know that among 10,000 bushels of onions raised from your seeds we have absolutely no white ones."

Oz., 15c; ¼ lb., 50c; lb., $1.85 postpaid. Special quotations on large quantities on request.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

THE Vineland Nurseries, Clarkston, Wash., has made a million grafts this season.

THE death of William Smith, the rich and venerable nurseryman of Geneva, N. Y., occurred February 6. A brief sketch of his long career appears in the obituary column this week.

GEORGE E. KESSLER, the Kansas City landscape architect, has the order to prepare plans for laying out and planting Phelps Grove Place, a 120-acre addition at Springfield, Mo.

THE New Bedford Nurseries Co., Bedford, Mass., has been incorporated, with $40,000 capital stock. J. Kirkegaard, of Bedford, is president and J. E. Gilcreast, of Boston, is treasurer.

A NEATLY printed volume has been issued entitled "Transactions and Proceedings of the First Annual Meeting of the California Association of Nurserymen." Henry W. Kruckeberg, Los Angeles, is secretary.

AT the annual meeting of the Connecticut State Nurserymen's Association, held at Hartford, the following officers were elected: President, W. W. McCarthy; vice-president, Charles Turner; secretary, F. L. Thomas; treasurer, W. W. Hunt. The taxation of nursery land was discussed.

W. VAN KLEEF, JR., who is well known to the trade in this country because of his many trips to the United States, has withdrawn from the partnership of W. Van Kleef & Sons, Boskoop, Holland, and gone into business on his own account under the name Verkade Van Kleef, the Nova Nurseries, Boskoop.

OPPOSE THE BILL.

W. P. Stark and S. J. Hunter, the committee on legislation of the Western Association of Nurserymen, have sent the following letter, under date of February 8, to William Pitkin, chairman of the legislative committee of the American Association of Nurserymen:

"In response to your telegram asking for our specific objection to the enactment of House Bill 18000, will say that we have had conferences in person, by letter and by telephone with the leading nurserymen of the middle western states, and we wish to concur with them in stating the unanimous objection to this measure, for the following reasons:

"1. It does not embody the articles of agreement stipulated in the conference between the Department of Agriculture, entomologists and nurserymen, held at Washington last December.

"2. The methods of its introduction were not in accordance with the procedure agreed upon at the Washington conference.

"3. The bill does not provide for a definite, stable administrative body.

"4. It makes possible the appointment of a large number of employees to perform services which can be better performed by appointees already in office.

"5. All nurserymen desire that interstate shipments be inspected at point of destination. This bill has been referred to a competent attorney, who read to us legal decisions to the effect that no inspection of the interstate shipments could be made at point of destination under this proposed measure.

"6. Its terms are not clear, and therefore leave open to discussion and much possible litigation, just what is meant as to what injurious insects and plant diseases are to be placed under the quarantine provisions of this act.

"Moreover, we regret that thus far it has seemed impossible to secure enactment of federal legislation which should really be of practical value to horticulture."

QUARANTINE IN CALIFORNIA.

The nurserymen of four counties in California are up in arms in opposition to a quarantine placed against Santa Clara, San Mateo, Santa Cruz and Alameda counties by State Horticultural Commissioner Cook, prohibiting the shipment of peach, pear, plum, prune and cherry stock. Commissioner Cook imposed the quarantine following complaints from Sutter and Yuba counties, where stock containing the peach borer was received.

As soon as notice of the quarantine reached the trade a flood of letters and telegrams of protest went to Governor Johnson and a delegation headed by Geo. C. Roeding, of Fresno, went to the capital to demand a hearing, which was granted, the date being set as February 9, before Lieutenant Governor Wallace, acting governor during the absence of Governor Johnson. The quarantine was ordered raised.

GRIFFINGS' NEW NURSERY.

Griffing Bros.' Nursery Co. has bought forty acres of land at Nona, twenty-three miles northwest of Beaumont, Tex., which land is being converted to nursery use. It will be one of the Griffing brothers' several nurseries and is part of the incorporated company. The company has a force of fifteen men employed on the tract and has shipped from Port Arthur a large quantity of young stock which is being set at the Nona holdings. In speaking of the matter W. D. Griffing said: "We intend to run the Nona nursery as an adjunct to the Port Arthur nursery. We are starting in a small way with forty acres and may increase our acreage. We will grow a general variety of trees and plants, including peaches, plums, orange and pecan. We have decided to go into the rolling country farther north in order to raise several varieties which we have found do not do so well near the coast. No outside capital is going into this investment; it is wholly a part of the Griffing Bros.' Nursery Co., and is intended as an adjunct of the nursery at Port Arthur."

RECORD CITRUS ORDER.

A. B. Miller, president and general manager of the Fontana Development Co., Los Angeles, Cal., has placed an unusually large order for nursery stock, amounting to 100,000 orange and lemon trees, which will be planted on the company's property during the coming spring, supplying a tract of about 1,300 acres. Among the varieties purchased the Washington navel orange predominates. Sixty per cent of the entire planting will be of that variety, about fifteen per cent will be lemons and fifteen per cent Valencias, the rest being Marsh's Seedless grapefruit.

CALIFORNIA PRIVET

KILLARNEY

JOHN WELSH YOUNG, Upsal Sta. P. R. R., Philadelphia, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

Pittsburgh is feeling the effects of the worst winter, as far as cold weather is concerned, in thirteen years (the thermometer last week was steadily close to the zero mark) and retail trade was almost at a standstill all the week. It was hoped at least that Saturday would help out, but it was the coldest day of the week. In the face of all this, flowers of all kinds are selling cheaper than ever before at this season, while the growers require extra hands to shovel coal. Some of the growers are having trouble getting coal delivered fast enough, the railroads being behind on their schedules.

There are more than plenty of flowers of all kinds, bulb stock especially being overplentiful. At the club luncheon the other night a bulb salesman, when called on for some remarks, excused himself by saying that everybody was feeling good and enjoying himself, and it only made the florists cross to hear a bulb man talk about bulbs.

Club Meeting.

The Pittsburgh Florists' Club held its regular meeting at the Fort Pitt hotel February 6, and elected the following officers: E. C. Ludwig, president; E. C. Reineman, vice-president; H. P. Joslin, secretary, and John Bader, P. S. Randolph and Neil McCallum, trustees. After the election and other business the members adjourned to the assembly room to partake of a lunch which had been provided and to listen to Chas. H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., the guest of the evening. Mr. Totty had with him his fine white carnation, Wodenethe, which had been awarded a first-class certificate at a former meeting. He spoke at length of the season's novelties and gave the growers present many good points on them. Among the other exhibitors and their offerings were: Chas. Koenig, Millvale, Pa., tulips; Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., carnations; Finleyville Carnation Co., carnations; Mr. Phillips, gardener for H. J. Heinz, plants of Primula obconica; Arthur James, cyclamens. All the exhibits were in good shape.

Taken altogether it was a most enjoyable and successful meeting.

Various Notes.

A. W. Smith, Sr., is sick in bed for the first time in many years.

Charlie Goodwin has a hard case of pneumonia.

Katherine Lager, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., is laid up with a bad attack of grip. Hoo-Hoo.

M. Cohen, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York city, was a visitor in Pittsburgh last week.

Walton, N. Y.—T. S. Tripp has sold his business to N. J. Neal.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

Never since the first greenhouse was erected in Brampton has the thermometer so distinguished itself as during the last week, from 3 below zero on Monday to 32 on Saturday marking the changes the weather has undergone during that period. Over 100 tons of anthracite coal a day is the quantity required to keep the Dale Estate warm, and the engineers and firemen have no sinecure these days.

Carnations are in excellent condition at present, but bulbous stock forms the larger portion of the output. In violets the supply is much less than the demand and the quality is good for the time of year.

Propagating is in full swing and on a larger scale than ever, and the carnation cuttings this season look particularly healthy; the same cannot be said of Easter lily plants, however, the percentage of loss being about equal to last year.

Walter Calvert is meeting with great success in violets and is adding still further to his premises, with increased business in view. W. G. P.

ERIE, PA.

Messrs. Lichtinger and Weltz, of the Cherry Hill Greenhouses, have just disposed of an immense crop of lettuce and will now fill their houses with spring stock.

Vern L. Schluraff will open a flower store in the new Masonic building and will have as fine a location and store as can be found in the city.

The Erie Floral Co. is now cutting some of the finest roses that are seen in this market.

On and after March 15 the Baur Floral Co. will be located in its new store in the Marine Bank building, where the finer and larger store will enable the firm to keep pace with its rapidly increasing trade.

A. J. Baur has returned from an eastern business trip.

C. W. Zuck & Sons expect to add about 30,000 square feet of glass to their range.

Jesse Frost will add another house to his large vegetable plant.

Carnation Novelties

Did you see "Wodenethe" at Detroit? If you did, you know that it has easily established its position as the best white, and also won the Sweepstakes over all other varieties.

The "knocker" might tell you this variety is not free enough to be grown as a commercial flower.

"Seeing is believing," so come and see it growing for yourself. This is all we ask.

We can still quote February delivery on "Wodenethe" and "Brooklyn," at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

With a good deal of bright and more mild weather, the receipts in most lines of cut flowers were quite satisfactory last week. While roses in all colors are still what one would call scarce, the supply of carnations was about equal to the demand, but with funeral work still predominating, stock for that line was well cleaned up most of the time. Violets and valley also moved well, while bulbous stock came in quite handy to fill in. Lilies of late have been a good proposition.

Various Notes.

A visit to the Freytag establishment, on Forest Home avenue, found the place in the usual spick-and-span condition. Although they have been kept exceptionally busy with funeral and other work of late, they manage to keep things just so, which is a point often overlooked, especially when greenhouses are run in connection with a store.

The Mitchell Street Florist had the window tastefully arranged with baskets filled with blooming plants, plus trimmings, which helps the sales materially.

The McKenney Co. says there is nothing to the report that they intend to move to their new property acquired on Jackson street; it is only a matter of investment, for the present at least.

J. M. Fox & Son have an attractive window, presenting a rustic effect and incidentally pushing the sales of single and double narcissi.

Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, is putting in benches and the heating system in the latest addition, a carnation house 27 x 200. This gives him a good chance to take care of his young stock as it comes out of the cutting bench. His stock is in fine condition and the quantity of cut blooms is satisfactory.

Manke Bros., right across the way from Mr. Zweifel, say they are not having so good success with Enchantress this season as in former years. White Perfection and Beacon with them are looking and doing especially well these days.

The A. F. Kellner Co. has the order for the bachelors' ball to be held at the Deutscher Club February 19.

COMFORT

A Seedling of S. M. MERWARTH & BRO., Easton, Pa.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

WASHINGTON, D. C.

The Market.

Business is brisk in this valentine season. It is better than in any previous year, the local florists say. Stock is not extra plentiful, generally speaking, although the supply equals the demand for bulbous flowers and some others. Roses are scarce, especially Richmond and other red varieties, which seem to be favorites with Cupid's messengers. Callas are somewhat plentiful. Carnations are cheaper than they have been for some time past. Some fine dark red ones are being shown.

Stock in general is somewhat more plentiful than last week, owing to the clear weather and warm sunlight prevailing for several days. Prices are moderating from the midwinter scale. Among the new things on the market are alliums, marguerites and potted cinerarias. Many windows are appropriately decorated for Valentine's day with floral hearts, red ribbons, etc. Baskets and other fancy packages are much in evidence, the designs being appropriate for the season. Red boxes in heart shapes and other designs are being used.

Various Notes.

David G. Grillbortzer, of Alexandria, Va., is sending considerable quantities of good stock to the Washington market. Much of it is being handled by S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

The Y. M. C. A. is giving a series of lectures on "Gardening for Pleasure and Profit." Flower and food crops will be covered. The first lecture of the season was delivered a few days ago by Prof. L. C. Corbett, chief of the division of horticulture of the agricultural department. His subject was "Feeding the Multitude." Other lectures will be by recognized experts on the subjects treated.

Z. D. Blackistone displayed some attractive fancy baskets decorated with ribbons and filled with flowers for valentines. He says they sold quite well.

J. H. Small says that the valentine trade is good. His firm is offering a lot of fine cinerarias.

Favorable reports are also made by George C. Shaffer, who has a couple of seasonable wedding and party decoration contracts on hand for this week.

ASCHMANN BROS.

Second and Bristol Sts., PHILADELPHIA

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

While the month of February started in well, still it could have been better and we should still have had stock left over. The weather has been so extremely cold that it seems the florist is only in business for the benefit of the coal man. Funeral work is the only real live wire in the florists' business at present, and the demand along this line is somewhat spasmodic. Roses in general seem to be the scarce article and, of course, they are the one thing for which the demand runs highest. Carnations are in full crop and sell quite satisfactorily. The lily supply is ample to keep up with the trade. Bulbous stock of all seasonable varieties is most plentiful and could easily stand an increase in demand. The fore part of last week business was rather slow, but a decided increase was noticed during the last few days.

Florists report booking some good orders for St. Valentine's day, the greatest demand running in red carnations and all choice roses; also corsage bouquets of violets, valley, orchids and sweet peas.

Various Notes.

The week commencing February 12 is automobile show week in Dayton. It is also a good week for the florists, as many palms and ferns, as well as cut flowers, are being used for this occasion.

The latest addition to the down-town store of the Heiss Co. is an elaborate cash register.

Miss Amy Ewing is still seriously ill at her home with typhoid fever. Little change is noted in her condition.

I am glad to report that Mrs. Elizabeth Young, who has been quite ill since the holidays, is able to leave her room, although she will be confined to the house for several weeks more.

Recent visitors have been: D. Rusconi, of Cincinnati; Aug. Rolker, New York city; Edwin J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Frank E. Kegres, representing Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York. R. A. L.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—Charles P. Limbert is building a greenhouse at his suburban home at Fiske lake.

PORTLAND'S SILVERTHAW.

the public's eye to this shameful negligence on the part of some of our wealthy mossbacks.

Now a word about the great rose festival at Portland, the one big feature of the Pacific coast held annually in this city. The rose show is about the only part in which the local florists take any interest. This show is given by the Portland Rose Society, composed of amateurs, who have by some liberal premiums in the past years induced the local florists to exhibit their best products in order to make the show more interesting to the public and visitors, admission being free. At the last show the festival committee curtailed the allowance for the rose show and admission was charged to defray expenses. It is to be harder on the public this year, as the Rose Society has decided to exclude the general florists' exhibits, which have been about the best feature in the show. The reason seems to be that these exhibits have drawn the public's attention away from the individual rose exhibits, as some members of the Rose Society contend, a queer policy, not to be recommended, in the writer's opinion. However, our foremost professional rose grower has the honor of presiding over our budding Rose Society and we all hope the society will enjoy a blooming good year for 1912.

J. G. Bacher.

PASADENA, CAL.

The spring show of the Pasadena Horticultural Society will be held April 11 to 13.

J. S. Craven, who recently purchased the McComber collection of orchids, is about to build a new house for their culture. This is the collection originally got together by Dr. Schiffman and is full of fine varieties and hybrids. Mr. McKenzie, the grower here, has his plants in excellent condition and grand results may be looked for when his new house is complete.

Trade in the retail stores is improving right along and several large decorations have helped out the stock, but the lack of rain is checking business generally and the seedsmen particularly.

ONE MICHIGAN HOUSE.

I have one new house, 22½x150 feet, five and one-half feet high at the sides and twelve feet high in the center. The beds are all solid. Can I heat this house to a temperature of 45 degrees, when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero, with two 3-inch flows and four 2-inch returns? Where is the best place in which to put the valves, on the flow or on the return? Should the expansion tank be connected to the return, near the boiler? I want to run the flows and returns downhill. Is that right? I am enclosing a plan of the house. J. G.

The sketch shows one 3-inch flow on each purlin post and two 2-inch returns on each wall, near the gutters. The house evidently has about two feet of glass in one side wall. The other wall is protected by the adjoining house. The plan is an excellent one, but it will be well to have two additional 2-inch returns, which could be turned on in severe weather. Another way would be to use two 2½-inch flows and seven 2-inch returns, placing the extra flow on the exposed side of the house. Run all pipes downhill. Connect the highest part of each flow with the expansion tank and place the valves on the main returns.

BURNS TOO MUCH COAL.

I should like to know what is the trouble with our boiler. It does not hold the pressure over fifteen to twenty-five minutes. It is a forty-five horsepower tubular boiler, with a grate forty-eight inches square. It has a 3-inch feed, supplying steam to twelve beds. Connected with this main feed pipe, there is a 1-inch feed for each bed, leading into two 1¼-inch returns, then into a 1½-inch main return back into a receiver and from there into a Morehead return trap. There are three greenhouses, each 27 x 100 feet, seven feet to the gutter and sixteen feet to the ridge. There is considerable steam coming out of the exhaust of the trap. Should this exhaust be open at all times, and could we aid in the saving of coal by having this live steam go into the ash pit?

We burned last winter three carloads of coal, each car containing fifty tons. We have to shovel coal on about every half hour, besides having the drafts wide open. Our chimney is forty feet high from base to top. We burn Pocahontas mine run and have the coal well saturated with water. Could you give any advice as to how to fire a boiler of this kind? We should like to know

Where There Is Condensation

—there is need for a Morehead Steam Trap. Condensation in steam lines is akin to matter out of place—means wasted energy.

If your lines are sluggish—if your houses are not of uniform temperature, write us. We guarantee to drain your lines perfectly—return the pure, hot condensation to your boiler without pump or injector or make no charge for the trial. Obey that impulse—write now.

A Steady Pressure will always be maintained in your steam pipes, no matter how the pressure at the boiler fluctuates, if you equip your main lines with these valves. Carry 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler, set the

to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line and you will always have a reserve in case of a sudden drop in temperature. This valve saves both fuel and worry. Ask for catalogue and particulars.

AVOID A FREEZE-UP

Style I.

This Standard Thermostat will save your stock from a freeze-up. The indicating hand shows the actual temperature at all times. When it reaches either of the other hands it anywhere you please to locate the bell.

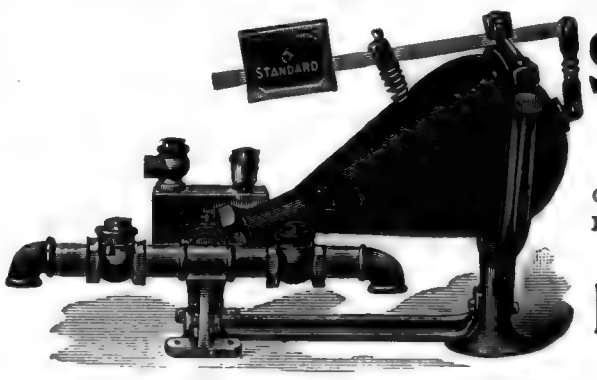
J. B. McFarland, of Granger, Wash., writes us as follows:—"I would like to say a word of praise for the thermostat. I have had mine and used it for two years in connection with the orchard heaters. It has always given perfect satisfaction. Although I am not over enthusiastic on the orchard heating proposition, I would not do without the frost alarm for twice the price.

"At this time of the year, when the weather is so uncertain, I place the thermostat in the packing shed. I can go to sleep at night feeling sure that if the weather gets too severe I will be awakened and can go and take measures to protect the fruit in storage: or if a fire should break out I would be aroused."



The Standard Thermostat is just as useful in the greenhouse as in the orchard.

Anybody can put it up—only a screwdriver needed—and full directions with each instrument.

how to avoid burning so much coal. We are located in northeastern Illinois and we run the houses at a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees. F. B.

The amount of coal consumed would seem to be double the quantity that should be used. Just what the trouble is can not be told from the description given. It would appear that there is something wrong with the working of the trap, but what it is can only be told by an examination. It is possible that the trap is not properly connected.

RETURNS TOO LOW.

Kindly advise me how to heat my greenhouse successfully with steam. The house runs east and west. It is 12x60 feet, six feet high to the eaves and eleven feet to the ridge. The south wall contains one and a half feet of glass; the rest of the walls are double boarded. The boiler is of the upright form and has a capacity of six horse-power. Please let me know what piping should be required to heat this house to 60 degrees in zero weather. What size of pipe should be used to return the water to the boiler?

At present the coils under the benches are just below the water line in the boiler. They are always full of water and do not heat with less than twenty-five pounds of steam. I think the pipe that enters the boiler is too small to carry the condensed water. When the boiler is being filled, if the water is low in the gauge the cold water backs up into the coils instead of entering the boiler, even when the gauge shows only ten pounds of steam pressure. How much lower should the boiler be than the end of the lowest coil? My location is southeastern Michigan.

C. H. W. C.

To heat a house 12x60 feet, with one and a half feet of glass in the south wall, to 60 degrees in zero weather will require about 180 square feet of radiating surface, using low pressure steam. This can be supplied by means of one 1½-inch flow pipe, carried two feet below the ridge, and six 1¼-inch pipes in the coils, or eight 1-inch pipes could be used if preferred. For returning the water to the boiler a 1¼-inch pipe will be amply large and a 1-inch pipe might be used.

The returns in a gravity system should be two feet or more above the level of the water in the boiler, and if they are below the level of the water it is not strange that trouble is experienced, as water always seeks its level. Unless it will be possible either to lower the boiler or raise the coils, some mechanical means of returning the water will be required. For a house of this size it will probably be better to lower the boiler, if drainage can be secured for the boiler pit. If this cannot be done, it will be better to use an electric pump rather than carry pressure enough to operate a steam pump or trap. In most cases where there is less than 1,000 square feet of glass, hot water is preferred to steam for heating greenhouses.

A LOW HOUSE FOR LETTUCE.

I intend to build a greenhouse next month, 12 x 100 feet. The side walls will be only one foot high, which will make the house three and one-half feet high at the gables. There will be two 5-foot ground beds, one on each side, with a 2-foot walk in the center, which I shall dig two feet deep, to provide head room. How should the house be built, running east and west or north and south? I shall use cypress sash-bars, 1⅜ x 2⅛ in. x 7 ft., and 14 x 14 double-strength glass. How many ventilators should be used in this house, with three 14 x 14 panes in them? There will be a door in each end, which can be opened in especially hot weather. Please give piping directions, also, for both steam and hot water. I shall use this house for lettuce during the winter and for vegetable plants in the spring. Would a 10-foot house be better? My location is eastern Ohio. P. H. G.

If a narrow house is to be built, a width of ten feet will be more economical of space, as to occupy a width of twelve feet either the beds or walk will have to be rather wide. It is generally regarded as a mistake to build a house as low as the one described. Instead of building the house 12 x 100 feet, it will be found better in every way to have it 20 x 50 feet, with the walls four feet high; or, better yet, have the walls five feet high, with two feet of glass at the top.

For the house 12 x 100 feet, about nine ventilating sashes of the size mentioned should be used. The house can be run in the direction that will best suit the other conditions, although a north and south house would be preferable in some ways. To heat such a house with hot water, run a 2½-inch pipe under the ridge and two 2-inch returns on each wall, near the plate. For heating it with steam, use a 2-inch overhead main and two 1¼-inch returns upon each of the plates. If the house is much exposed, an additional return will be required if the house is to be heated to 50 degrees with hot water.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Thomas W. Hobart, the gardener and seedsman, was scheduled to read a paper at the annual meeting of the State Horticultural Society, at Brookings.

More Heating Surface

and less water space than is contained in any other boiler. (Note the many flues set close together.) This is one reason why the users of the find them perfectly satisfactory. We frequently receive re-orders from florists who have tested these boilers thoroughly and found them even "Superior" to our claims.

Why not ask for full particulars today? A postal to us will bring a prompt reply.

An Asset in the Greenhouse Heating System

"Detroit" RETURN TRAPS

are machines from start to finish. Built with as much care as would be given the finest engine.

Simple in design and construction. Air and steam valves are in the same cast iron body.

A shock absorber receives the full weight of water as the trap tilts, eliminating stress, "smash and bang," usual with the ordinary tilting trap.

The lap welded steel tank is tested to 300 pounds pressure before shipment. "Detroit" Traps are an investment—not an expense.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Another week of extremely cold weather has been added to the unusually long period of wintry conditions and the effect has been a curtailment of business generally. Outdoor sports have somewhat interfered with indoor functions and fewer of the latter have been in vogue. Meanwhile the growers have been feeding extra quantities of coal to their furnaces and receiving smaller returns than normal. Bulbous stock has commenced to flood the market and prices have toned off slightly.

Various Notes.

One of R. Geisler's greenhouses in the Mount Lane district of Bristol was destroyed by fire on the night of February 10. Flowers of all kinds and many valuable potted plants were destroyed and it was only the good work of the firemen that prevented the fire from destroying the entire range, as well as other property. It is estimated that the damage will be fully $3,000, partially covered by insurance.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, has been busy with funeral work and last week had several orders for flowers for the grammar school graduations in his section.

W. H. O'Connor has been confined to his house with a severe cold.

J. J. King, of Thornton, who dislocated his shoulder by a fall recently, is able to be about again.

W. N. Craig, of Boston, will address the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at its regular meeting February 21.

F. W. Smith, of Warren, will open his greenhouses at East Providence in a short time, under the management of William McAndrews, formerly of this city.

At the annual meeting of the proprietors of Swan Point cemetery last week, Daniel S. Thurber was reëlected superintendent.

Richard H. Dunbar, of Bristol, has the sympathy of a large circle of friends in the death of his wife.

The directors of the Providence Wholesale Flower Market, at a meeting held February 5, voted to have a large ice-box installed.

Walter S. Sword, of Valley Falls, has been laid up for more than a month with lumbago.

James Dillon, of Swan Point, who has been on the sick list for several weeks, has been removed to the Rhode Island hospital for treatment.

James H. Wilson is sick at his home on Forrest avenue, Middletown.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 6, 1912.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of —— [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

each day will give you plenty of water at high pressure every day in the year, and you won't need to use an overhead or storage tank either. After years spent in studying the florists' and gardeners' water supply question, we developed a line of pumps and engines that are adaptable to almost any conditions. We have combined the two in one unit and make them in sizes that give a capacity of from 400 to 4000 gallons per hour.

Standard Pumping Engines

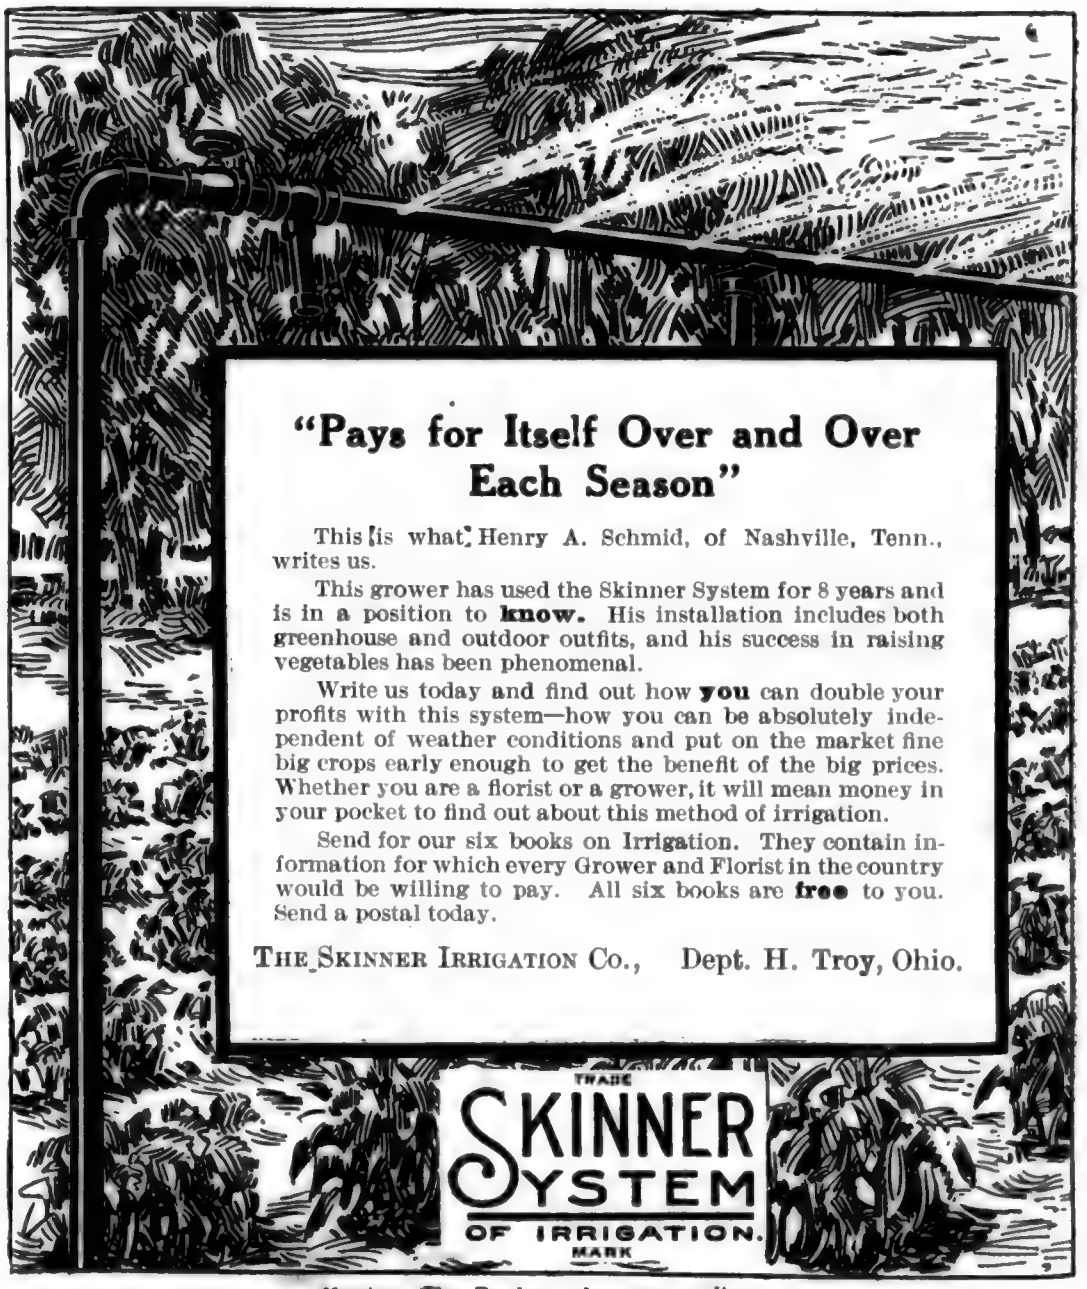
GREENWICH, CONN.



The monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held February 9, with President Stuart in the chair and 114 members present. Eleven applications were received and one honorary member elected. Charles H. Totty gave an informal talk on the novelties of 1912, which proved decidedly interesting to all, as did his account of the plans for the National Flower Show, for which many of the members are preparing exhibits and which all hope to attend.

A smoker followed the business session, during which refreshments were served and there were fine talks by P. Muller, of Boston; E. W. Neubrand, of Tarrytown; Jas. Scott, of Elmsford, and others. E. Mitchell, of Greenwich, gave some delightful songs, as did Messrs. Brown, Marshall, Foster, Wilde and many others.

The exhibits were particularly good. Certificates of merit were given to C. H. Totty for Carnation Wodenethe and to Scott Bros. for Carnation Wm. Eccles. Cultural certificates were given to T. Aitchison for Carnation Beacon, to R. Allen for two vases of mixed carnations and for three cinerarias, and to A. Wynne for three plants of stocks. Two plants of schizanthus from A. Wynne and a vase of amaryllis from W. Grierson were highly commended. Votes of thanks were given the following: P. W. Popp, for vase of schizanthus; A. Bieschke, for hybrid freesias and for Mrs. Sander marguerite; A. Paterson, for sweet peas; J. Foster, for display of vegetables; J. Burns, for a vase of mixed carnations, A. Wynne, for a vase of single stocks.

Mr. Totty offered three medals, gold, silver and bronze, for three blooms of Mrs. George Burke, to be competed for at the next fall show. O. E. A.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

The steady cold weather during the last two weeks has not interfered much with business, for all the florists have been fairly busy. There has been little sunshine, so the stock of flowers is somewhat meager and prices are decidedly firm. The dark days seem to have had little effect on bulb stock, however, as daffodils, tulips, Romans and Paper Whites are quite abundant and bring a fair price.

Everybody is looking forward to a big Valentine's day trade, as orders have been placed far in advance of the day. Basket arrangements are in especially good demand.

Carnations are fairly good now, with supply and demand about equal. Roses are rather small, except the Killarneys, and Beauties are still few in number. Single violets are plentiful, but not in as great demand as the doubles. Valley is poor, sweet peas better and orchids good, but low in price. Lilies are not abundant.

Azaleas and potted bulbous plants are much sought after, and asparagus, hardy ferns and other greens are abundant.

Various Notes.

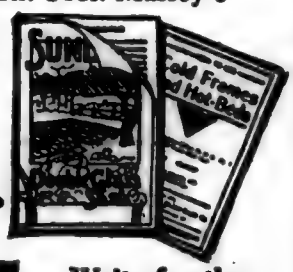
Double-Glass Double Profits



The old single layer hot-bed sash are far better than none; but they must be covered with mats, boards or shutters every evening and uncovered every morning. They are wasteful.

The new SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH, with two layers of glass enclosing an air space, are COMPLETE IN THEMSELVES. They eliminate all extra covers; they wipe out half the labor cost; they admit all the light by day to store warmth in the bed and then save the warmth at night.

They make plants earlier and stronger. They double final profits.

Every practical gardener or florist will see the value of this.

And it is good business for you to get our free catalog for full information. Write your address plainly and send it today; the hot-bed season is not far off. Prof. Massey's booklet on Hot-beds and Cold Frames sent for 4c in stamps.

WHERE SOME OF US ARE LAME

A paper by W. N. Rudd, of Morgan Park, Ill., read before the Detroit Florists' Club, at Detroit, Mich., February 19, 1912.

IT IS said that a "knock is as good as a boost," and if the saying is true, there are going to be a good many boosts in this paper.

The growth of floriculture in our country during the last twenty years has been phenomenal—I believe unparalleled in the history of any other business. For many years the demand as a whole has kept abreast or ahead of the supply. Men all over the country have succeeded—have acquired wealth—through the growing and selling of flowers, whose crude and antiquated methods of business could only have spelled disaster in any other line. The signs are plain that this condition is not to continue and we must adopt the common-sense methods which are found necessary in all other business, or many of us are going to get hurt in the near future.

Slipshod Methods.

Perhaps the one thing in which more of us are lame than in any other is in slipshod methods of bookkeeping. How many keep careful records of receipts and expenditures week by week and month by month, posted up side by side, so that we can get a comparison between this week and this month and those of last and previous years? And yet there is nothing that calls our attention to errors, and also to successes, so easily and so surely as such a simple table.

The trade may be divided into three general classes:

1. The wholesale grower, disposing of practically all his product to other florists, either direct or through commission houses.

2. The grower, generally located in the residence districts, the suburbs or in the smaller towns, who grows his own plants and flowers and retails them himself.

3. The city store man, who grows nothing, but buys in the open market the stock necessary to supply his retail trade.

We all know the grower with the dirty, sloppy, tumble-down houses. Does he ever succeed? It is hardly worth comment. The man who has not ambition enough to keep himself and his place clean is the one who is always complaining that there is no money in the business any longer, and there isn't—for him.

The Grower and the Seller.

Perhaps the commonest mistake made by the wholesale grower is in attempting both to grow and market his own crop. The ability to sell well, and the ability to grow expertly, are not always found in the same person; and even if they are, the time lost in getting the goods to the market, dickering with the buyer and collecting the proceeds is often paid for dearly, by loss from lack of close attention to the growing end. Of course, if the extent of the business will warrant it, a well organized and efficient selling department, distinct and apart from the growing end of the business, pays, and pays well.

The wholesale grower with moderate or small areas of glass will do better to consign his stock to a reliable selling agency and put in all his time in growing it better, and growing more of it, and getting it in at the time when it is worth money. Does it not almost always happen, when you visit one of those men who peddle their own stock, that he explains the miserable condition of some lot of stuff in the house by saying that the boys let it get a little too this, that, or the other, while he was away; and aren't the boys always doing it when the boss is away half the time?

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Poor Prices and Ancient Varieties.

To be sure, there are some dishonest commission men, but as a class I venture the statement that they are as honest as the men who ship to them. The man who doesn't play fair with his commission man and then complains because the commission man does not play fair with him is a foolish fellow indeed.

Many of us are selling carnations for 2 cents when good stock is bringing 3 cents. Our fuel, repairs, maintenance and all overhead expenses are the same as the other fellow's and he is only putting a little more into labor and extra care—a very little more as a percentage on his other expenses. That extra cent is just fifty per cent more than we are getting, and that fifty per cent is nearly all clear profit—which we don't get.

How many of us are growing back-number varieties simply because it costs something to stock up with the new? And yet, how little the cost compared with the difference in receipts for a whole season! And the good new things always sell in the time of a glut for some price. Not that we are to plunge on new and untried things, but we must watch the first year and jump in the second year in the things which make good. Less than two years back, the writer saw Portia carnations shipped to a Chicago commission house! Enough said.

The Grower-Retailer.

Perhaps the slowest, the least businesslike and the least up-to-date of our three classes are the men who both grow and retail their own stock. This is natural. In many cases they have been without competition. They have grown up with their surroundings and fallen into a good business among people who have had no chance to know what good stock is and meekly accept whatever is handed to them. They can force the sale of poor or ordinary stock and have gotten into the habit of growing that kind of stock and will tell you that "their trade won't pay for good stock." There is nothing more false than this. There is hardly a community in the land in which there are not a large class who will buy good stock and pay good prices when they are taught the difference. To be sure, there is everywhere a class who want cheap flowers, but, with all our care, the best of us will have plenty of second-grade stock and the markets from Maine to California are piled high with it, and through a good share of the year at prices less than the cost of growing. How these old mossbacks do squirm when a real live man opens up across the street or in the next block, and how soon they find that their trade will pay for good stock and will go to the other fellow to get it!

The Expert Retailer.

The retail store man is, properly, not a florist at all, but a merchant, and if he adapts to his own needs the methods of successful retail merchants in other lines, he succeeds. If he doesn't, he goes broke. The day of the man with a second-hand ice-box, a cracked marble-topped pine counter, and a couple of bunches of flowers (bought on credit at double price by reason of the risk of non-payment), is gone. The retail flower merchant must have capital today. Good locations, fine fixtures and attractive conditions cost money. Ability to pay promptly is an essential in buying right. Advertising, no matter how it is done, costs money; and it is advertise, advertise and keep on advertising to get business; and do more advertising to hold it after you get it. No man can stand still in business nowadays. Every business must either grow larger or grow smaller and the man who finds his business stationary in volume must either mend his ways or get out while the getting out is good.

The Mournful Subject of Gluts.

Much and endless discussion has gone on about the mournful subject of gluts in the market and how to avoid these direful calamities. Nonsense! They always have been and always will be, when dealing in perishable commodities. Why not put this old, moth-eaten subject on the shelf and get out a brand-new and live one, "How to Make Gluts Profitable"? Here is the store man's chance to even up with the grower for what the latter does to him at Christmas and other holiday times.

There is not a dry-goods shop in the country that does not have a series of mark-down or bargain sales from year end to year end, and the bigger and more prosperous the shop, the bigger and more elaborate the sales. Have we not a great lesson to learn here? And how many of us have learned it? Few men are so wealthy as not to dearly love a bargain, and no women are. The bargain basement is found in all our "palatial dry-goods emporiums." Why not in our palatial flower shops? Think about it.

THE EVOLUTION OF RETAILING.

Whither Are We Going?

The principal subject of discussion in the trade at Chicago this week has been the operations of the Fleischman Floral Co., and the diversity of opinion developed is strongly reminiscent of the erstwhile popular slang phrase, "I don't know where I'm going, but I'm on my way." Few of the many who have talked on the matter have given even a moment's consideration to Fleischman's point of view; their only concern has been with the effect on individual interests. That Fleischman's course will have its effect on the trade as a whole nearly all agree, but as to just what the effect will be there are the most divergent views.

What Fleischman is Doing.

It should be considered that Fleischman has one of the best equipped stores in the country, high class in every respect. For some years after the business was started only the best class of trade was catered to and the prices charged were probably as good as in any store west of the Hudson. Then the policy apparently was changed. Volume of business was sought and the daily papers were used to tell of special sales. In the present season larger and larger spaces have been used and, while much emphasis has been put on the service given, prices have been strongly featured; and the prices in many instances have been uncomfortably close to the wholesale rates for small lots of selected stock. Usually only one item has been advertised at a time—something in large supply. The climax came Monday morning, February 19, when the whole back page in the highest priced daily in Chicago, and smaller spaces in other papers, were used to exploit a "Twelfth Anniversary Flower Carnival," with the prices quoted on several items right down to what the stock was bringing, in small lots, at wholesale. Other items appeared to afford a moderate margin of profit, but the general impression given by the advertising was that a high class retail store was spending many hundreds of dollars to offer flowers at the wholesale prices.

The First Effect.

For a long time the other buyers in the Chicago market have pointed to the Fleischman advertising as a reason for insisting on lower prices for themselves, arguing that they must be given a chance to compete and live. The morning the full page advertisement appeared dozens of buyers brought it to the wholesale district with them. When the regular prices were asked of them, out would come the paper and so vehement were the demands for concessions that in the end a good many buyers got at least a part of their supplies at lower rates than the week before. So the first result of the Fleischman splurge undoubtedly was a reduction in the average wholesale prices for the day. But larger quantities of stock also were sold.

As to the final result, should Fleischman, and one or two others who are working more or less on the same lines, pay promptly is an essential in buying right. Advertising, no matter how it is done, costs money; and it is advertise, advertise and keep on advertising to get business; and do more advertising to hold it after you get it. the wholesale district with them. ·ven the regular prices were asked of m, out would come the paper and so hement were the demands for con ·sions that in the end a good many buyers got at least a part of their supplies at lower rates than the week before. So the first result of the Fleischman splurge undoubtedly was a reduction in the average wholesale prices for the day. But larger quantities of stock also were sold.

As to the final result, should Fleischman, and one or two others who are working more or less on the same lines, continue on the present course, one or the other of two opinions is held by most of the wholesalers affected. Some believe that the reduction of retail prices must in the end work a permanent reduction in wholesale prices and hence in returns to the growers. Others assert, with seeming confidence and the weight of logic, that the result will be an increase in the consumption of flowers that will minimize gluts and in the end work out an increase in the average value of a season's cut.

The Retailer's Views.

Among the retailers scarcely any two hold similar views as to the ultimate effect of the present Fleischman policy. The first impression is that a high class store that quotes such prices must have some special advantage aside from large buying power, but for a large class who never have been able to get fancy prices, the rapidly recurring widely advertised bargain sales have few terrors; all that they fear is the automobile delivery and other details of high class service thus brought within the reach of customers who have not been accustomed to furbelows. The question of boxing and delivery is important. It is not profitable, in a big, spread-out city, to wrap and deliver one 35-cent sale; it would not be profitable even if the stock cost nothing. Whether it is possible to put up and deliver 100 such sales for $35 is another and unsettled question.

Many who have been giving a fairly high grade of service and charging good prices see in the special sale advertising method of retailing a menace to the old-fashioned plan of steadily maintained prices, regardless of market conditions. Usually these stores feel the necessity of meeting the advertised prices, profit or no profit. For some years the trend of events has been in the direction of the retail prices for flowers swinging with supply, as they do with fresh vegetables, eggs, butter and many other articles. There has been sharp resistance, and doubtless at least some always will resist with success, but as the stores that follow the other course gather buying power with increasing volume of business, the problem becomes one that will have to be seriously faced.

Lange was the first Chicago retailer to advertise widely and sell at popular prices. As everyone knows, his business grew rapidly. All who have watched recognize that the Fleischman purchases and sales are several times what they were when the present campaign was begun. It is high pressure merchandising. It calls for the use of money and brains. It necessitates a close study of constantly changing conditions, an alertness to take advantage of opportunities as they are presented.

Whether or not the system of retailing now under discussion will prove the permanently successful one it is much too early to tell. A few years ago the retailers' problems were not what they are today, with production at the growing centers increasing faster than the population and the buying power of the people.

WELL, HE INVITED CRITICISM.

I have read with much interest Gertrude Blair's helpful suggestions on design work, as published in The Review from time to time. As I have been making designs for many years, it would hardly be boastful to say that I have necessarily acquired some skill, not to speak of natural taste. I think that J. E. Jay's cross, offered by him for criticism in The Review of May 11, 1911, and referred to by Miss Blair on page 11 of the issue of February 8, 1912, is simply beyond redemption. The perpetrator of it evidently had some flowers and an order to make a cross, and just stuck the flowers in without any other idea except to cover the space.

In the first place, the cross is too small to permit the use of those cycas leaves, and they are rather stiff for any such work. I prefer Whitmani ferns for a background, with plumosus or maidenhair ferns to dress them off. I always plan a design pretty thoroughly in advance, and know exactly what I am going to use and where I am going to put it. I grow my own ferns and use them in profusion as long as they last, but in winter I soon exhaust my ferns and then have to resort to galax, etc.

By way of contrast with the cross, Miss Blair draws attention to a picture of a shield made by T. A. Ivey. I think the shield is beautiful in every respect, except that I do not like the effect of the Easter lilies. Somehow the design is too conventional for the entirely unconventional way in which the lilies are added. They do not look as if they belonged there.

Miss Blair is evidently an artist, not only in the use of flowers, but also in the use of words. I can not express my thoughts as well as I can feel them, or I might tell how much I have been benefited by her articles, as well as by the numerous other good things in The Review.

WHO GETS TRADE PRICES?

Could The Review give a short write-up to assist the many advertisers who issue catalogues? The information we want is to know who are entitled to wholesale lists. Applications come often on plain postals like this: "Please send wholesale list," or "Please send catalogue and price-list." And again others simply sign their names with the word "florist" after the name. I have found that a lot of such applicants are really dealers, generally small dealers, but careless in not having printed stationery. But many, no doubt, are persons who try to get dealers' prices, which they are not entitled to. The florists' directory and other publications give many of the dealers, but not all of them by any means, and in the rush of spring trade it is not practical to wait for the information which can be gained by writing for it. Perhaps a brief write-up on this subject would help the trade generally. Can you not help us out?

W. W. Wilmore.

The beginners in the business usually are desirable customers—they may make considerable extra correspondence until they get the swing of things, and their orders may be small at the start, but they are pretty sure to grow; furthermore, the man, or woman, who gets consideration at the start, when help is most needed, is pretty sure to be one's friend for life. The unfortunate part is that so many are using every dollar for glass and stock that they feel they must get along for a while without printed stationery. Some who make progress otherwise never get so far as having a printed letterhead. Then there is another class who are starting in the business either through developing what was at first a hobby or as a sideline of some other business. The stationery used by the latter is more apt to give the idea that they are not entitled to trade prices than that they are entitled to them.

When there is no evidence that a would-be buyer is entitled to trade prices there really is only one thing to be done—ask either retail prices or the missing evidence. Many of the best houses do this, and the trade at large certainly is entitled to this protection. If the custom were general there would be no trouble—the only difficulty would be in drawing the line, in determining just which ones of the beginners are sufficiently interested in the trade to be entitled to wholesale rates. The fact that there are so many who are just on the border line, deriving only part of their income from the florists' business, perhaps leads to the practice of the firms that give wholesale rates to anyone who buys in wholesale quantities and under the usual trade conditions. But this is not the best practice; there are wealthy amateurs who buy in trade quantities but who should be the customers of the local florists and not of the out-of-town wholesale grower or dealer. Still, if time is taken to investigate the doubtful inquiries, it will be found that those who ask for trade rates usually are entitled to them. The Review investigates every doubtful name that comes into the office. Now and then someone is found to be sailing under false colors, but it almost always turns out that the party is just starting in the business, though there is a sprinkling of those who have been in it a considerable length of time without having advanced to the dignity of printed stationery, or becoming rated or listed anywhere.

The trade certainly should support the houses that offer the retailer the protection of turning down the orders of those who ask wholesale prices without being entitled to them.

A NORTHEAST EXPOSURE.

The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph supplied by Fred C. Morris, Hinsdale, Ill. "My object in sending it," writes Mr. Morris, "is to show what can be done with a north porch, as I have no doubt most florists hear frequently the expression, 'Oh, but my porch faces the north and gets little sun.' My porch fronts north and east. You will notice the growth to the north is the most luxuriant. The porch boxes are placed on brackets outside the rail, level with the floor, and are filled on the north with ferns, white petunias, red and white tuberous begonias, Solanum jasminoides, German ivy and Vinca variegata. On the east, geraniums, red and white, are used instead of begonias. The bed below is filled with salvias, coleus, a few cannas and an odd palm or two that 'had seen better days,' having been used for decorating all winter, edged with white lobelia. The baskets are filled to match the boxes; the vines are Clematis paniculata and one white cobæa. The whole color scheme is red and white; no other color."

TEMPERATURE FOR ISMENES.

In The Review of February 8, page 18, I noticed an inquiry from M. C. in regard to the culture of Ismene calathina. May I give M. C. just one important hint? If he keeps his ismenes in a temperature lower than 55 or 60 degrees he is liable to lose them; 60 to 70 degrees suits them better.

CAN THE WATER BE PURIFIED?

Can artesian well water, containing white sulphur, be purified so it can be used for plants and lawns? Please give all information possible, as it injures vegetation when used in its present condition. W. G.

Sulphur water may contain alkalis which are even more injurious than the sulphur, and it will not be found feasible to attempt to purify the water if in its present form it can not be used with safety upon the plants. The fact that it kills grass where it has been allowed to soak away in large quantities does not necessarily imply that it can not be used in the greenhouse without injury, if care is taken that the plants are not overwatered, but all experiments with it should be carried on upon a small scale.

ROSES

ROSES DYING.

Your paper seems to be the best place to get information, and as I am in need of some, I will place the matter before you. I have a new house of roses, planted last June. They did well until nearly Christmas, when they got a pretty good dose of mildew, in spite of the fact that I had used sulphur regularly on the hot water pipes; sometimes I thought I used it pretty strong, as I could smell it plainly and feel it in my eyes, but the mildew came just the same. I tried some sprays, which seemed to have no effect whatever, so finally I used Bordeaux mixture, which cleaned it out, but two or three weeks ago the Killarneys began losing their leaves and a great many of them took on a sickly yellow appearance. Even the young shoots, with buds on, commenced to lose their leaves from the bottom up, and finally to the top; sometimes the bud matured and sometimes it wilted and turned its head down. Some of the foliage looked as if it had a bad case of red spider. There were some red spiders in spots, but not a bad case of them. I used the hose freely, but now some of the roses are dying. I am sending a sample of them under separate cover—two small plants, pulled up.

The soil was well enriched with horse manure at the time of planting and a layer of coarse manure was put over the cracks in the benches. The only other fertilizers used were a little bone meal and a small watering of nitrate of soda, about a teaspoonful to a 1½-gallon sprinkler of water; also a little wood ashes and a small amount of lime, the latter just a few days ago, to help kill the fishworms. These plants seem to be dead at the roots and I do not know what the matter is. Richmond and Maryland in the same house and under the same treatment are not affected, or only to a small degree, but I fear half the Killarneys will go, though some of them are showing new growth and a few were not badly affected. E. M. H.

The two plants received were entirely dead. Each contained some mealy bug just above their roots, but these specimens were so thoroughly dried up that they did not in any way assist in locating the cause of their death. If Maryland and Richmond, under similar conditions of soil and atmosphere, are unaffected, the cause is probably not in the soil. Heavy top-dressings of fresh cow manure will not infrequently cause a loss of foliage and even scorching. This would show more quickly on Killarney than on Maryland and the tougher foliaged Richmond. It is likely that between your several remedies, sulphuring the pipes, spraying with Bordeaux mixture, etc., the foliage has been injured. This damage would most probably be caused by the Bordeaux mixture. This is a splendid spray for fungoid diseases, though I have doubts as to its efficiency against mildew. Much would depend on how strong you used the Bordeaux. If, for instance, it was of a strength equal to what is generally used in spraying apples and other fruit trees, it would be reasonably sure to destroy much of the foliage. Peach trees, if sprayed at the same strength as apple, will lose a lot of foliage; this would not occur at once, but gradually, and after a lapse of two or three weeks. My personal opinion would be that the sulphur on the pipes, added to the Bordeaux, caused the loss of leaves and caused the plants to die. Your soil was evidently all right and so were the moderate applications of stimulants. Rosa.

ROSE FOLIAGE DISEASED.

I am sending in a box of some rose leaves that are infected. It is something new around here. We would like to know what it is and how to treat it. F. C.

The leaves, when received, were much dried up. It is hard to give an opinion as to what has caused the foliage to go as yours has, and not know anything of your varieties, cultural conditions, etc. The most probable cause would seem to be an excess of manure, either in the form of top-dressing or as liquid. Fresh cow manure highly charged, as it always is, with ammonia would cause this scorching unless some air was kept on the top ventilators until the odor subsided, but of course this would not be done with such weather as we had early in February. Of course this may not be the cause of your trouble, but I have seen similar damage done on a number of occasions by using fresh cow manure. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Stevias.

Of course you would not forget to save a few stock plants of the easily grown but ever useful winter blooming plants, the stevias. Place a good batch of cuttings in the sand now. Further cuttings can easily be had from these, and the stock plants can be discarded. For pot culture the dwarf variety is best, but for cutting, the tall variety has many advantages.

Canterbury Bells.

The plants of Canterbury bells intended for Easter should now be a foot high and should have a few stakes to keep them erect. The night temperature for these is better if it does not exceed 50 degrees. In a warmer and moister atmosphere the shoots have a faculty of dying off, which is rarely seen when they are grown cool.

Cannas.

It is much too early to start canna roots yet, but if you want a plant or two of each variety in flower to show your customers what the varieties are like, place one or two in a warm, moist house at once. Look over your stock of roots and remove any that show decay. If you are short on any sorts, and there are many who annually buy large quantities, place your orders now before the stocks of A-1 varieties become depleted. Lists of first-class sorts will be found advertised by all the leading specialists in The Review.

Calceolarias.

Like show pelargoniums, calceolarias want a cold house. One which seems clammy to the feel will just suit them. Never let them get potbound before shifting them. They should get their final potting as soon as possible. Three parts of fibrous loam and one part of old cow manure, with some soot, coarse sand and fine charcoal added, make an ideal compost. As everyone knows who has grown them, they are headquarters for aphis, and fumigating rather than spraying is needed to keep these in check. It is difficult to get a spray on the lower surface of the leaves without damaging them.

Allamandas.

Allamandas, whether in pots, tubs or planted out, which have been resting through the winter, should now be pruned back and, in the case of pot plants, the bulk will require a shift. Allamandas are strong feeders and a compost of three parts fibrous loam, one part old cow manure, some bone meal and coarse sand can be used. Place in a warm, moist house. Water sparingly, but syringe freely until the plants break, after which more moisture can be afforded at the root. Large specimens in tubs or planted out should have the surface soil removed and a generous top-dressing of cow manure and loam added. This can be supplemented, while the plants are in active growth, by a mulch of pure cow manure, as well as applications of liquid manure. Allamandas are among our finest of greenhouse climbers in summer, and the variety Williamsi in addition makes a charming pot plant.

Tuberous Begonias.

In order to get a batch of tuberous begonias in flower early, start some tubers now in flats containing some sand and leaf-mold. Water sparingly so as not to rot the tubers and pot off before the roots ramify too far. Be sure to prick off seedlings into shallow flats of light soil before they become crowded. Give them a light shelf in a carnation temperature. They can be potted along and will make excellent plants, either for flowering in pots or bedding out. For the latter purpose a well shaded position is necessary. When this can be given them, and also an occasional watering, they make one of the most brilliant and satisfactory beds imaginable.

Hydrangeas.

Memorial day and through the month of June is the season par excellence for selling hydrangeas. In order to have the plants in nice condition at that time they should be placed in a cool greenhouse not later than March. Do not stand them along the paths, to be brushed against, nor under the benches, to be drawn and spindled. It is difficult before Easter to give them the space they ought to have, but it can be done usually by what is generally termed a little "scheming."

Gladioli.

For Memorial day crops gladioli should be planted now. Even if they should come into flower a little ahead of that date, there is generally a good sale found for them. The old and inexpensive Brenchleyensis, brilliant scarlet in color, is a grand Memorial day sort, and anyone hitting that date with a good batch will make money. Other useful varieties are Augusta, America, still the most popular of all, May, Shakespeare and Mrs. Francis King.

Shamrocks.

The time when shamrocks will be in demand is rapidly approaching. All the young plants should before this time be in the little pots or pans in which they are to be sold. Keep them in a light, cool house. Avoid cold drafts, as the plants are susceptible to mildew and once badly affected are practically unsalable. Thrips will also sometimes attack them if the atmosphere becomes too arid, but this can be kept in check by weekly fumigations.

Candytuft.

There are few Memorial day crops which pay better money than does candytuft. The plants of these should now be in small pots, and this is merely intended as a reminder that the sooner these can be planted out in beds or benches, the better. Continue to grow them cool. If the crop is at all backward some additional heat can be given later in the season, when the growth is more advanced.

Iron Frame House of G. E. Kopper, Schenectady, N. Y.

Lily of the Valley.

Flowers from the new season's crop of valley pips are now coming fine. It has been slower work than usual forcing this popular flower of late, owing to the intense cold, but now, with the assistance of more solar fervor, crops are coming along more quickly. It is too early yet to start plants for Easter unless they are brought along in a moderately cool house. Six weeks in a temperature of 50 degrees will flower valley now, and four weeks in 10 degrees more heat. This refers to plants in pots which do not now need to be drawn up in the dark, but can go into the light at once. Such plants may be a trifle dwarfer than the darkened-frame-grown stock, but will carry heavy, dark foliage, and the flowers will have a great deal more substance.

For cut flower purposes a fresh batch of pips should be planted in the cases once a week. They should flower within three weeks, now that the most severe of the winter's cold has passed.

The outlook for valley for next season is dubious. Reports are that whole fields in Germany were plowed up as the result of last summer's great drought. This is sure to cause an advance in price next season here.

Annuals for Memorial Day.

Many inquiries are received as to good annuals for Memorial day. Seed can now be sown of ten weeks' stocks, annual larkspurs, antirrhinums, calendulas and dimorphothecas for this purpose, but the sowing must not be delayed. Asters can not be flowered so early, but if a spare bench is planted with Early Wonder or Queen of the Market they will prove invaluable later in the season, when carnations are running out and before the outdoor aster crop comes in.

The Propagating Bench.

The cutting bench should now be filled to its fullest capacity all the time. Coleus, alternantheras, petunias, verbenas, heliotropes and ageratums are only a few of the many subjects which should be freely propagated. It is as important to pot or box off the rooted cuttings at the correct time as to place them in the sand, for if neglected even a few days too long, they become hard and stunted and never prove so satisfactory as when placed in the soil while the roots are yet short.

KOPPER IS PROGRESSING.

At Schenectady, N. Y., G. E. Kopper is planning the increase of his glass this spring; his first addition will be a house 50x200 feet, half of which he plans to plant to carnations, with chrysanthemums and greens in the other half. Business is increasing steadily with him, and he intends to develop a large commercial plant. The accompanying illustration gives an interior view of Mr. Kopper's iron frame Hitchings house, with concrete bed walls. The house had just been planted with chrysanthemums for last season's crop when the photograph was made. Mr. Kopper is a strong advocate of concrete construction, both for walls and benches, believing that it will be the material of the future for all up-to-date greenhouse construction. Mr. Kopper has fifteen acres of fine, flat land which has been growing vegetables for five years. He expects to plant half of it to hardy perennials and nursery stock, developing the nursery department at the same time that he is building up the greenhouse business.

ORCHIDS IN EUROPE.

Growth of the Orchid Industry.

Perhaps a few notes on orchids as grown in Europe may be of interest to the trade in America, as they can have little idea of the enormous extent of the orchid industry on this side. We have some gigantic establishments in England that are devoted exclusively to orchid culture in all its branches. Imported plants are sold in ever-increasing numbers each year, some of the large firms disposing of 100,000 to 250,000 plants each season, of dendrobiums, cattleyas, vandas, etc., with smaller lots of the less known kinds. They make up special boxes of different varieties suitable for small growers and amateurs, who have perhaps only one or two small greenhouses to grow the plants in, and who have good success with them, as the old idea of this class of plants being difficult to grow is quite exploded here.

Activity in Hybridizing.

It is, however, more especially with the hybridizing and raising of seedlings that the growers are concerned. These are now raised in such quantities as seem almost incredible. I know one firm of Yorkshire orchidists who have 50,000 seedling odontoglossums in all stages of growth, from tiny, tiny things up to flowering size, and, as they are the finest crosses obtainable, there are some startling novelties to come. The same firm has also at least as many cattleya and lælio-cattleya crosses, brassocattleyas, sophro-lælias, etc. The intercrossing of these genera has been reduced to a fine art; secondary and further crosses are now common, and as the home-raised plants seem to acquire a strength and constitution not present in imported plants, as well as an ever-increasing variety of colors, I am of the opinion that the future of orchidology lies in this direction.

High Standard of Exhibits.

The fortnightly shows at the Royal Horticultural Society's hall, in London, are a revelation, for at every meeting quantities of new hybrids are exhibited and it has to be something special, indeed, that receives the coveted first-class certificate or award of merit. Many fine varieties that would have obtained these honors a few seasons ago are now passed over with little comment. So high has the standard become that it is useless to submit anything to the orchid committee that is not really at the top of its class. The certificated varieties are snapped up at once by the lovers of orchids, and a further hybridization is at once commenced with the best of each class; what the final results may be, therefore, it is impossible to imagine.

Tubes for Preserving Pollen.

There are now special tubes in which to keep the pollen until it is wanted. These tubes will keep the pollen alive and active for twelve months, and in this way the pollen of an autumn-blooming variety may be safely kept and utilized upon a flower the following spring or summer. Cypripediums have been improved almost out of recognition, as compared with their original state. Broad, flat banners or dorsal sepals are now an imperative necessity in a new variety. The coloring, also, in some of the newer hybrids is magnificent, and it is only varieties having these improvements that are in anything like request. Vast quantities of inferior sorts are sent to the auction rooms and sold for cut flower purposes or to the amateurs every week, but anything special that goes to auction always realizes a good price and this is now a recognized method of disposing of duplicate forms from private collections, because the raising of seedling hybrids is not confined to the trade. All or nearly all the private growers are raisers of hybrids; many fine things, indeed, have been raised by these growers and are as eagerly sought for by the trade as the trade-raised ones are picked up by private growers.

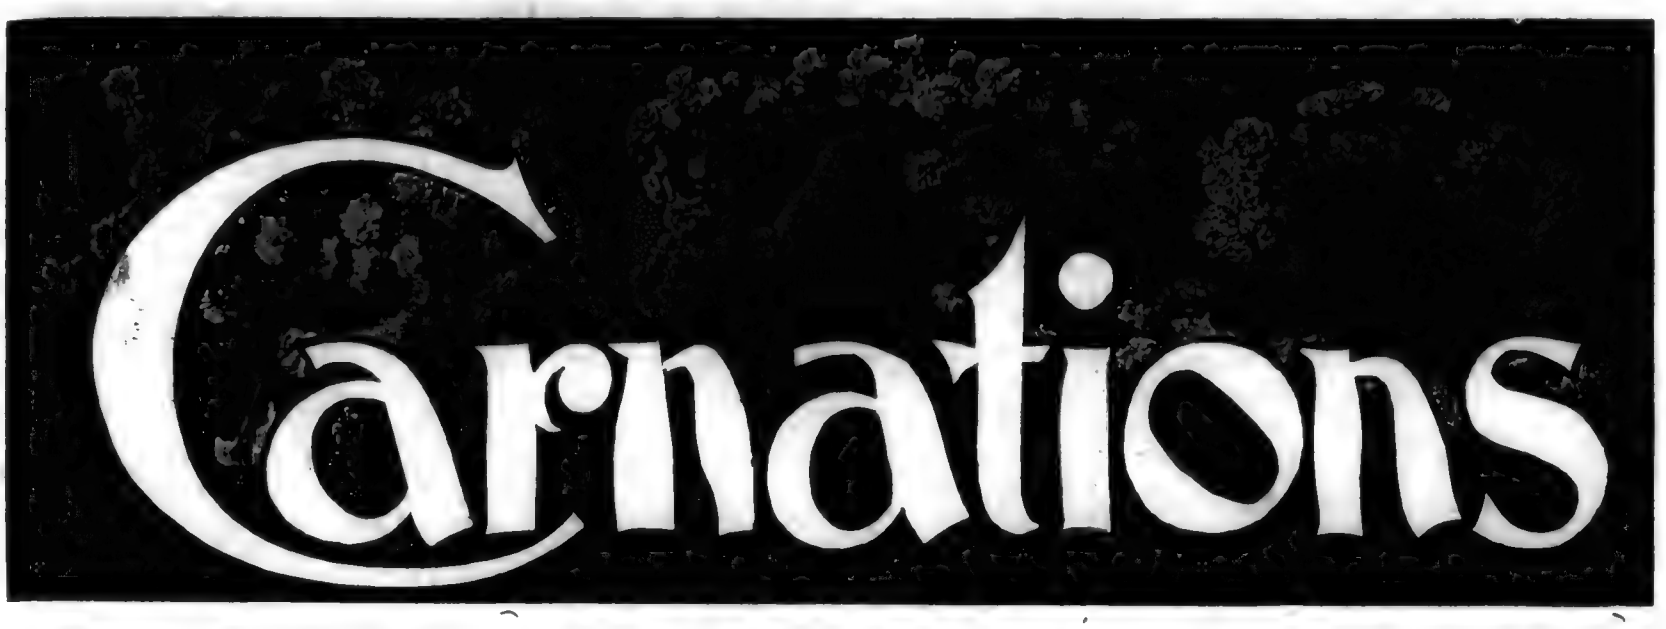
FINE SPIKE OF CATTLEYA.

The accompanying illustration shows a plant of Cattleya Trianæ with one spike bearing eleven flowers which bloomed during the recent holidays in the collection of J. P. Parker, Santa Cruz, Cal. The plant is still in good health, despite the tax on its strength.

Some time ago Mr. Parker had a curiosity in the way of a double-flowered Cattleya labiata in which every part was doubled, even to the pollen masses.

POTTING PALMS.

The season of enforced activity is fast approaching, and any potting or tubbing among the palms should be attended to now, or the probabilities are that in the rush of other duties the work will be laid over for another year. Always give small shifts to palms. When they are overpotted or tubbed the soil usually becomes soured and wormy before the roots can take it up, and good results are impossible when this occurs. As palms do not require shifting as frequently as many other plants, care should be taken that the drainage is good. In regard to compost, shake out the finer particles of soil and use good fibrous loam, to which may be added some bone meal and soot. No rotted manure should be used unless it is quite old and will crumble up in the hands like leaf-mold, but a good proportion of sharp, gritty sand should always be used. Always pot firmly and water with caution until the roots are actively at work in the new compost. The latanias and phœnix are rather more robust rooting than the kentias and require more frequent shifts.



Any plants which are not to be repotted can have a top-dressing afforded them, picking away some of the old compost first. In order to keep the plants clear of scale, spray them occasionally with some insecticide that will loosen up the scales, allowing them to be sponged off clean. If this spraying is not first given, scale will be found hard to remove and too much pressure often causes discoloration of the leaves. As the sun increases in power a light shading will be necessary, even on clouded or ground glass. Otherwise the palms will lose their dark green color.

SCALE ON RUBBER PLANTS.

I have some rubber plants about 3 years old. They were doing well until this year, when they commenced to get black spots on the leaves, and the leaves commenced to crumble. Can you tell me what the cause of this is and how to remedy it? A. D.

Without having seen a specimen of the ficus leaves, it is difficult to say just what the trouble may be. There is a strong probability that the black spots referred to are black scales, insects that are not uncommon on ficus. If this surmise is correct, the safest remedy would be to sponge the leaves with a solution of Sulpho-Tobacco soap. This preparation may be purchased from any of the large supply houses.

CUTTINGS DO NOT ROOT.

I am having considerable trouble with my propagating bench, especially in regard to carnation cuttings. They seem to rot a few days after being placed in the sand. I treat them in the usual way; that is, I take the slips from the flower stems and place them in damp moss for the night man, who cuts them on the slant so as to strike a joint and replaces them in moss. The following morning we put them in the sand, which has been well soaked, leveled and pounded. The sand bench is of wood, with four to five inches of sharp sand. Under the bench, closed up, are three runs of steam pipe, which are regulated with a valve at one end. On sunny, bright days I sprinkle the tops of the cuttings lightly and cover with newspaper to protect from sun and drafts. Any information as to the cause of my trouble or the remedy will be gladly received. J. P.

You are certainly not following a course which would be calculated to bring success in propagating carnation cuttings. Unless your night man is different from most of the men who are employed in that capacity, he should not be entrusted with the trimming of the cuttings. We think that our cuttings are worthy of the time and attention of the best men on our place, from start to finish. When you take the cuttings from the plants or flower stems, dip them into a pail of clear, cool water and place them in a box, covering them with paper, and set them in a cool place until you can trim them. After they are trimmed they should be stuck into the propagating sand as soon as possible.

Three steam pipes are too many under your propagating bench, especially if the front and back are boarded up. Did you ever put a thermometer under there, to see what the temperature is? Our propagating bench is against the north wall and we have under it one 2-inch steam pipe hanging against the wall. We are taking out batch after batch of well rooted carnation cuttings, four to five weeks from the day they were stuck. With this excessive bottom heat, covering the cuttings with newspapers would help to start fungus in the sand by holding in the moisture and producing a humid atmosphere. We use a muslin curtain, hung in front of the bench, and just recently we have placed another one over the top of the bench to keep off drafts which come through the open ventilators on bright days. Again, you may have some bad sand, which may be polluted in some way.

Spraying overhead is also frequently the starting of just such trouble. There is a certain happy medium in both spraying and shading, and the propagator who succeeds in maintaining it does not have any trouble in rooting his cuttings. You want to keep your cuttings fresh at any cost, but you want to do it with just as little of either shading or spraying as possible, especially the latter. Carnation cuttings, like carnation plants, do not want too much water on the foliage as long as there is no wilting.

If you have failed to root your cuttings during the last two months, you will probably not be able to root them from now on, as the conditions are not likely to be nearly so favorable. With the added strength of the sun, necessitating more ventilating, which in turn will produce drafts, even the expert often finds it difficult to get a good strike. Better buy what cuttings you need for this year and try your hand at propagating again next winter, under the most favorable conditions.

STOCK TO GO TO EUROPE.

I should like to get some information about the packing of carnation plants or rooted cuttings for shipment to Europe. I wish to send a few carnation plants to Germany. Would it be better to ship cuttings or 2-inch plants? How would you pack them and what is the best way to ship them? How about the duty? A. V. B.

The packing of plants for shipment is a problem which bears close study and has by many of the large shippers been reduced to a science. An expert plant packer is as valuable to the plant producer as a first-class grower, for of what use is it to grow fancy stock only to ruin it in sending it to your trade?

To ship plants to Europe requires the best packing you can possibly do, and even then it is more or less of a lottery as to whether they will get through in good shape. Firms who have shipped heavily to European points agree that it is almost entirely a question of what part of the hold of the ship your boxes are stored in. If they are placed near the boilers there is little chance of their surviving the trip and I am told that this frequently happens. There seems to be no guarantee by the transportation companies that this will not happen.

Many thousands of carnation cuttings are shipped over right from the cutting bench, usually by parcels post. If shipped this way, use a waxed or glazed paper to wrap them in. Put only about ten plants in a bundle and see that the moss does not come up higher than the base of the cutting, where the roots start. The moss does not need to be more moist than if you were shipping them on a three days' journey. When placing them in the box, use plenty of fine excelsior between the bundles. This is to keep from having too much foliage in a bunch. You will also find it a good plan to dust a little sulphur or Grape Dust among the foliage as you wrap the cuttings.

Before packing up the cuttings, make inquiry as to the leaving time of the ships which carry this kind of freight, so you can start your shipment at the proper time to meet the ship, else they may lie around the docks several days.

Your custom-house officials will gladly furnish you all the information you want regarding the duties imposed by the different nations in Europe; also the rates for transportation, etc.

Plants from pots can perhaps be hardened off a little more than the cuttings and would therefore stand a little more hardship. Shake all the soil from the roots and pack as recommended for the cuttings. A. F. J. B.

THE WORRY ENDED.

Relative to carnations, we have been growing them for more than fifteen years, making them our specialty, and have always carried out the general instructions to use cow manure, but have lots of trouble with a living fungus which starts in the soil from lumps of the manure and spreads rapidly through the bench. This seems to stop as the cold weather comes on. We are also troubled greatly in our section with eel or earth worm, which seems to spread and thrive better in cow manure than any other kind.

Last season we found it difficult to procure the cow manure and decided to try pulverized sheep manure, which we did. We had a heavy, sandy loam soil and put on 800 to 1,000 pounds of the manure to the house, 20x80 feet. The results were all that we could ask. We have many thousand plants in the finest condition, producing the finest flowers. We will not worry about cow manure any more for carnations.

GERMAIN SEED & PLANT CO.

The accompanying illustration shows the remodeled interior of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. store, Main street, Los Angeles, Cal. This is one of the oldest established businesses in California, but one that is constantly kept young by up-to-date methods and sound business policy. As will be noted, the store is both roomy and well arranged, and all other departments are similar. The offices are on the second floor and equipped with every appurtenance to aid in this end of the business, while the windows are famous all over the state for the excellent displays constantly kept up. Seed store windows are too often uninteresting and ugly, but those of the Germain Seed Co. would do credit to an up-to-date department store, and form a splendid advertisement. H. R. R.

NOTES ON GLADIOLI

GLADIOLUS PRIMULINUS.

For fifty-two years I have grown the gladiolus, and most of the time has been devoted to the task of trying to improve it. In my younger days there were practically no books to guide the beginner and I had to work out the problems the best way I could. Some of my boyish efforts would make a botanist smile. However, the knowledge gained, that some things can not be done, has paid; also, that some things said to be impossible can be done has been more satisfactory. For instance, scientific men say that the gladiolus can not be crossed with flowers of a different species. Now, I have proved, to my own satisfaction, at least, that they can. There are several species of flowers that will hybridize the gladiolus and cause it to bear fertile seed. The tigridia, the ixia and montbretia, all these will fertilize the gladiolus. To be sure, the progeny is utterly and entirely worthless from anything but a scientific standpoint, and, I may remark, it does not pay for the time spent. I will also add that it is not worth while for the grower to spend his time crossing the species; or to cross the wild on the domestic, or cultivated gladiolus. The results seldom pay for the effort. In the beginning I made this mistake, and it took a good many years to find out that I was harking on the wrong track. The beginner in breeding gladioli had better take the best cultivated varieties he can get for his seed stock, and leave the species alone.

Now, concerning the Primulinus, when this was first discovered I was fortunate enough to get one of the original bulbs. This did not come up until late, and did not bloom, but made two small bulbs. Fearing these might not bloom, I wrote Dr. Van Fleet, who kindly let me have a bulb, making three, which all bloomed. These were pollinated from Princeps, and some of my big seedlings, and I got a tidy lot of the largest and plumpest seed that I ever saw. This was planted and came up fully ten days before other seed planted at the same time. The seedlings kept ahead all summer and made a nice lot of the best seedling bulbs that I ever grew, almost all of which bloomed the next year. The flowers were a surprise and delight, being so entirely different and distinct from all others. There were not many colors, being mostly shades of red, rose and pink, all having great yellow throats, but the colors are delicate and beautiful. For all their delicate appearance they are tough, standing the hottest sun and heaviest rain and wind, coming up smiling after the worst storms. No gladiolus is better in this respect. The flowers are rather small when compared with the new giant varieties, although I have several 4-inch and 5-inch sorts. I have not as yet succeeded in getting any pure yellows among them, and I do not know of anyone who has; but pure yellow is bound to come, for gladioli will breed back to their grandparents or great-grandparents. This I found out long before I ever heard of Mendel and his law.

I have a white gladiolus that I will challenge any man to tell from the White Lady, yet it is only one-quarter of the blood of that variety. It was this fact that made me take the Primulinus for a foundation, as there is a scarcity of really good yellows at the present day. Whether I shall succeed or not is a question, but if I do not, some one else will, for a lot of good yellows are certain to come from the Primulinus, sooner or later.

These hybrids are not popular with the florists, on account of not having enough flowers open at a time, and the habit of the flowers in looking downward. For the amateur they are fine, as they last a long time in bloom, either when cut or in the garden. A vase of the cut stalks is a thing of marvelous beauty.

This matter of breeding gladioli to satisfy the demands of the florists' trade has been carried too far. The result is that we have, with few exceptions, a great lot of varieties the principal merit of which is that they have a lot of the flowers open at once, and increase rapidly. Now, these characteristics are not the best by any means. We often see in a flower store window gladioli wadded together in a bunch, having no more grace or beauty than a bunch of asparagus on the market man's table. It gives me a pain, but I do not know who is to blame for it. A gladiolus, to be valuable, should last a long time. A variety that stays in bloom two weeks is far better than one that lasts only three or four days. Three flowers of the Princeps, and many of its seedlings, make more show than eight or ten flowers of the common market varieties, and will stay in bloom three times as long.

Later on I may say more on this subject, as I think it up to the breeders and growers to set this matter right. A full and free discussion ought to do good, and for that reason I would like to hear the opinion of others.

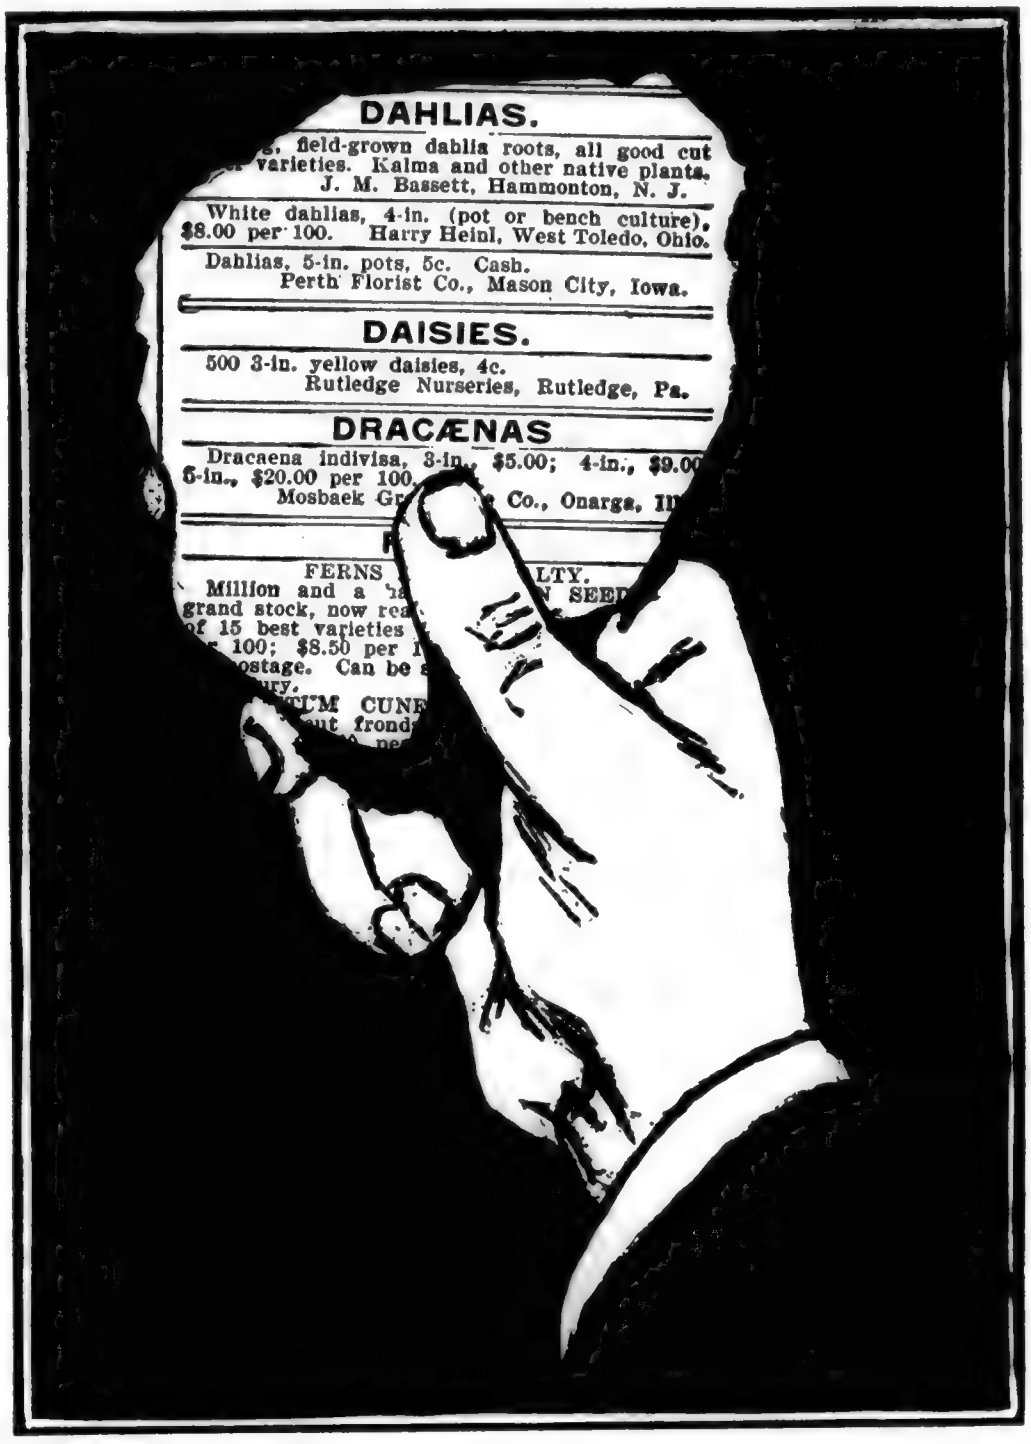
OPENING FROZEN VENTILATORS

How do greenhouse men generally manage ventilators in extremely cold weather? It is often necessary to raise them when they are frozen fast. How are they loosened most readily? Then, when they are to be closed, they are coated with ice and can not be closed tightly. How is this ice to be removed?

T. H. S.

The first thing needed to open a ventilating sash which has become frozen down is strong and powerful ventilating machinery, and this should be handled so as to have the least possible trouble from ice. This will be lessened if the lower end of the ventilating sash has only a narrow bearing upon the header. On cold mornings, when the sashes have frozen down, it is best not to hurry too much about opening the ventilators, as it does not take long for any ice which has formed under them to melt. Ordinarily there will be little trouble from ice in houses which are kept above 50 degrees, but if it becomes necessary to lift sashes which remain frozen it can generally be accomplished by the use of a chisel or steel bar, if it is not found feasible to raise the temperature and thus melt the ice.



The trouble is likely to be greater in closing ventilators upon whose lower edge icicles have formed. If the icicles are large they may be broken off with a pole and the sash can then generally be brought so near the headers that the remainder of the ice will be melted by the warm air which escapes through the crack, in all except the coolest houses, where, if there is danger that the temperature will drop too much, the ice may have to be cut away with a chisel.

TOO COOL FOR SPRENGERI.

Enclosed herewith, I am sending you a plant of my Asparagus Sprengeri. These plants were seedlings two inches high, with one small bulb, when planted in the benches last August. They have apparently made no growth excepting to grow bulbs. The compost used is one-fourth well decayed cow manure and the rest rather heavy soil. Any new shoots that grow are not long and feathery, but short and stubby. There are some little green bugs on the new shoots and I have been using Nicoticide. Would the new shoots do better if the old ones were cut or trimmed out? Please inform me what is wrong and what can be done to improve the growth. The plants are in the side benches of a carnation house, with a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night. M. P.

So far as one may judge from the description given, the compost is one in which Asparagus Sprengeri should make more growth than is indicated by the specimen, but the chief cause of the slow progress in this case is the low night temperature. Carnation temperature is too low for this plant, for it requires a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. If space is available, it would pay to transplant the asparagus to a bench in a warmer house. These Are the Little Liners That Do the Business

ELECTRICITY TO AID GROWTH.

Please give whatever information you can on the use of electricity for growing plants. W. G.

Numerous experiments have been carried on with electric lights to determine their effect upon the growth of plants. The results appear to indicate that the growth of the plants is hastened, especially the development of the stems and leaves. The results are less satisfactory with plants grown for their flowers.

Experiments to determine the results from the direct application of electricity either to the soil or to the plants, or both, have been tried. Galvanized wires are placed in the ground and other wires are stretched overhead. From the overhead wire, wire chains are suspended at frequent intervals. The wires are connected with the poles of a high voltage electrical machine. Tests of the effect of electricity applied in this way have been made both in greenhouses and for the growing of field crops, with results that are promising, and it is possible that the use of electricity for hastening the development of greenhouse and truck crops will soon be shown to be a commercial success where cheap power can be obtained.

SPANISH IRIS.

We are thinking of trying Spanish iris another year for cut flowers for the local and Boston markets. Could we flower them in January? Any information on this subject would be most welcome. Would like to hear from some one who has tried them. F. C.

You can not flower Spanish iris before the middle of March. They can not be subjected to hard forcing and should never have a higher night temperature than 48 degrees to 50 degrees. Spanish iris is excellent for spring flowering and the cooler it is grown the better it will be. It should be grown in flats containing four to five inches of soil, kept in a cool pit after planting and housed in batches as wanted. They are also satisfactory bulbs to plant outdoors in late fall and are perfectly hardy. They flower outside in your section from June 10 to 25 and are grand for cutting C. W.

OBITUARY.

John Sell.

John Sell, head gardener at the Garfield Park conservatory, Chicago, and an expert on plant life, died February 14 at his home, 3723 Colorado avenue. For forty years he had been gardener in the employ of the West Park commissioners. He was born in Chicago sixty years ago and began working for the West Park commissioners at the age of 20. He made the conservatory under his direction one of the most noted in the world. The funeral, which was held February 16, was attended by many of the city's park employees. The burial was in Forest Home cemetery. Mr. Sell is survived by his wife and four sons.

William Graff.

William Graff, of Columbus, O., died at Grant hospital in that city Friday afternoon, February 16, following an operation performed February 11.

Mr. Graff had been ill for some months. Less than a year ago he underwent an operation for appendicitis and for a time enjoyed good health, but during the winter his trouble returned. At the end of January he made a visit to West Baden, but grew worse instead of better and made a trip to Chicago to consult a specialist, who advised him to return home and have a second operation. This he did, but he never rallied, though for several days it was thought he had a fighting chance for life. The end came suddenly.

William Graff was 49 years of age, of Russian Jewish parentage, and had spent practically his whole life in the flower business. As a boy he sold flowers from a basket on State street, in Chicago, steadily extending the scope of his operations until he became one of the important buyers in that market. It was about nine years ago that he saw a good opening at Columbus and removed there. For several years the firm was Graff Bros., a younger brother, Sam, having a share in it, but about three years ago Sam removed to Seattle, where he went into business. The Columbus store still was run under the firm name, but William Graff was the owner. He had many friends and did a large business and was decidedly prosperous, for his word was good wherever he was known. He was married shortly after locating at Columbus and besides his widow he leaves two sons, Adolph and Morris Graff; his mother, Mrs. Anna Graff, and two sisters in Chicago; a brother, Samuel Graff, and a sister, Mrs. Matilda Landfeldt, both of Seattle, Wash. Mr. Graff was a member of the Masons and the Elks.

Burial was in Green Lawn cemetery, Columbus, following funeral services at the residence, 386 Luckhaupt avenue, Tuesday afternoon, February 20. There was a large attendance, a number of florists from Chicago being present. The flowers filled the room.

William A. Bilger.

William A. Bilger, of Lebanon, Ind., died February 13, at the Runnels sanitarium, Indianapolis, following an operation February 5. He was 50 years of age. The diagnosis of his case disclosed that he had been suffering from tuberculosis of the kidneys. Although he had been in poor health for an extended period, his critical illness was of only three weeks' duration.

He was born in Pennsylvania June 20, 1861, and was married October 1, 1896, to Agnes Martin. He removed to Lebanon seventeen years ago. He operated greenhouses in Lebanon for many years, after which he left the city, returning within the last year to assume the management of the Oak Hill greenhouses. He was a member of Ben Adhem Lodge, No. 472, I. O. O. F., Winnebago Tribe, No. 36, I. O. R. M., Winnebago Haymakers' Association, No. 36½, and Narramath Council, No. 10, D. of P., all of Lebanon. He is survived by Mrs. Bilger and by a half-brother, Louis Bilger.

Harry Terry.

Harry Terry, head gardener for R. H. White, Newton, Mass., died February 15 at the Newton hospital, where he had gone for an operation, his death occurring before an operation could be performed. He was in his forty-third year and leaves a widow and three children. Mr. Terry was formerly gardener for Miss Bradley, of Hingham. He was an excellent grower and much esteemed by all who knew him. He was an Englishman by birth. At the funeral services, from his late home February 18, many members of the craft attended, including a delegation from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, of which the deceased was a highly respected member.

Mrs. M. C. Ebel.

February 17 occurred the death of Mrs. M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J. She was the wife of the secretary of the National Association of Gardeners, who also is the president of the Aphine Mfg. Co., of Madison.

The Florist Bowlers of Omaha and Council Bluffs.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

Ernest Glauser, Toledo, O., has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $1,902.13 and assets of $825.

Schedules in the assignment of the John Young Co., with office at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York, and greenhouses at Bedford Hills, show liabilities of $31,246, nominal assets of $60,000 and actual assets of $4,000.

Jesse E. Clark, of Clintonville, O., has asked the common pleas court to terminate a partnership between him and William S. Nye, which was formed last November for the purpose of operating greenhouses and growing lettuce for the northern markets. A receiver also is sought. Mr. Clark charges that his partner has misappropriated a part of the funds of the partnership.

Edwin B. Koenig, assignee for the Smart Set Floral Co., 2297 Broadway, New York city, will sell the personal property at public auction at noon, Wednesday, February 28.

Alfred Whitney, Conneaut, O., has filed a petition in bankruptcy. The petition states that he owes $867, but the exact amounts of liabilities and assets are not reported.

Stewart C. Baker, Syracuse, N. Y., has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He shows in his schedules twenty-two creditors, whose claims aggregate $1,839, and assets of $156, which are exempt. Among the creditors is his former partner, R. S. Truair.

IXIAS.

Are ixias worth growing? When is the time to start them? Are they a tender or a hardy bulb? Would like to hear from some one who has tried them. F. C.

Ixias are a more tender bulb than Spanish iris and succeed best in 5-inch or 6-inch pots or pans in a cool greenhouse. They should be potted as soon as the bulbs arrive, usually about the last part of September. You will find cultural notes on these, also tritonias, babianas and sparaxis in The Review each fall. C. W.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Bellamy Bros. are planning to cover their vacant land with glass to take care of the new seedling white carnation which they are jealously guarding at present. It is said to be a gem and will make its debut next season.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

New Bedford, Mass.—E. H. Chamberlain has returned from a vacation of five weeks, spent in the south.

Ogden, Utah.—Misses Elizabeth Huth and Alberta West have opened The Flower Shop in a part of the Badcon pharmacy.

Denver, Colo.—N. A. Benson has taken out a building permit for a range of greenhouses, the cost of which is said to be $10,000.

Murphysboro, Ill.—Fire caused by an overheated furnace recently caused $350 damage to the greenhouses of J. E. Null during the absence of the owner.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mills recently celebrated their thirtieth wedding anniversary. Mr. Mills is an alderman as well as florist.

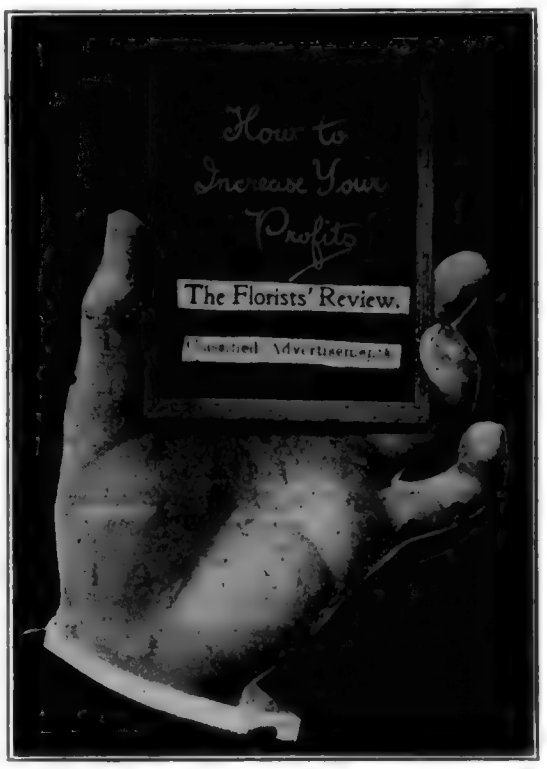
Pittsfield, Mass.—Last spring Rudolph Mauersberger leased the old Waring greenhouses and now has them in fine shape. He calls the place the Holmes Road Greenhouses.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Frank J. Knecht has just bought nine lots at Fairfield and Agnes avenues and was at Chicago to order material for six greenhouses. He was for a long time foreman for W. J. & M. S. Vesey.

Moline, Ill.—The firm of Peterson & Eckstam Bros. dissolved partnership last week and from this time on will be known as Eckstam Bros. They still have the same quarters at 540 Tenth street and will handle all lines that they have in former times.

Jacksonville, Fla.—The New York Florists, who have been located for some time at 204 Hogan street, have removed to 217 West Adams street, to a store which was especially built for their business. Mr. Davis is building his own greenhouses, where he will grow most of his flowers.

Cold Spring, N. Y.—J. S. Cunningham has an especially clean lot of Lilium Harrisii and states, as a reason, that the plants are grown at an even temperature and are not watered overhead. This method is being adopted by several growers, with success. He has some large planting contracts for the coming season and predicts a busy spring.



College Point, N. Y.—Golsner Bros. have sustained a serious loss in three houses of carnations and one house of callas, caused by escaping illuminating gas from a main some distance away. The leak was not discovered until practically the whole crop was ruined and the plants were so affected that only an extremely late crop will be secured. The question of the payment of damages is under consideration by the gas company.

Bristol, R. I.—The greenhouses of F. A. Geisler, on Mount Hope avenue, were completely destroyed by fire on Saturday night, February 10. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Auburn, Ind.—C. M. Ten Eyck & Son are planning to make extensive improvements at their greenhouses during the coming summer. Another house or two will be built and a new boiler will be installed.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—C. H. Maynard and wife, of Detroit, have bought a place of five acres just outside of town and will raise chickens. Mrs. Maynard is widely known as the secretary of the Ladies' S. A. F.

Clayton, Mo.—Anthon Bros. are said to have four of the best houses of carnations in this vicinity and they are contemplating an enlargement of their glass area. They ship all their output to the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., St. Louis.

New Haven, Conn.—Charles Munro has begun the holding of regular Saturday sales at his store, 974 Chapel street, and has announced the fact in the local newspapers, stating that at each sale he will "specialize in some particular flower at a reduced price."

East Peoria, Ill.—The published reports in regard to the recent damage by fire at the Williams greenhouses were inaccurate in their reference to H. E. Mitting as manager. Mr. Mitting is owner of the stock and proprietor of the business, not simply its manager. The houses are owned by H. W. Williams, but are leased by Mr. Mitting.

Hampton, Ia.—The Curtis Floral Co., of this city, has opened a branch store at Eagle Grove.

Blue Mound, Kan.—Mrs. Arthur Foster has a splendid lot of advance orders booked for outdoor work in the spring.

Xenia, O.—The greenhouses and home of Mrs. George Engel, on Dayton avenue, have been purchased by Edward Lampert and his father-in-law, Elmer Hamma.

Louisville, Ky.—William Walker, whose store at 326 West Jefferson street was destroyed by fire January 31, has secured new quarters at 615 Fourth avenue, where business is proceeding almost as though nothing had occurred.

Duluth, Minn.—Edward P. Kreimer and Oliver J. Eischen recently published a unique advertisement in a local daily. It was a five-column picture of the store, with text designed to repel the Greek invasion.

West Hartford, Conn.—Mr. Peterson, grower for Miss H. F. Whiting, is quite successful with Lilium Harrisii and believes it can be profitably grown. A house of Bride and Maid are still grown for patrons who prefer these roses. Killarney and Richmond are companions, all grafted stock.

Findlay, O.—Miss Lauretta Miller has discontinued the Findlay Floral Store, at 610 South Main street, and has associated herself with the City Greenhouse Co., on Larkins street. She has moved the equipment of her store and will continue in the flower business. The Findlay Floral Store was opened about a year ago.

Muncie, Ind.—H. J. Potomkin, who last July purchased greenhouses containing 10,000 square feet of glass, on the Studebaker pike, is growing vegetables for the wholesale market, with lettuce as a specialty. He expects to return later, however, to the growing of roses and carnations, the work in which the greater part of his life has been spent.

Toledo, O.—Miss Helen F. Patten, the Madison avenue florist, was recently victimized by the use of a worthless check. Probably the swindler would not have been successful, however, if his tactics had not been a little different from those commonly employed. He ordered flowers to the amount of $1.15 and requested that they be sent to a certain address C. O. D., with change for $10. When the flowers and change were sent by a boy, the latter was met in front of the house by the man, who took the box of flowers and $8.85 and gave the messenger a check for $10.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.
Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

To do business without a printed letterhead is to raise a question of one's own standing.

Carnations have been in full crop for some days and the rose crops are not far away. It is high time plans were being made for the spring campaign.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Having raised $450 by popular subscriptions of $2 each, the Fred Dorner Memorial Committee of the American Carnation Society now is accepting sums of $20 from enough subscribers to bring the fund to $1,000, the interest on which is to be used to offer a medal each year.

No one, no matter what branch of the industry he is engaged in, likes to turn down late orders merely because they are inconvenient, or must be executed without profit; but, on the other hand, one would not as a rule wish his stock and service to be judged by what can be done on orders received late. Still, we all put off till the last possible moment doing the things we know we shall wish to do in the end. Nothing is lost by giving the men we patronize a little time for their part of the work.

THEY HAVE BEEN SHOWN.

It is quite the usual thing for subscribers, in renewing, to write a word or two regarding the satisfaction their paper is giving, like this:

Herewith is the dollar to pay up for another year's subscription. The Review is a hustler and every florist needs it.—Alfred Englemann, Maryville, Mo., February 16, 1912.

After reading which it is right in line to find the following from an advertiser in the next letter opened:

Your paper has brought me good returns with orders.—James Wheeler, Natick, Mass., February 14, 1912.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Meeting of Directors.

I have been instructed by President Richard Vincent, Jr., to notify the directors of the S. A. F. to meet in Chicago March 13, at 10 a. m. The hotel where the meeting will be held will be announced later. The meeting is called for the purpose of making arrangements for the next convention, which is to be held in that city in August, and to transact any other business that may come properly before the meeting.

At this meeting of the board of directors, all arrangements, rules, rates, etc., will be made for the next convention, and immediately after this meeting I will send out full particulars, diagram, etc.

I publish this notice in reply to the many inquiries I am receiving regarding space. To the members outside of New York city I would say that if your secretary can be of any service to you in New York, do not hesitate to make any request. I will carry out any commission to the best of my ability.

John Young, Sec'y.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

For the week intervening between St. Valentine's day and the advent of Lent, business has been decidedly active, but the activity has not been sufficient to firm up the prices on the lines that have been weakening. Roses have come in a little more plentifully, but not in such quantity that prices have been affected. Beauties are in unusually small supply, and short roses such as can be used for funeral work also are extremely scarce, though they are not in as great demand as before carnations and bulbous stock were so cheap. The supply of the medium to long grades of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond is equal to the requirements, since there are many more buyers who limit their price to 8 cents than there are who are willing to pay from 10 cents to 15 cents per rose.

Some of the carnation growers are cutting heavily, while others have only inconsiderable crops. The result is that some houses find themselves with few carnations, while others have at least an abundance; consequently, there is considerable variation in the reports as to the situation in the carnation market. The general quality of the stock is first-class and there has been an improvement in the shipping quality since the weather has become mild enough to permit the growers to ventilate freely. Following the severely cold weather of the first six weeks of the year, the daily temperatures now are running considerably above normal, bringing along carnations rapidly and hastening production in all other lines, though the effect on roses has not yet been specially apparent. The special sales people are operating in carnations and violets.

Bulbous stock is coming in quite heavily, but has sold fairly well at

We Have a Big Crop of

CARNATIONS!

Fancy Stock—All Colors

We are on with a cut of Carnations that is of importance to every buyer in the Chicago market. It solves all difficulties as to supply and price. The crop is so large that we are able to quote a low price in spite of the fact that quality is right up to the best midwinter standard. All the leading varieties in each color. Now is the time to push Carnations. Glad to quote special prices on special quantities.

FANCY SWEET PEAS

Long-stemmed stock, all colors

These are fine Peas—no better ever were offered at this season of the year—the best winter-blooming varieties done to perfection. These Peas have made a hit the last two winters, and our growers increased the supply for this season. We ship fresh from the vines, putting the stock in your hands with all its first fragrance. Can supply in quantity.

Lily of the Valley

Valley is one of the items no Retailer can do without. We always have it, but why not place a standing order for a certain quantity to be shipped daily, or every other day? You never lose Valley—why not have it on hand?

Violets

We handle the Cream of the Crops, both double and single. Make money by pushing Violet Corsage Bouquets.

Cattleyas

Our orchids are home-grown, and you always get your orders filled if you place them with us.

Killarneys

The quality of our Killarneys is the talk of the town—and we have quantity, too, but most of them are select and special lengths.

Beauties

We never are without Beauties. Your orders always will be filled if you send them here. All lengths of stem and best quality.

OUR Rose Crop IS ON

WE can supply you. Prices down.

Our growers always lead in Rose production. We always have our crops ahead of others—and quality always is the best in the market. We now offer good cuts of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond at prices that will be welcome after what roses have commanded the last few weeks. All lengths of stem. Send along your orders. We will fill them to your more than satisfaction. Or write us about your needs.

WESTERN HEADQUARTERS FOR FANCY CATTLEYAS

Our Cattleyas should not be confounded with the ordinary stock found in the cut flower markets—it is much finer than what is ordinarily offered. Splendid, large flowers, highly colored—a quite superior quality. And we have quantity.

LILIES
Giganteum Rubrum Auratum

There is no flower now in market that makes as big a show for the money as these Giganteums do. We can supply in thousand lots as easily as by the dozen. Glad to quote special prices on quantities.

CARNATIONS

We handle more Carnations than any other house in the west and do a very large shipping business with them because the buyers know our stock will carry. If you are not quite satisfied with the stock you are getting, it will pay you to write us about it. Let us quote on quantities.

VIOLETS
Princess of Wales Marie Louise Californias

We are able to supply all the popular varieties in quantity and the season of large crops, fine quality and low prices is here. From now till Easter is the best time for pushing Violets. You push them; we supply you.

WHITE LILAC

The only supply in the west. Extra fine stock.

FANCY FREESIA

This is PURITY, the long-stemmed, pure white Freesia.

SWEET PEAS

We can furnish nice, long-stemmed Peas in all colors.

moderate prices. Easter lilies are more abundant. Callas have cut little figure this season. Mignonette is a less important item than formerly, and only small quantities of antirrhinums and stocks have thus far arrived.

The corsage flowers have come into prominence, for the leading stores everywhere are pushing corsage bouquets. Violets were left on hand after the St. Valentine's day demand had been satisfied and the market has been depressed continuously during the week that followed. Cattleyas continue in large supply, the accumulation being sold cheaply when a buyer comes along who will take large quantities. There now are quite a number of buyers who order hundred lots and several who use in much larger quantities when they can have a hand in fixing the prices. Valley continues abundant, but probably will advance within the next few days, since the growers do not plan on much of a crop during Lent. Gardenias are in light supply in Chicago, but are being received in quantity from the east, where prices are low. Sweet peas have become one of the most popular items. Pink is the color most wanted; whites sell slowest. There are as many grades as there are growers, much stock being seen with extremely short stems, with a constantly diminishing quantity as the stems are graded for length.

Green goods are quiet. Mexican ivy is possibly the best seller. Boxwood has fallen into an inconspicuous place. The ferns require a great deal of picking over.

Lent has arrived and is expected to cause a temporary halt; but Lent is not the factor it once was and the consensus of opinion is that after a few days its effect will not be apparent.

The Spring Show.

The final premium list is being mailed this week for the show that opens in the Art Institute, March 12. A new class has been added, for the best display of sweet peas, silver and bronze medals being offered for first and second prizes.

Richard Vincent, Jr., president of the S. A. F., with the approval of Charles H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, has authorized the offering of the S. A. F. silver and bronze medals at the Chicago show for plants or flowers of American origin.

The executive committee of the Horticultural Society has decided to invite the directors of the S. A. F., who will be in session at Chicago during the flower show, to act as a jury of awards in judging all competitive classes.

An appropriation of $250 has been made for retail florists' exhibits, inclubing table decorations, and its distribution, to be in non-competitive awards, has been placed in the hands of a committee consisting of George

Various Notes.

The Fleischman Floral Co., on Jackson boulevard, this week is celebrating its twelfth anniversary and advertising it after a fashion that has been the principal subject of discussion in the market. The sum spent for advertising is more than most stores expect to take in this week and the prices quoted leave the average buyer little room for profit. Altogether it is a proposition that produces as many views as there are florists.

To the immense tasks confronting this committee he can be relied on to bring honesty and ability and public spirit."

The landlord has canceled the Percy Jones lease on the entire second floor of the Fairbanks building, 56 East Randolph street, giving instead a lease to Henry Wittbold on the entire Randolph street frontage and to Percy Jones on the north two-fifths of the floor. The new leases are for three years. The rental remains the same as previously paid by Percy Jones, but is divided between the two tenants in proportion to the floor space occupied. pips February 15. He says Valentine trade was good.

Otto Wittbold says the Edgebrook greenhouses are so well filled that there is no room to spare, but, at the rate shipping orders are picking up, the stock will move rapidly from now on.

"Not one sale of Lorraine on my entire trip. Everyone wants Cincinnati." This was a remark by J. J. Karins, when in Chicago last week on his way back to Dreer's at Philadelphia, after a two months' trip on the Pacific coast.

Visitors: Frank J. Knecht, formerly foreman for W. J. & M. S. Vesey, who is going into the business for himself with a range of six houses; P. Buettner, Hammond, Ind.

Phoenix, Ariz.—Mrs. E. M. Tyler, formerly proprietor of the Tyler Greenhouses, at Sheridan, Wyo., is making preparations to engage in the florists' trade here.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

In the last week there has been considerable business. Society got busy in the few days before Lent and the many social and wedding decorations caused a great deal of work. These, with Valentine's day business, were enough to keep the trade on the jump all week long, in addition to which a number of large funeral designs were worked up during the week.

Stock was quite plentiful every day, violets and carnations being specially abundant, and prices went down to $2 per hundred for the best carnations and to 60 cents for the best violets. There are no roses going to waste just now, as these seem to clean up almost daily. Valley dragged somewhat last week and some sold as low as $2 per hundred. Fine lots of lilies are coming in at all the markets, also tulips, Dutch hyacinths, Von Sions and a great lot of fancy sweet peas. The weather has been mild and springlike and the wholesalers seem to think a great glut of cut stock is due this week.

Various Notes.

Carl Beyer, C. C. Sanders, F. C. Weber and C. W. Wors, who recently were reported sick, are again attending to business.

Julius Koenig, city forester, has returned from an eastern trip.

From reports there will be quite a lot of building done by the Kirkwood florists this summer, and some of them taking advantage of the cheap prices of glass, bought quite heavily last week.

If business permits, several florists will attend the American Bowling Congress at Chicago next month. St. Louis will be represented by thirty-five teams and to some of these the several florist bowlers belong.

TABLE OR WINDOW FLOWER BASKETS

A stunning effect is produced by filling these baskets, which have a pan lining, with cut flowers.

Their artistic shape permits their use as a beautiful decoration for window, store or table.

As an Easter remembrance, their worth is unsurpassed.

Made of rattan and finished with Blue Antique.

For an additional charge of 50c each they can be ordered in that exquisite White Enamel, edged with gold.

Instead of using a glass vase for cut flowers, use one of these No. 2914 Baskets; they are admirably suited for this purpose.

Style No. 2915 is an excellent basket for Easter plant arrangement.

Otto Sander had one of the most attractive Valentine window displays in the downtown district. He says the demand for violets was the largest he ever has experienced.

Grimm & Gorly, the Paris Floral Co., Alex Siegel and the Riessen Floral Co., each says that this year Valentine business was double that of last year and that violets had the call over any other flower.

R. J. Windler, on South Grand avenue, says he disposed of 10,000 violets on Valentine orders and that this day is becoming better for the florists each year.

George Windler, the Delore avenue florist, will be in shape with an extra fine lot of blooming plants for the Easter trade. Mr. Windler will lead a discussion on Easter plants at the March meeting of the Florists' Club.

Wm. Bouche, consulting landscape architect at University City and Park View Place, says that he has a great deal of work ahead, which will begin as soon as the weather opens. Nearly all the California privet will have to be replanted, as the severe winter killed them.

Frank Weber, E. W. Guy and W. C. Young, trustees of the Florists' Club, will meet this week and make arrangements for the club's rose and carnation exhibition, to be held in conjunction with the club's meeting Thursday afternoon, March 14.

The large refrigerator in the cut flower department of C. A. Kuehn's store, that the workmen have been installing for the last two weeks, is now complete and is one of the largest in the city.

A. S. Halstead, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, spent Saturday, February 17, in the city. Mr. Halstead has fully recovered from his recent illness and reports that he is grandfather to a little girl, born to his daughter, Mrs. Stoval, at Cincinnati, where Mrs. Halstead is visiting.

It was estimated that the four wholesalers combined disposed of 125,000 violets for Valentine's day. The best brought $7.50 per thousand, while others ranged from $4 to $6. It surely was a great violet day for the local florists.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

A change in temperature last week, with the addition of Valentine's day, greatly accelerated business and the florists report the best trade in several weeks. Business on Valentine's day was exceptionally good and, contrary to former years when nothing but reds were in demand, this year violets and sweet peas held the call. Prices have shaded off a trifle, the quotations this week being: Carnations, $1 to $3 per hundred; roses, $3 to $15; violets, 30 to 50 cents; daffodils, single and double, $1 to $2; tulips, $1.50 and $2; valley, $3 to $5, and sweet peas, 35 to 75 cents.

Various Notes.

Burke & Burns are cutting some especially fine Killarney, My Maryland, Richmond and Kaiserin, which they are sending to the Boston market.

Willis S. Pino was a recent visitor to New York on business.

At the annual meeting of the proprietors of Swan Point cemetery, Daniel S. Thurber was reëlected superintendent. In the annual report the following tribute was paid to Timothy McCarthy: "Very early in the year we suffered a great loss by the death, February 10, 1911, of Timothy McCarthy, who had served the cemetery for nearly thirty-five years as its superintendent. To him is due in very large measure the beauty and parklike character of the cemetery."

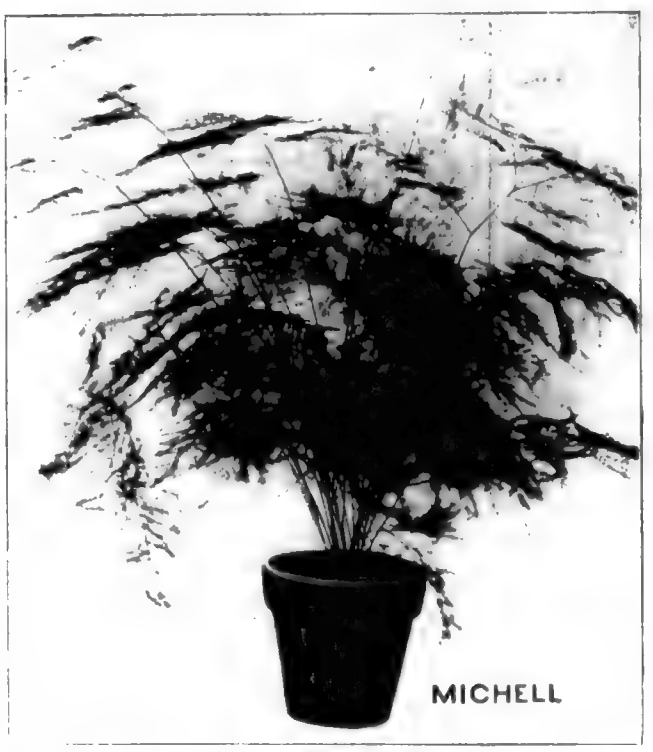
NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The carnival season brought thousands of visitors to our delightful city, and the elegant balls and receptions given by the different carnival organizations, clubs and private parties led the florists, especially the storekeepers, a busy life. All the flower stores were lavishly decorated with the choicest products of the season and from everywhere satisfactory business results have been reported.

During the present month all kinds of weather were experienced here—frost, rain and sunshine, sometimes all on one day, and on the afternoon of February 16 there was a hail storm, brief in its duration, but heavy enough to cause anxiety among the florists and truck farmers. At present we are enjoying real spring weather.



Bulbous stock is still plentiful and the first Italian and miniature Dutch hyacinths are making their appearance. Single violets, pansies, candytuft, etc., are the outdoor flowers to be cut here at present, though they are seldom in great demand.

There is great activity among the truck farmers and the local products are bringing top-notch prices. The bad weather up to now hurt our lettuce crops again and endive and escarolle are still showing the effects of the frost. Other goods are in fair supply.

BOSTON.

The Market.

At last we are getting a spell of milder weather, after one of the longest and steadiest cold snaps the east has known for years. The frost has penetrated to a depth of four and one-half to six feet, and many water mains at these depths are frozen in Boston and surrounding towns and cities. It is, at last, possible for the street venders to ply their vocation, and this has given an improved tone to the market. During the continued low temperature street sales were out of the question. This caused an unprecedented accumulation of surplus stock in the wholesale markets, carnations being the greatest glut. While prices are now a little better on carnations, they continue low for February and the arrival of Lent is hardly likely to improve them. Flowers which should have sold at $3 per hundred were hard to move at $1.50 and $1, and some had to go at half these figures. Some growers are so disgusted that they will reduce their plantings of the divine flower for next season.

Roses have continued to sell well. Growers are not yet getting a heavy cut, and prices are well maintained. Violets sold well for Valentine's day. With warmer weather they are more plentiful and prices are inclined to sag. Bulbous stock is in heavy supply and, next to carnations, has suffered most during the slump. Sweet peas are coming of good quality and are selling better. Valley is improving in quality, but most of it has inferior foliage. Miscellaneous flowers, such as primroses, forget-me-nots, calendulas, dimorphothecas, cornflowers, marguerites and wallflowers, are in quite good demand. Snapdragon of pleasing shades of color is in excellent request. Gardenias are good, but an uncertain sale. Cattleyas are still druggy and other orchids are abundant. Sales of green stock are satisfactory, and plant trade, with the milder weather, has taken a decided brace.

Club Meeting.

There was the record-breaking attendance of 300 at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club February 20. Eleven new members were elected. J. Otto Thilow, of Dreer's, who is president of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, delivered a splendid lecture on "The Flora of the Rockies," illustrated with the stereopticon. The club seldom listens to so interesting a travelogue.

The exhibits were especially numerous and good. They were as follows:

From J. Leach & Son, North Easton, Carnation Pink Supreme, awarded a report of merit.

From A. N. Pierson, Inc., Cromwell, Conn., Killarney Queen and Double White Killarney roses, awarded reports of superior merit.

From D. Finlayson, Brookline, Marguerite Mrs. F. Sander, awarded a report of merit.

From M. A. Patten, Tewksbury, Carnation Mrs. C. W. Barron, awarded a report of merit; Carnations Dagman and Genevieve, awarded votes of thanks.

From Wm. Sim, Cliftondale, a splendid lot of pansies.

From Arthur Griffin, Woburn, Carnations Pink Delight, Gloriosa and White Wonder of excellent quality.

From Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Rose Mme. Russell, awarded a report of superior merit.

From William Patterson, Wollaston, wallflowers of excellent quality.

From James Wheeler, Natick, Carnations Princess Charming, Beacon and a mixed vase, all well grown.

From A. A. Pembroke, Beverly, Carnation Beverly, a seedling, awarded a report of merit.

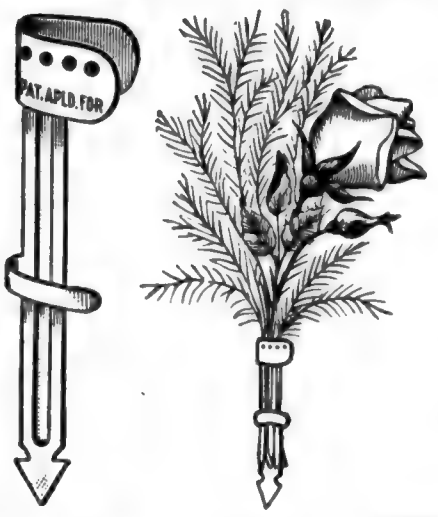
From Charles Sander, Brookline, a collection of new seedling azaleas, especially fine, awarded a cultural report of merit.

From W. T. Walke, splendid antirrhinums, awarded a report of merit.

From C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., Carnation Wodenethe, especially fine.

From Paul Richwagen, Needham, vases of antirrhinum.



Various Notes.

F. H. Houghton's store, on Park street, narrowly escaped destruction by fire February 10, the coldest day of the winter. Mr. Houghton discovered fire next door at 9 a. m., and, while the flames did not break through into his store, dense volumes of smoke made it impossible for anyone to stay there. With doors and windows open to let smoke out, many palms and other plants were destroyed, all, however, being covered by insurance. I was interested to note that while kentias were destroyed, cibotiums were not damaged in the least.

A. W. Belcher, of Winthrop, a bulb specialist, has an extra fine lot of Von Sions, Paper Whites and tulips in variety, at the Boston Coöperative Market.

Frank Macdonald, salesman for N. F. McCarthy & Co., was married February 10. The bride was Miss May Deveney, of Dorchester. He has the felicitations of a large circle of friends.

Carbone is showing some excellent auratums, also rhododendrons, ericas, acacias and lilacs in fine variety. He had a fine Valentine's day trade.

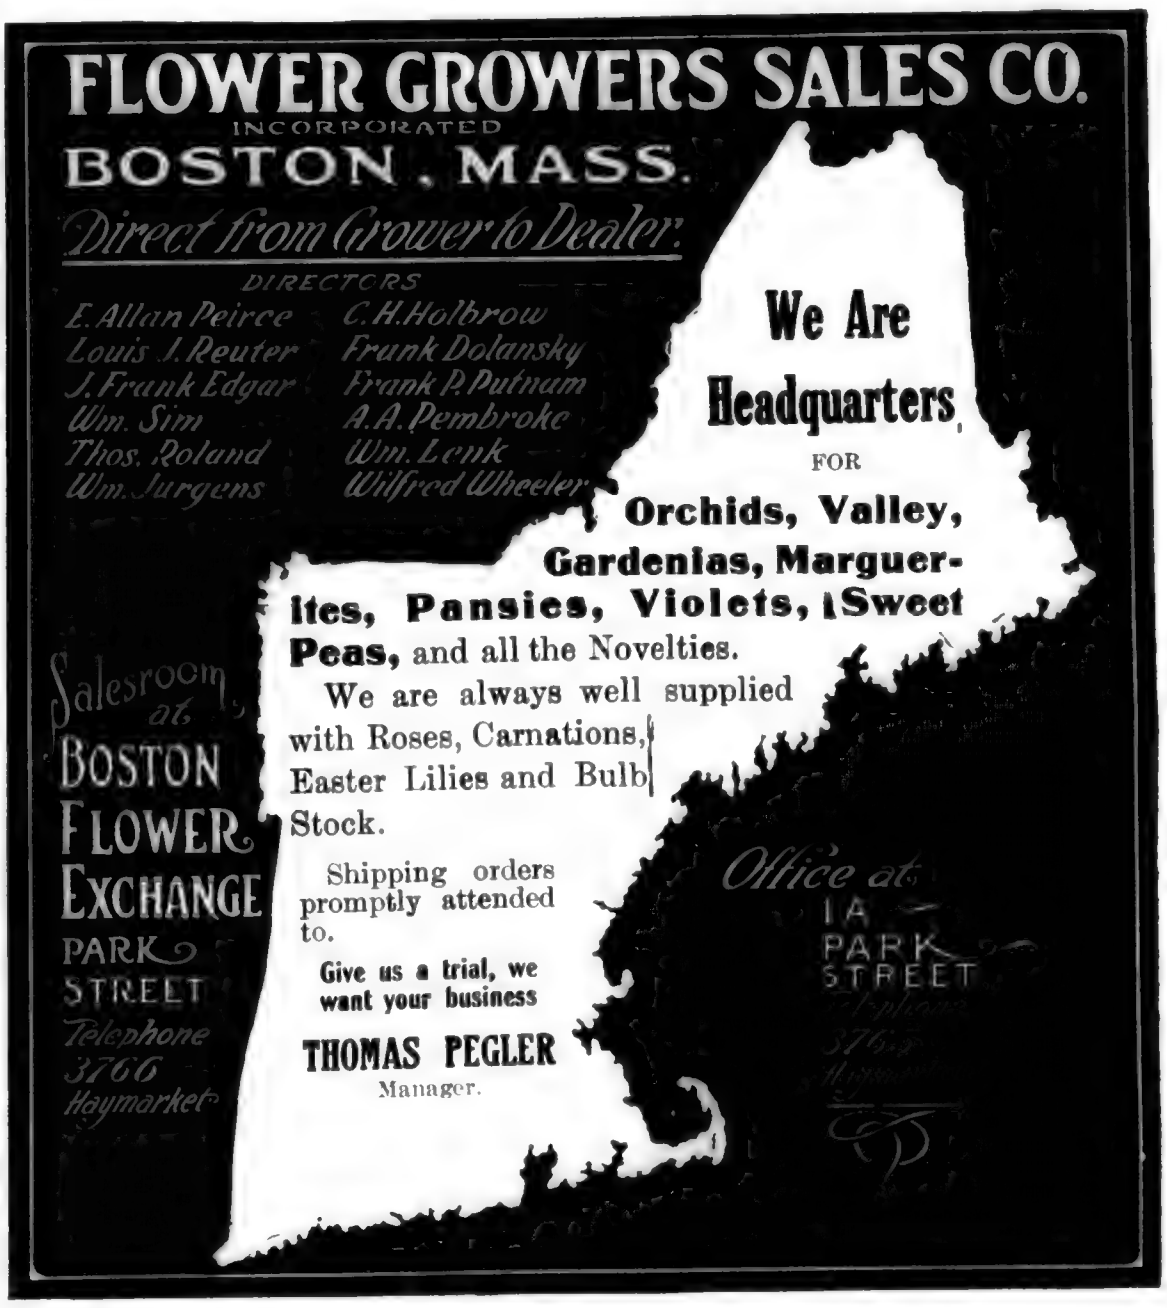
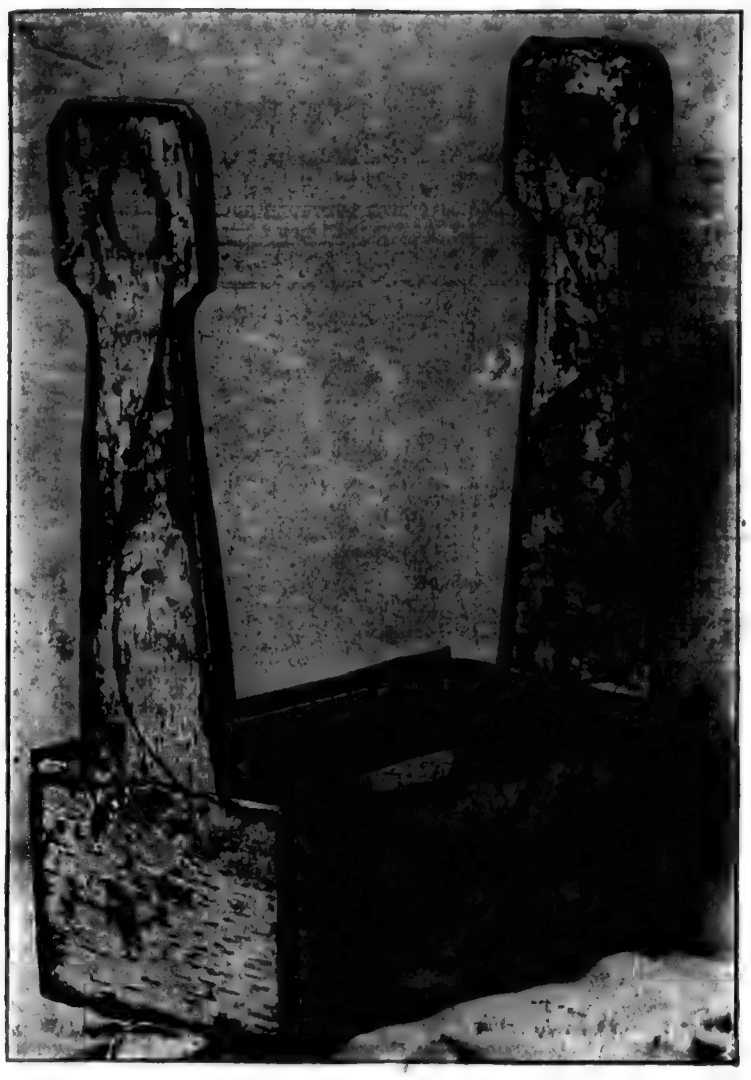
heavily in several leading Boston dailies for Valentine's day and state that they sold 100,000 violets and were cleaned out of the special boxes. Other flowers which sold particularly well were Carnot and Richmond roses, valley and gardenias.

J. J. Casey, of the Rosary, on Boylston street, reports good business for Valentine's day. I noted a fine window display of Freesia Purity and azaleas there last week.



Prices on bituminous coal have advanced sharply here of late. Carload quotations are now $4.50 per ton against $3.83 a month ago and $3.27 last November. There is something of a famine of hard coal and, while prices have not advanced materially, dealers are having great trouble in securing what coal they need.

Alexander Montgomery's sensational new rose, Mme. Charles Russell, is a wonderful bloomer, the massive flowers being produced on strong stems. This variety is said to produce ten flowers to one of Beauty and is of much better color. There should be little need of Beauty after Mme. Russell is introduced. At the Waban Conservatories, where Beauties used to be largely grown, only 250 feet of one house is devoted to them this year and they will not be grown again. Lady Hillingdon is also making a wonderful record as a producer.



E. J. O'Hearn, of Wellesley, is this season having splendid success with yellow marguerites, which are quickly sold at the Boston Coöperative Market.

Thomas Pegler reports business as steadily growing with the Flower Growers' Sales Co. Valentine's day business was extra good and a steady improvement has taken place since then.

Probably the finest Acacia pubescens coming into Boston is that from Joseph Fuller's Leominster greenhouses, all of which is handled by Welch Bros.

The West Street Greenhouses, of Reading, are shippers of high grade carnations to the Boston Coöperative Market. William Hannan & Sons, of Dorchester, are strong on lilies and tulips just now.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, is cutting a splendid crop of Killarney and White Killarney while prices are high. He also has some good Richmonds.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Business is the best it has been since the holidays and all the florists have been kept busy with weddings, funerals, receptions and transient trade, funerals being especially numerous during the week. The trade for Valentine's day was good all over the city, both in cut flowers and plants, and stock was plentiful. Milder weather also makes business much better.

Carnations continue to come into the market in great quantities, while the quality and quantity of all roses are improving. Mignonette is more plentiful, narcissi are abundant and cut lilacs are almost a glut. Sweet peas are fewer in number, while valley is greatly improved but in slight demand. Gardenias are not so good as they were and cattleyas are beginning to diminish in size and quantity.

Club Meeting.

At a meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association February 13, a committee of twelve, headed by Charles H. Vick, was appointed to consider the advisability of holding a flower show next fall and instructed to report at the next meeting.

Fred Vick and E. R. Fry were named as delegates to attend the meeting of the florists of New York state soon to be held at Ithaca, and W. T. Logan and C. B. Ogston were named as alternates. A. Edwin Crockett and George

The Rising Eastern Market.

Lent has come and society has ceased to dance the bunny hug, the turkey trot, the grizzly bear; even opposite ends is given up for the present. Generally speaking, the cut flower market has been active during the last week of the social season. The scarce flowers were Beauties and really good gardenias. Everything else has been abundant. It is difficult to give an accurate idea of the conditions affecting the supply and demand of each variety of flower. One day roses were in active demand, while carnations lagged. The next day these conditions were reversed, although the supply of carnations on the second day far exceeded that of the first. An expert judge asserts that carnations have averaged about $1 per hundred less this season, from Thanksgiving to Lent, than they did during the corresponding period of a year ago. This is difficult to explain in the face of the fine quality of much of the stock and no particular increase in the supply. Well colored cattleyas have advanced in price, and with them first grade gardenias. Acacia pubescens is not equal to the demand. Good sweet peas are selling well, but the short-stemmed flowers are not. Valley, Easter and calla lilies have been going pretty well. Golden Spur leads the bulbous flowers in popular favor, at firmer but not higher prices. There is some freesia in the market. Greens have been in active demand. The supply is not large.

St. Stephen's Day.

February 16 was observed by a small coterie of the faithful who believe the holidays should go in threes: Lincoln's and St. Valentine's had not been real holidays, unless that is the way to describe a day as full of work as the law requires, and a little fuller. So the afternoon of February 16 was at brief notice devoted to two of the calls that go so far to make our profession above all others because of the spirit of comradeship and equality so strongly in evidence on such occasions.

J. Stephenson's Son owns and operates two places on the Old York road at City Line. The old place is famous for Mrs. Jardine, grown to perfection in large numbers. The new place, a square away, consists today of one house. It is such a house as one dreams about; a perfect model of Lord & Burnham latest construction: 400 feet long, containing 15,000 roses. Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Geiger are justly proud of the house, the stock and the power plant. The Killarneys, single, white and double, are their varieties; while there are others, these will be discarded or moved to the old place and the vacancy filled with 3,000 Double Killarney. Both Mr. Stephenson and Mr. Geiger are ambitious; all their arrangements indicate the probability of another fine house in the near future.

Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton, is one of those growers whose stock always shows cultural skill of a high order. His rose plants are good in the old houses, as well as in the new houses; even a fire is but a slight check to him. Mr. Mortensen believes that grafted roses are better than roses on their own roots and that a well grown novelty or two is desirable, provided it be a novelty of merit. His standard varieties are Richmond, Killarney, White Killarney and Double Killarney; his novelty is Lady Hillingdon; his coming novelties are Sunburst and Double White Killarney and some specially selected pets for trial. Southampton justly regards Mr. Mortensen as a floral wizard of extraordinary power.

Pierson went out to Roslyn, Pa., and there closed a deal with Edward Towill, whereby the A. N. Pierson Co. will send out Mr. Towill's two new roses. One, described in this column a year ago, is a large red of great promise, a cross between Richmond and J. B. Clark. The other rose, a pink of large size and delicate color, is a cross, if Mr. Towill is correctly understood, between Joseph Hill and Killarney. This move makes it evident that Mr. Pierson means to secure all the best novelties.

Various Notes.

"Gone to His Last Fire," was the startling inscription on a design that greeted Arthur Zirkman on a recent call. "Why use such language?" Mr. Zirkman asked. "Well, you see it is for the funeral of a fireman," was the satisfactory explanation.

J. D. Eisele has returned from abroad.

L. P. King, of Mt. Airy, Md., was here recently.

Joseph Heacock has gone to Ithaca, N. Y., to attend the agricultural lectures at Cornell University.

Henry F. Michell returned from Summerville, S. C., February 19.

The consensus of opinion is that St. Valentine's day was a decided improvement over previous years.

M. Rice & Co. have commenced work on their new annex.

Maurice Fuld is home again, looking well and bright.

Robert A. Craig finds his ferns repay good care. The lively demand at his company's greenhouses has just taken enough ferns to keep the big stock from becoming overcrowded.

William Warner Harper is planning an active campaign for the Andorra Nurseries.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report many out-of-town visitors; one florist came from Cleveland on purpose to see art baskets, which done he returned instanter.

George Auegle exhibited some Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. sweet peas that, for size, color and stem, claimed the blue ribbon: a private exhibition that included superb Freesia Purity.

The genial Robert Shoch, of M. Rice & Co., is home again.

The market continues in an easy condition. Receipts in most lines are large and the volume of sales using up this stock is good. Naturally, in an easy market, prices have as a whole shaded slightly since the last report. Shipping business is good. Valentine's day business was large and satisfactory to all. The opening day of this week, due to a general replenishing by retailers, started with a rush that used up almost everything.

Roses are still conspicuous by their scarcity. A good crop of Bride and Maid has been helping, but they cannot make up for the deficiency in Killarneys. Beauties are in adequate supply and their quality is, as a whole, again all that can be desired. The carnation supply is large and although the sales are good the line is crowded. The most calls are for white and Enchantress. The receipts of bulbous stock continue to increase. The market, while fair, is not all the growers would like. Easter lilies and callas are again easier, but these are proving good property. Of sweet peas the supply has increased along with the rest and clean sales are not as regular as they were. In violets, valley and orchids, offerings since Valentine's day have been only moderate and sales fair.

Greens are easily sufficient for re-

M. M. Carroll is Miss Carroll, but it doesn't say so on the printed matter. Recently when M. M. Carroll had announced a visit to a city "he" was invited to attend a stag party and "he" was asked to arrange "his" time on the road so as to arrive at the appointed day.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is more plentiful. Roses are still a trifle high in price, but the quality is of the best. Valentine's day proved to be a winner for the local florists. The only bad feature of this flower day, from a florist's standpoint, is that the orders all come with a rush at the last minute and it taxes the delivery department to the limit to get all the orders out on time. Violets sold well. They were by far the leader, with valley, freesia, tulips, etc., as close seconds. There were not nearly enough roses to go around, while carnations were plentiful. The latter part of the last week saw stock of all kinds moving slowly. Bulbous stock is nearly a glut. Lilies are selling well and some excellent Formosas are to be seen. Callas are fine and sell on sight. Green goods of all kinds find a ready sale.

Vegetable Forcing.

WHO KNOWS OF THIS LETTUCE?

Will you please inform me where I can get seed of the Orchard lettuce, a sample of which I enclose? I bought seed last spring of what was supposed to be this variety of lettuce, and it turned out to be nothing more than the common broad-leaved endive. The Orchard lettuce is a head lettuce and unusually beautiful. I should also like to know how to grow it. W. G. B.

I am unable to tell you just what variety of lettuce the sample was which you sent. It was pretty well dried up when received. I would suggest that you get a catalogue from one of the large, reliable seed companies that advertise in The Review, and look for the particular kind you want. You will find the head lettuce and leaf lettuce in separate lists, with a good description of each variety. Any of these firms will sell you just what you want.

If you want the lettuce to grow inside, it will be best to get a forcing variety. Head lettuce should be sown in boxes or coldframes, not too thickly, and transplanted to the field or to beds inside as soon as large enough to handle. Set them eight inches apart.

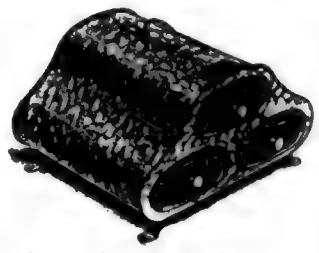
H. G.

A STUNTED LETTUCE CROP.

I should like to get a little light on a subject with which I am not familiar. I have several houses, facing east, with lettuce in them. Since the cold weather commenced, the lettuce has practically not grown any. The leaves start out and become about one-third developed; then they quit growing and the lower leaves begin to wilt. I have five houses, each 30x260, in this section. Two of the houses are 6 years old, with new soil in some of the beds and old soil in others. Two of the houses are 2 years old and one house was built last year; the first planting is still in it. In parts of the houses there are some eelworms and in other places there are fishworms. I have no green fly. I maintain a temperature of 50 degrees at night and from 60 to 65 degrees in the daytime, with a moderate amount of moisture. Some of the plants are ten weeks old, with about twenty leaves; these plants are about half grown, and are stubby, tough and stunted.

I also have five houses, each 30x200, facing south, and these contain a first-class crop of lettuce. If I take plants out of the first-mentioned place and plant them in the section facing south, they develop quickly. We treat both places just alike. Please give me all the information you can on this subject.

F. L. L.



The east and west houses are unquestionably lighter than those in which the ridge runs north and south, but that difference does not explain your trouble at all. If the temperature and treatment are the same in both ranges, then the trouble is below ground, not above. I have a suspicion that you water the sick section too much and that the soil is sour and soggy. Examine the soil in both ranges and see whether it is not nice and mealy in the section doing well, and entirely different, wet, sticky and soggy, in the other section. It is not the eelworms that are to blame, or the plants would not do well after being moved to the other house. Eelworms, however, are hard on lettuce at times.

Perhaps the soil is not of much account any more in the backward section. A good dusting of air-slaked lime over the top of the soil, between the plants, will do no harm and may do much good. When the soil gets dry enough, scratch the lime in with a little cultivator claw. Take some nitrate of soda, which alone is a great fertilizer for lettuce; dissolve some in a barrel of water, at the rate of one teaspoonful (not quite as high as you can heap it) to each gallon of water. This is pretty strong, but it will make the place disagreeable for the worms and will enrich the soil to the limit for nitrogen, which is the most needed for lettuce. Try this solution on a place where the worms are thick; pour it between the rows and soak the ground pretty well in that spot. In a few days dig in and see whether you can find any worms. For plants which are larger use only half as strong a dose, as some of the solution will wet the foliage and may burn the edges if too strong. Experiment on a small part of a house.

OTTAWA, ILL.

R. Roy Davis, of Morrison, Ill., has purchased a tract of ground of Fred Scherer, north of Lafayette street and west of Poplar, and announces he will erect a large range of vegetable houses. The contract for the houses has already been let and work will begin as soon as the material arrives. Mr. Davis has rented a cottage of Mr. Scherer and will in the future make his home in Ottawa. He expects to move his family here about March 1.

The new houses will be 800 feet long and eventually the range will be 600 feet wide and will cover ten acres of ground. Mr. Davis expects to specialize on cucumbers. These will be supplied to the Chicago and other markets. He already has a similar plant located at Morrison, Ill. The principal reason for his coming to Ottawa was because of the price of coal. Successful Florists use Sefton Boxes. To have success in shipping flowers, YOU should use them.

We offer a complete and superior line of cut flower, folding boxes in numerous grades and sizes, as well as Corrugated Fibre Board Boxes for Live Plants and Floral Designs.

Sefton Florists' Boxes combine high quality with low price. We manufacture them in large quantities and thus are able and pleased to give you the benefit in reasonably low prices.

A box of high quality attracts the eye and makes it a pleasure to open a neat, tasty package. Sefton Florists' Boxes are trade builders, inasmuch as they are high class and make a good impression. Purchasers of our boxes were once users of the inferior grades.

obtained $1 a ton cheaper than it can be obtained in Morrison. As coal is the principal item of expense in operating such a plant, it is probable that the plant at Morrison will be abandoned and that Mr. Davis will devote all his time to the operation of the plant in Ottawa.

The papers have been signed for the transfer of the property and contracts have been let for four carloads of glass to be used in the construction of the plant.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has been brisk here right along. Stock has not been overplentiful and on several occasions there was a scarcity in all lines. Roses are fine, considering the dark weather, and there has been a genuine contest between Bride and White Killarney, and between Maid and Killarney, with everything in favor of the Killarneys. The Brides and Maids were weak-stemmed and shy of bloom, while the Killarneys had good, strong stems and many more blooms. Carnations are also good, considering everything. The stock has been a little soft, but several of the traveling men said the flowers compared favorably with the best they had seen in their travels. The supply, however, has not been what it should be and all growers are away behind last year's cut.

There has been a good demand for sweet peas and the supply at times is much short of the demand. Valley has been a good seller of late, with a fair supply. Tulips, narcissi, daffodils and cut hyacinths are coming in quite heavily and the demand is also good. Violets have been scarce at times, as the single ones have been almost a failure here for the last few weeks. The demand for potted plants has been heavy, with a good supply on hand.

Trade for Valentine's day was the heaviest on record. Everything was cleaned up in fine shape.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is doing a nice business in its cramped and torn-up quarters. Inside of another week a decided change will be seen, as the room will be much better than it was before the fire and they will have more room in the store, with an enlarged, double-decked window.

H. & D. FLORISTS' BOX

Universally used for shipping cut flowers and designs. The dead-air cells form a perfect non-conductor of heat and cold, thus preserving contents much longer than ordinary wood box.

H. & D. Florists' Box can be used several times. Is much lighter than the ordinary box, thus saving in express charges.

Sherman Stephens reports heavy business in funeral work.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports a good business on the cut flower side and heavy business in the seed line, especially in the shipping and mail department.

E. Metzmaier reports active business in plants and cut stock.

J. R. Hellenthal says he has no complaint to make on business.

Underwood Bros. say they are kept on the run out their way.

The death of Wm. Graff is reported in the obituary column this week. The Florists' Club sent a nice wreath and nearly all of the florists sent flowers individually and attended the funeral.

G. H. Woodrow, secretary and treasurer of the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., has sent word to the Flower and Garden Club that in addition to the donation he has previously made to that club for the purpose of assisting in making a "city beautiful" for the centennial, he would also give 1,000 tomato plants. The Fifth Avenue concern's first donation to the club was 5,000 salvia plants. This was made during the centennial flower contest, and they were offered regardless of the result of that contest, which resulted in salvia being chosen.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The annual dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society was held, as usual, at the Park Hill inn on St. Valentine's day, or evening, the attendance being larger than ever and the enthusiasm unbounded. The Misses Curtiss and Warren, of New York, and Messrs. McDonald, Mott and Bryant were the sweet singers of the occasion and each added largely to the success of the evening.

Howard Nichols is the president of this fast growing society. The dinner decorations were by Wm. McDonald and were elaborate. His dinner committee were Messrs. Milliot, Drexler, Cochran and Nedig and results were perfect in every detail. Harry Bunyard was toastmaster. The mayor, Hon. J. T. Lennon, responded for the toast "Our City." Arthur Herrington, W. Duckham and Wm. Turner spoke for the gardeners. Other speakers were: Mooney, for horticulture; Neubrand, for Tarrytown; Manda, for the New York Florists' Club; Sperry, for the press, and Shaw, for the ladies. Louis Milliot spoke eloquently for the retailers. There were many visitors from New York and from neighboring horticultural societies.

De Land, Fla.—William B. Currey, who built a greenhouse here last summer and started business in the fall, has just completed another large house, for the growing of ferns and asparagus. He has already established a good trade in foliage and flowering plants and is now engaging, also, in the handling of cut flowers, with good prospects of success.

Rome, N. Y.—E. J. Byam has a house of White Perfection carnations which were carried over by his grower, J. Watkins, and which for quality and quantity equal the best house of newly planted stock of the same variety. The entire plant is in excellent shape.

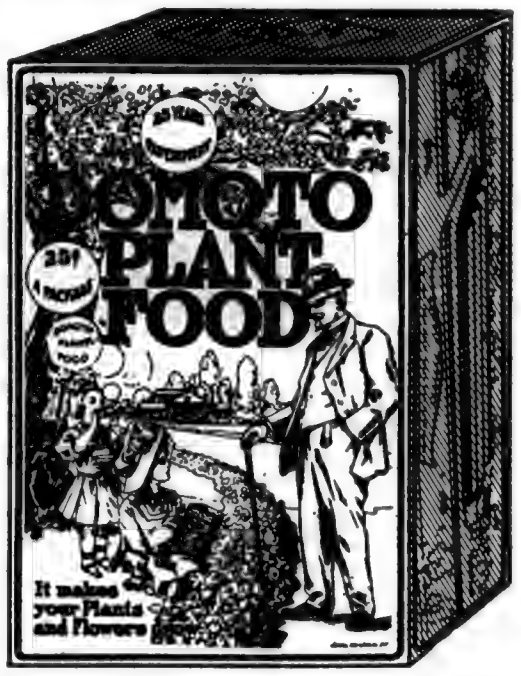
CALIFORNIA YELLOW BELL.

In the Pacific Coast Department of The Review of January 18 I noticed the following inquiry from J. W. I.: "Please give me the scientific name of the plant known as the California yellow bell." Its botanical name is Emmenanthe penduliflora and it belongs to the family of hydrophyllaceæ.

Albert Aldinger.

In a recent issue of The Review I noticed an inquiry as to the scientific name of the so-called California yellow bell. As a resident of California, I must confess that I never heard of such a name and I think it must be a local name, which could be applied to many of our wild flowers. "The Flora of Middle California," by Professor Jepson, does not mention it, nor can it be found in "Wild Flowers of California," by Mary Elizabeth Parsons. I think J. W. I. has reference to Calochortus Benthami, found anywhere from Mariposa to Butte county. Still, he may refer to Calochortus amabilis, also known as the golden lily bell or globe tulip. The latter is of a more erect habit and is eight to twelve inches high, with the radical leaf ten lines long and four to six lines wide. The flower is a clear yellow. It would be advisable for J. W. I. to send a fair specimen of the plant in bloom, buds, roots, leaves and all, to the botanist of Stanford University, Palo Alto, Cal., or to the University of California, Berkeley, Cal., where it can be identified.

H. K.



[Bailey's "Cyclopedia of American Horticulture" and other dictionaries confirm the statement made in the first of the two foregoing replies, that the botanical name of the plant commonly known as the California yellow bell is Emmenanthe penduliflora, and it seems reasonably certain that this is the flower referred to in the inquiry. It is just possible, however, that the name California yellow bell might refer locally to other flowers, as H. K. suggests. Bailey describes the emmenanthes as follows: "They grow nine to twelve inches high, forming bushy plants, each branch loaded with broadly bell-shaped, pendulous, unwithering flowers, about half an inch long, of creamy yellow. The general effect of a branch suggests the lily of the valley, but the foliage is pinnatifid."—Ed.]

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Never in the history of the local trade has there been such a profusion of flowers as we have at this time. Violets, daffodils, narcissi and fruit blossoms by the millions are being brought to town daily and the end is nowhere in sight. With no cold weather for the last six weeks, but warm sunshine instead, everything is a bit early and flower buyers have never had such opportunities as they now enjoy, thanks to the California climate. That this is a profitable condition for the retailers and wholesalers is an impossibility, and only the street hucksters are benefited, on account of the fact that they can spread their baskets on the open sidewalks all day long without any interference from the elements.

There has been a fair amount of funeral work for almost all the dealers, but in all other lines business has been slack. Lent is almost here and this will further tend to make everything quiet, so that the prospect at present is not assuring to the retailer. Shipping trade, which was heavy in January, has dropped somewhat, for the same reasons as the general trade in town. The prospects for Easter, however, seem to be good, from what reports are in the air. Easter lilies will be in good quantity, from all appearances, and the growers are not apparently making any effort to raise the prices to a great extent.

Various Notes.

D. M. Ferry, Jr., and wife, with a party of friends from Detroit, Mich., are in town in the course of their tour of Pacific coast points of interest.

E. Wagner, of San Lorenzo, is cutting thousands of early daffodils. He has a larger acreage of the later varieties, however, and will be in shape to cut from now until the middle of May.

The San Francisco Call and the Oakland Tribune and Enquirer each issued a special seed and plant edition February 11, which were well patronized by the local florists, seedsmen and nurserymen.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society had an outdoor meeting on the Crocker grounds, near San Mateo, February 11. About 100 people enjoyed the many floral treats at this celebrated place.

John Melmann, of Portland, Ore., is in town on a short visit. G.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Valentine's day helped considerably in the sale of all kinds of cut flowers and pot plants. Since then the sale has not fallen off much, and, though there is a surplus of some kinds of flowers, a better demand is now looked for. Carnations are still rather too plentiful for good prices. All colors, except red, which have been scarce, are in heavy supply. Home-grown violets are selling well, the mild season helping the crop, and they are competing well with the California stock, which is shipped in here in large quantities. Narcissi, tulips and hyacinths are here in plentiful supply and are cheaper than usual at this time of year. Roses are now fairly plentiful, but there is no great sale for them. Orchids are to be seen in most of the stores now; a few years ago an orchid was seldom seen in a store in this town. Azaleas are now the favorite pot plant and fine specimens are bringing what mediocre plants were sold for last year.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its usual monthly meeting in the Chamber of Commerce building, February 13. There was not so large an attendance as usual. Some of the members had some funeral work in hand and possibly the inclement night may have accounted for the absence of a few, though it was noticeable that the members present were ones who had much farther to come than would those who were absent. It is almost essential to the success of an organization such as this that the members attend the meetings as regularly as possible.

Five new members were admitted.

The particular business before the meeting was the appointment of committees and discussion on the forthcoming rose show. It was decided to invite the Tacoma Florists' Club to visit at next regular meeting, on the second Tuesday in March. As there are several matters that require attention, a special meeting is to be called for February 27, when it is hoped all members will be present.

Various Notes.

A bunch of Tacoma florists was over February 10 to practice on the Seattle alleys. A scratch team of the Seattle Florists' Club played them a couple of games and sent them home cheerful, but "flat busted."

A. B. Mathieson wishes to announce that the firm of Mathieson & Johnson no longer exists, the business now being entirely in the hands of Mr. Mathieson.

The weather in this vicinity is remarkably mild. There has been hardly a touch of frost since the first week of the year. Greenhouse men have reason to be thankful in these hard times for the smallness of their coal bills.

After the club meeting, a friendly game was bowled at the Bismarck alleys, the novices, as usual, beating the champions. T. W.

...NEWS NOTES...

Covina, Cal.—C. M. Weaver is looking for an opening to start a nursery and florists' business and may conclude to locate at Grass Valley, Cal.

Tacoma, Wash.—E. R. Roberts, well known in the trade, has been employed by two local newspapers to give the public free personal advice on gardening.

Puyallup, Wash.—M. B. Graham, of Burton, Wash., has purchased some property here and is building several greenhouses, in which he will grow both vegetables and flowers.

Eugene, Ore.—H. Newton's greenhouses on South Willamette street have been sold to a Mr. Lawrence, who recently came from California. Mr. Newton has purchased a 20-acre farm of river bottom land near Thurston.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The La Habra Nursery Co. has been incorporated, with $5,000 authorized capital stock, of which $750 has been subscribed. The directors are M. Taniguchi, M. Maruyama and K. Inouye.

Seattle, Wash.—The Seattle Cut Flower Exchange is removing to 1608 Second avenue, where it is intended to continue the wholesale business in cut flowers, pot plants, etc., as previously carried on at 906 Post street. L. P. Walz is the manager.

Everson, Wash.—McMillen & Barnum, who conduct a market garden business, have a farm of eighty acres here and also have property covering seven and one-half acres inside the city limits of Bellingham. At the city place they are gradually branching into the flower trade and they are also making a beginning in the development of a nursery department.

Livermore, Cal.—David Nicol recently started in the florists' business here and believes there is good prospect for success. E. B. Guerry, who has been gardener on private places here, wishes to start in business for himself, but thinks the opening for another florist in San Francisco may be better than for two florists here, and has gone to San Francisco to see how things are.

Los Angeles, Cal.—C. F. Gutting, proprietor of the Superior Nursery, grows plants and trees only, and is doing a large business, averaging $1,000 per month. He has 10,400 feet of glass, four large lath houses and eighteen acres in cultivation at Wilmington, Cal. Cyclamens are among his specialties and he supplied practically all the local stock of these for Christmas. His shipping trade covers the southwest.

Cottage Grove, Ore.—H. K. Metcalf and L. P. Sanford have opened a flower store here and will also handle seeds and bulbs, besides a few side lines, such as tea, coffee, candy, etc. One of the latest additions to their stock is goldfish, which they find to be attractive and profitable. They have named their establishment the Metsan Shop, forming the word Metsan by combining parts of their own names. Their place is noted for its unique and tasteful appearance.

What stock have you for sale to the trade? Is it moving as it should? No?

Then tell the trade about it by using the Pacific Coast Pages of The Review.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean for Thanksgiving and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash., November 30, 1911.

The Market.

Valentine's day and a large amount of funeral work made February 13 and 14 two of the busiest days ever known in the history of the flower trade here. One wholesaler said the former day was busier than the day before Christmas. Stock of all kinds has been coming in large quantities, but the fine demand keeps it cleaned up well. Indoor roses are among the scarcer items and carnations had to be substituted for short roses. There are some fine flowers still coming from the north and a large number of fine Easter lilies are also shipped in bud, to open up in the stores. Violets are still overplentiful and signs on the street stands read, "5 cents per bunch." Freesias are abundant and of good quality; so, also, are Dutch hyacinths from the open air, and daffodils, the latter being now at the height of their season.

As a filler for good funeral pieces the new marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, is becoming more and more popular and there appears to be a great future for this as a cut flower in this section. Among greens, good adiantum still seems difficult to get, but the other kinds are plentiful. All other items are about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

Harry Bailey, of Montebello, has been cutting a fine grade of freesias from under a cloth shading. The flowers are a purer white and have much longer stems than from plants grown entirely in the open.

Although nearly four miles from the end of the nearest car line, none of the visitors to Los Angeles leave without taking a run out to the Dieterich & Turner plant, at Montebello, and the genial Henry Turner is always there with the glad hand for all. His rose, Montebello, is magnificent—a large, clear pink, with grand stem and neck, the base of the petals showing a yellow shading that is quite telling. Stock of this variety is still somewhat scarce, but large blocks of all other varieties are coming along in fine shape to meet the spring demand. Advance orders are heavy already, 10,000 of one novelty being the order of a single local nurseryman.

Sidney Hockridge, of the City Nurseries, Redlands, has been taking a swing around the country to note the damage done by the recent frost—very little around "lovely Los Angeles." Mr. Hockridge will be remembered as the disseminator of the Pink Cherokee rose.

Staiger & Mundwiler are filling every spare corner of their houses with tomato and other vegetable plants for retailing. The young stock of palms, ferns and other plants looks well.

Mexican ivy is a big specialty with Tassano Bros. at both their places and the stock now arriving is excellent.

Valentine's day and the Van Nuys funeral made every retailer in town busy February 14. It is useless to mention the names of all.

Creutz & Co. are well satisfied with their new location and are now in position to handle the large cuts of spring flowers that are consigned to them. "Business is fine," says G. M. Creutz.

H. N. Gage says his only trouble is that he is not getting sleep enough and he has purchased a new alarm clock. He still looks well, though, in spite of it all. Immense quantities of stock are now handled by this popular wholesaler and out-of-town shipping business is excellent.

J. L. Young, of San Gabriel, is sending in magnificent Freesia Purity. Mr. Young is going to build another 100-foot house this year.

The window at Thee Florists was unusually pretty for Valentine's day, orchids, valley and daffodils being tastefully shown. In addition to a big funeral demand, Frank Lichtenberg says baskets are selling remarkably well.

Record breaking business for this season is reported by C. Morton, of the Los Angeles Flower Market. Daffodils and other spring flowers are most in evidence just now and these are most successfully shipped in all directions.

The sympathy of all his friends in the trade will be with Albert Knopf, of the Redondo Floral Co., in the death of his brother, Fred. Although he had been ailing some time, the end came rather suddenly February 13. Albert, we are glad to report, was feeling much better.

At a hastily summoned meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, February 10, a resolution endorsing Wm. Woods as the successor to the late A. R. Meserve as horticultural commissioner was adopted. If merits count, Mr. Woods' knowledge of local conditions and his experience gained as state quarantine officer, as well as his oft shown reluctance to put the trade to inconvenience in the performance of his duties, should insure his obtaining the post.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia; D. MacRorie and J. McClellan, of San Francisco; T. Smith, of Cleveland, O. H. R. Richards.

PORTLAND, ORE.

St. Valentine's was a surprise to everyone. While there was plenty of stock on hand, the way it was cleaned up was unexpected. Violets, red roses, carnations and tulips were the best sellers. Azalea and tulip pans also moved well. Chinese New Year also creates a demand for flowers, but only for Romans and azaleas; it seems impossible to sell the Chinese anything else. A batch of azaleas is specially grown for the occasion. Spring flowers are more abundant, which readily accounts for the surplus of carnations and general stock.

R. C. Cook has been in the hospital for several weeks, but is reported to be improving slowly. E. R. C.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The weather during the last few weeks has been favorable—indeed, too favorable—for the growing of greenhouse stock. The prevailing sunshine has brought on a big crop of carnations and we now find the growers facing the first real glut of the season. Other stock is none too plentiful. Violets and roses are still scarce and are moving well at good prices. Bulbous stock is coming in slowly and it looks now as if much of it would bloom outside. Lilies for Easter seem to be moving slowly and all report an unusual amount of disease this year.

Various Notes.

The committee on entertainment made big preparations for the ladies' visit on Thursday evening, February 15. Beginning at 8 p. m., a program lasting about two hours was rendered. Some good music was furnished by a quartet consisting of Fred Smith, Ed. Goldsack, Louis Tschunko and H. W. Manike. Readings by A. G. Seamons, Henry Benthein and others were given, after which refreshments were served and the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing.

A party of the local florists got together on Saturday, February 10, and made a visit to Seattle, expecting to surprise our friends there in their practice game, but some traitor had tipped us off and we were met at the train by Messrs. Holze and Stuber. On arriving at the alleys, we found that the surprise was on us, for the bowling team was there, ready for us, and before we recovered they had taken two games from us.

The Tacoma Rose Society went before the park board this week, asking that a landscape gardener be appointed to confer with citizens of the city in regard to laying out and planting lawns, parking strips, etc.

The next regular club meeting will be held March 7. J. L. S.

Pasadena, Cal.—Miss Sadie A. Thomas has been florist for the Raymond hotel here for the last four years.

Roseburg, Ore.—The Fern Island Fruit Farm and Greenhouses is the firm name under which F. D. Owen and wife conduct their business partnership. Mr. Owen is the orchardist and Mrs. Owen the florist. She has a new greenhouse 30x75, stocked with miscellaneous material for a local retail trade, which is handled from a stand in a downtown candy store. The demand is so good that an addition to the glass is looked forward to.

The Market.

May could hardly offer a lovelier day than began the present week. Everybody now is predicting an early spring and the seedsmen especially are ready for it. But we are not out of the woods yet; several blizzards are on the weather prophet's program. It is only a week ago that we were shivering in zero temperature. The transition is too sudden to last.

The cut flower market is flooded with roses, the last three sunny days bringing in the blooms, and shipments are growing daily. Prices have fallen. Lent is here to add to the depression and the holiday Thursday will complete the problems of the present week. The only shortage of the last week was in American Beauties. Prices for these were strong in a bear market. Nothing else, not even orchids, felt an uplift. Violets suffered a big slump and the street merchants and the department stores had a jubilee. The surplus was enormous and the store demand light. A few specials in bunches of 100 brought 40 cents. There is no complaint as to quality. St. Valentine's day did the best it could to start last week encouragingly.

Carnation shipments are enormous. Except for a few of the best novelties, 2 cents is the top and from that prices range down to even $5 per thousand. Of bulbous stock there is no limit. Every retail window is an epitome of spring, with pansies, daisies, hyacinths, daffodils and tulips in profusion. There is no change in the values of valley, gardenias, lilies or sweet peas. Little improvement is now anticipated before Easter.

Various Notes.

Applications for tables for the Florists' Club's twenty-fifth annual banquet are received daily by Secretary Schenck. Many visitors from a distance will be present. The president of the S. A. F. was one of the first to secure a table. An attendance of 400 is anticipated.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

THE Summers Seed House, of Malvern, Ia., has made arrangements to open a branch establishment at Tabor, Ia.

THE Dutch bulb growers have not had so cold a winter as they would like. The winter covering is about all off the fields and growth has started.

FIRE at the store of T. J. Grey Co., Boston, February 19, was extinguished before serious damage was done; loss covered by insurance.

THE O. O. Younkerman Seed Co., Council Bluffs, Ia., suffered a small loss Febuary 7, by fire starting from an overheated furnace next door. Insured.

HENRY W. WOOD, of T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, owns Kenbrook Farm, at Milford, Va. Edwin Bishop is manager. A number of crops are grown for seeds.

VISITED CHICAGO: C. W. Scott, of Yokohama Nursery Co., New York; F. H. Henry and Robert Fulton, of Henry & Lee, New York, the latter on his way home from Japan.

NOT having space in his "colyum" for all his ideas how this world ought to be run but isn't, Ralph M. Ward editorializes to the extent of a dozen pages in his latest bulb catalogue.

MONDAY, February 19, was the big day to date with most of the mail order houses. The few days of springlike weather following the severely cold spell have set the seed buyers studying the catalogues.

WITH Congress tinkering the schedules one by one, the "better be safe than sorry" class of importers has added the words "and tariff revision" to the terms to which the sale of future crops is subject.

THE seed dealers and growers of the State of Idaho had a conference with Governor Hawley, at Boise, February 9, looking to ameliorating the hardships caused by the unworkable pure seed law passed a year ago.

A. W. GILMAN, the seedsman of Rochester, N. Y., will remove April 1 to 482 Main street, east, where he will be nearer the market and will have a larger and better store. This is his twenty-fifth year in the business and prospects are bright.

A SURPLUS list to hand during the last week offers 4,860 pounds of cucumber, 8,625 pounds of watermelon, 5,795 pounds of muskmelon and 2,795 pounds of tomato, among other things. And yet some writers appear to be under the impression that there are no seeds for sale.

WHEN supplies are known to be short of the demand buyers place orders for more than they want, in the hope that the partial deliveries will equal their needs. This is now going on in the seed business. Something interesting would be sure to happen in the end except for the fact that one year of bumper crops could do few people serious harm and would correct the tendency to overcontract.

THE California seed growers have the orders—what they want now is rain, plenty of it, but not too much.

BERTRAND W. DEAL, son of the late Wm. Deal, the English seed grower, will carry on the business in his own name.

WRITING at Ventura, Cal., February 15, M. J. Callahan said: "No rain of any account thus far this season and the outlook poor—evidently one of those years that sometimes occur here. Those having their own water supply are all right; the others have to take water from the water companies in their turn, and the water companies are poorly equipped for such a season."

PEAS IN IDAHO.

A newspaper correspondent at Idaho Falls, Idaho, reports as follows:

"O. W. Campbell, representing the Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., of Detroit, Mich., accompanied by O. K. Olson, of Parker, was here recently, interesting our farmers in pea culture. Some years since Mr. Olson introduced the idea of raising peas for this seed house, and last year several thousand acres were grown on Egan bench. This year 4,000 acres have been contracted for that section of the country. Mr. Olson's crop last year averaged him fifty-four bushels to the acre, while the average for the total crop grown in the north part of the county was twenty-eight

Some florists think that they can give us gooseflesh by telling us how cheap they can buy lily bulbs elsewhere. We wonder if they think we do not know our competitors' prices. The fact is they do not know what the real bottom price is, so we are going to tell you. The bottom price for low-grade Lily Bulbs is that figure which will enable one or more firms to dispose of a certain quantity of bulbs. The value is not made by the importers nor the growers, but is made by the buyers of this class of lily bulbs. Therefore, if they will not sell at $60.00, they may sell at $40.00 per thousand; but that is not saying that they are worth anything, for that matter, because their real value is problematical. If the bulbs bought at extremely low prices were of the best grade produced, there would not be a sufficient quantity to go around—furthermore, there would be no occasion for a reduction in price. About 95% of all price reductions and bulb bargains is principally because the value of the goods is no more than the asking price. Those buyers who buy from every Tom, Dick and Harry for the reason that their prices are low will eventually learn their little lesson from Professor Experience, who teaches the unwary by candlelight, because they won't learn any other way. Wise men learn by others' mistakes—fools by their own. The prices of Horseshoe Brand lilies are all based upon a certain percentage of profit, regardless of the prices of other firms. In making these prices, crop conditions, quantities of available bulbs and the volume of business done is taken as a basis. This year we find ourselves in a position to quote extraordinary prices on certain sizes, owing to the large quantities we shall have to deliver, providing the crop does not receive a setback. These prices have been advertised and will be sent immediately upon application, together with the Horseshoe Brand book of Bulbology, which may interest you. There are no better lily bulbs produced anywhere in the world, and there are a great many produced which are not as good.

bushels per acre. The company furnishes the seed, deducting the same from the crop and paying for the remainder from 2½ to 3½ cents a pound, delivered at the railroad. It is proposed to contract for something like 1,800 acres for this vicinity for the present year."

LOS ANGELES SEED NOTES.

The Southern California Seed Trade Association, which meets periodically at the store of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., Los Angeles, is an organization not sufficiently appreciated by the trade. D. F. Reichard, of the Lewis & Snow Seed Co., is the secretary and the object of the association is the betterment of the trade in general, especial attention being given to the question of equitable state laws referring to the seed trade.

Peas, sweet peas and lettuce will assuredly be short items this season, according to those in a position to know.

Thos. Cox, the veteran seedsman of San Francisco, and who sold out to the C. C. Morse Seed Co. years ago, was a visitor this week.

STOCK SEED OF SWEET CORN.

The structure of the floral organs of the corn plant is such as to secure under normal conditions more or less complete cross-fertilization, and it has been found that there is liability to rapid loss of vegetative vigor in plants which are persistently self-fertilized. This, in connection with the fact that it is difficult, if not impossible, under ordinary farm conditions to prevent more or less cross-pollination, leads to methods and practices in growing stock seed corn which differ materially from those that give the best results with most vegetables. Instead of trying to isolate the stock blocks, it is suggested by W. W. Tracy, in a recent bulletin, that they be located near the center of the largest available field of the variety and that the selection of breeding stock be made as follows:

First, formulate a very clear conception of precisely what an ideal plant of the sort to be grown should be, not only as to grain and ear, but as to stalk, leaf, husk, silk, and tassel, for this is essential to the raising of the best seed of the sort. With this conception in mind or, what is far better, clearly written out and illustrated by photograph, go into a field of the sort at the time the plants are coming into silk and mark with a string, or a bit of cloth, or in some way a number of stalks. It is wise to select at least a hundred plants which are as nearly alike and typical of the sort as can be found.

When the grain is in the dough state, assemble the marked stalks and, after stripping down the husks, very carefully select and tag those in which the ear and the grain are nearest to the ideal. The ears from each of these selected plants should be carefully numbered, dried, and stored. The next spring mark out, near the center of the largest available field of the sort, a block of four, nine, or sixteen square rods for each of the selected ears, and plant each block with seed from one of the selected plants.

It is wise in making the planting to

The "SPENCER" Type of SWEET PEAS

Burpee's Special
Re-selected Stocks for 1912

"SPENCER" SWEET PEAS are a great specialty with us! We were the first to grow the seed in America—the stock having been entrusted to us before introduction, even in England, of the original Countess Spencer. We have grown "the original Beauty" and its many "sportive" children with painstaking care each season since. There are but few other growers who can supply an equal assortment of true re-selected "Spencers" that are uniformly of such choice quality. Seedsmen and florists can see how superior our stocks now are by the trials at Fordhook Farms next June or July, while those who may be in California are invited also to inspect the growing crops at our Floradale Farm, in the beautiful Lompoc Valley. Every planter's garden, however, is really a trial ground, and we shall be quite content if any "Doubting Thomas" will send us only a portion of his order and note the difference in character of flowers produced.

¶ You can buy so-called "Spencer" Sweet Peas at half our prices—but the result will be only disappointment, and when in flower you will surely admit that you would gladly have paid even double our prices to have had the Burpee Quality of the true Spencer type!

For complete list of varieties with prices consult BURPEE'S BLUE LIST FOR 1912—a complete catalogue of 146 pages, for Florists and Market Gardeners—which will be mailed upon application, BUT ONLY TO THOSE ENTITLED TO RECEIVE IT. Our retail catalogue is free to everyone. :: :: :: :: :: :: ::

W. ATLEE BURPEE & CO.

reserve at least one-fifth of the seed on each ear, not only for replanting if necessary, but so that reference may be made to the exact character of the parent stock. When the corn is coming into silk, carefully go over the blocks and select those in which the plants in stalk, leaf, husk, silk, and tassel are most uniformly of the desired character, rejecting the plants which show the greatest variation, even if some of them, as will in all probability be the case, are among the most perfect plants in the field.

When the corn is passing into the dough state go over the selected blocks and, stripping down the husks, select the blocks in which the ears are most uniformly of the desired varietal character, rejecting as in the selection of the individual plants, all the ears, no matter how perfect they may be, from the blocks showing greatest variation. As a rule it will be best to select several blocks in order to avoid the loss in vegetative vigor which in the corn plant often follows too close breeding.

From the chosen blocks select a number of the most perfect ears, to be tagged, numbered, kept separate, and again planted in separate blocks the next season. The balance of the corn from the selected blocks can be gathered and the better ears bulked and used the following season for planting the field in which the seed blocks are to be located.

Working in this way, never losing sight of or changing the ideal varietal characteristics of the sort, always selecting from the most uniform lot, resisting the temptation to use an exceptionally perfect ear found in a variable block, one can in a few years establish strains which will be greatly superior in practical value to most of the seed now used.

Various Notes.

Randolph & McClements were one of several east end firms caught last week by a swindler who used the old request to "send the boy with change for $10." In each of the places which he visited the man gave a small order to be delivered to a fictitious address. "Get it out there by about 3 o'clock and give the boy who brings it change for $10," he said. In each case the boy who carried the package was met by the man some distance from the address given. "Is that package for Mr. Andrews?" he asked. "Yes, sir," said the boy. "Well, I'll take it to the house," and he handed the lad a worthless check for $10. The boy unhesitatingly turned over the change with which he had been intrusted, and the man disappeared.

The Crego Aster

"THE BEST IN THE MARKET"

If it is your intention to realize the highest possible cash returns from your Aster crop next summer, you will want the best seed your money can buy. The CREGO ASTER seed I can furnish you is of the very best quality, not only because it is grown miles from any other field of Asters, but because, in addition to doing everything possible to keep the strain free from mixture, the most painstaking care was given the crop from seedbed to the ripened seed.

Too much importance cannot be given to the matter of keeping Asters, grown from seed, at as great a distance as possible from all other kinds of Asters. Colors will mix a little under the very best conditions, as insects cannot be kept out of the field; but the seed grower who plants several varieties in the same field is certain to bring about the ruination of all.

The CREGO ASTER has been given a fair trial in nearly every part of the United States and Canada, also in Europe, and has proved itself to be exactly what every florist needs—an Aster which finds instant favor with his customers, for which they are willing to pay the highest price and which gives him the highest return for his time and labor. It costs the grower no more to produce flowers of that grade than to grow the common run of Asters, which sell for but little more than enough to pay express charges. I am offering the CREGO ASTER in four colors, viz.: shell-pink, pure white, rose-pink and violet blue, all fully up to Crego grade, with immense, fluffy blossoms four to six inches in diameter and of splendid color.

BUY YOUR SEED DIRECT FROM THE ORIGINATOR

The price of the CREGO ASTER seed is as follows: ¼ oz., $1.00; ½ oz., $2.00; oz., $4.00; cash with order. Full directions for growing the largest and finest Asters will be sent to each purchaser of ¼ oz. or more, if requested.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

NURSERYMEN in the southwest are having a big season.

CHARLES CUSTER, nurseryman at Normal, Ill., is driving a new motor.

THE imports of plants, trees, etc., for the month of December, 1911, had a total invoice value of $260,954, as against $226,041 in the corresponding month of 1910.

THE Florida Nursery and Trading Co., Florala, Ala., has just finished budding 75,000 pecan trees and 20,000 Satsuma oranges. One order calls for 12,000 pecans.

THE movers of big trees are having plenty of cold weather to make solid the largest balls of soil. The winter moving of large trees has become almost an exact science, and is done much more commonly than in the past.

EDWIN SWENSON, proprietor of the Nicollet County Nursery and Seed Farm, Nicollet, Minn., has made arrangements to dispose of the stock of the Lake Crystal Nursery, of Lake Crystal, Minn., in connection with his own nursery stock. He will put six salesmen on the road. L. D. Mills, the proprietor of the Lake Crystal Nursery, has been obliged to retire on account of ill health.

THE Boskoop Handels-commité, or Committee of Boskoop Nurserymen, has decided to establish a publicity bureau to supply the horticultural press with "short articles which might be of value to the readers." The first short article, sent out February 5, explains why the prices of azaleas, box, etc., jumped last year, and why they will continue "at least fifty per cent higher than in the past."

MIAMI VALLEY NURSERYMEN.

The Miami Valley Nurserymen's Association met in the lecture hall of the National Cash Register Co.'s works, at Dayton, O., on Friday, February 16. Reports on stock and trade conditions were heard from members, tributes to the memory of the deceased president of the association were heard, and some time was given to the consideration of the revised Simmons bill. It was the feeling that some changes should be made before endorsement be given.

The annual banquet was held at the Phillips House, attended by the ladies and friends. Music, entertainment by an impersonator and impromptu speeches were the order of the evening and, as usual, a pleasant time was spent.

The following officers were elected: President, W. F. Bohlender; vice-president, M. F. Barnes; secretary and treasurer, M. A. Gaines.

NURSERY STOCK SCARCE.

An unusual demand for many varieties of nursery stock has resulted in a shortage in nurseries at Fresno, Cal., and many who contemplated planting fruit trees have found that it is impossible to have their demands supplied locally. Among the varieties of trees in which a shortage is reported are apricots, prunes, almonds and different varieties of cling peaches. Phillips clings are in heaviest demand, however. Because of the shortage in young cling peach trees, many are turning to free stones, which can be used for drying as well as for canning. High prices for apricots, prunes, almonds and peaches last year are said to be responsible for the unusual demand for these varieties for planting this year. It is said that this is always the case, notwithstanding the fact that it takes four years for the trees to produce. There is always a heavy demand for olives, but none of the nurserymen have yet been able to supply all demands. Planting has not yet started in the Fresno district and will probably not be started until after the rains are over. People who are contemplating planting are now waiting for sufficient rain to moisten the ground and give the young trees an opportunity to take hold.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Valentine's day meant much for last week's trade, which was beyond a doubt quite satisfactory to all. Then, too, it was a busy week with funeral work, so that the two combined kept the florists on the jump most of the time. It was quite frequently remarked that the rush that accompanied Valentine's day reminded one of when the holiday season was approaching, as there was a decided increase in the trade over that of preceding years. Evidently flowers are increasing in popularity for valentines. It was an impossibility to keep up with the demand for red roses and violets, while red carnations, which were more plentiful, did not go begging either. Lilies of the valley were also favorites, and in fact cut flowers of all kinds sold out well. Azaleas, too, brought good prices.

The rose crop is still shy and the demand excessive; these conditions, however, will not hold out much longer, as the weather of last week was bright and warm. Carnations are sufficient to meet all requirements, lilies also. Both helped out well last week in filling funeral orders. Bulbous stock of all kinds cleans up remarkably, even though the supply is heavy.

The weather has moderated considerably, thus giving the growers a chance to get in a fresh supply of hyacinths and daffodils. Another good boost to local trade last week was the automobile show, which continued throughout the entire week, bringing a call for large quantities of cut flowers, besides decorative plants and greens.

Various Notes.

Wm. Huston, shipping clerk for the Miami Floral Co., is back on duty again after an illness of three weeks.

Miss Amy Ewing is speedily recovering from her recent illness of typhoid fever.

The Miami Floral Co. is cutting large quantities of good carnations, on which they report good sales. They are also shipping lots of carnation cuttings.

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

DETROIT.

Various Notes.

Owing to important business matters, W. N. Rudd, who was personally to address the Detroit Florists' Club at the meeting of February 19, could not be present. His paper, entitled "Where Some of Us Are Lame," was read and brought forth an interesting discussion; in fact, it contained so much food for thought that it was moved that it be read again at the meeting of March 4.

J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer's, was in attendance at the meeting of February 19 and reported business in general all over the country as being good and the prospects fine.

Henry Rahaley and Adolph Thoman were unanimously elected members of the Detroit Florists' Club.

Albert Havrane, of Walkerville, shipped over one ton of lettuce to the Detroit market during the last two weeks.

Reports concerning Valentine's day show that this year's business for this event far exceeded that of any previous year. The extremely cold weather just previous to February 14 was thought to be partly the cause of the increase in business, as people took advantage of the milder weather.

With the coming of warmer weather the coal situation is somewhat relieved. Matters looked pretty serious at times, but now that warmer weather is assured relief is in sight.

Hugo Schroeter, representing the Pulverized Manure Co., of Chicago, is booking many orders for the firm's products in and about Detroit.

The Gardening Society, composed of many of Detroit's most prominent ladies, was addressed on the subject of "Annuals" at its meeting at Mrs. Newberry's residence on Tuesday, February 20, by a member of our club.

Elmer Smith, of Adrian, was in Detroit February 19, but could not remain over for the meeting, owing to sickness at home. H. S.

The Market.

Business has been excellent this month, but there have not been enough flowers produced here and the florists have had to buy heavily from out-of-town. Carnations have been quite plentiful, but roses have been short and are bringing a good price. At present we are having spring-like weather and flowers will be more plentiful in a couple of weeks. A large number of weddings and funerals have kept the florists busy.

Various Notes.

At Julius Niednagel & Sons' trade has been good. They are beginning to cut more heavily of roses, while the carnations have been giving a good, steady crop. Mr. Niednagel will get about $1,200 from the city for moving one house that is in the line of Bell street, which is to be opened soon. He thinks it will be worth this much to move it.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has had to buy stock to supply the demand, business has been so good.

Henry Seymour is getting his share and has had to turn down a good many orders, as the supply of flowers was short. His carnations are producing well, but he has to buy a good many.

Louis Fritsch is cutting several hundred fine carnations each week and has a good sale for them.

J. C. Elsperman is cutting lots of nice carnations.

Ben Kramer has been getting considerable work for funerals. The stock he has been buying is good, carnations being especially fine.

Royston & Fenton say the demand for roses is good, but the supply is short. A few more sunshiny days will give the roses a good boost.

The New Carnation, BROOKLYN

A Reincarnation of the Old William Scott, but embodying additional and more important qualities

A beautiful Deep Pink after the style of the old William Scott, lighter than Lawson, grand under artificial light. Highly built-up center, petals fringed, habit of growth all that could be desired. Very easy propagator, fastest growth of any Carnation. Flowers 3-in. and larger. Preliminary scoring, New York Florists' Club, 86 points. "Certificate of Merit" Horticultural Society of New York. TO BE DISSEMINATED 1911-1912.

ROOTED CUTTINGS, ready now, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. 250 at 1000 rate.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The Valentine's day business served to give the wholesale market renewed strength, for the volume of sales was quite satisfactory, considering the stormy weather which we have been having. While large quantities of stock were moved, prices did not advance greatly, because of the large supply in practically every line except roses. The number of violets sold was something tremendous. Practically every retailer made some special effort in the way of window decorations of heart-shaped and other boxes of flowers and business done at retail was satisfactory.

Carnations are in oversupply and prices are on the down grade, although flowers are of fine quality. Sweet peas are a glut, but of excellent quality, with ten to twelve inches of stem; thousands were sold on the streets Saturday.

Bulbous stock is in heavy supply and prices are lower. Some good narcissi are now coming in, and tulips are arriving with better stems and move fairly well. All bulbous stock is cheap and it is no wonder that the bulb salesmen from Holland, who now are so numerous in town, find the buyers slow to place orders.

Various Notes.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the Florists' Club will be celebrated with a banquet at Mt. Holly Inn March 11. It is expected that about 300 will attend, including the ladies and a large number of out-of-town guests. Robert L. Graham, president of the club, was ambitious to see 200 members in the club before March 11, and since this has been accomplished he has been more than pleased.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, reports one of the heaviest demands for geraniums that they ever had, shipping thousands daily.

J. J. Cummings will erect three new houses, 35 x 200 each, on Dorsey Lane, using the King construction.

D. T. Quick, of Woodlawn, will build one house, 27 x 100, for carnations.

Chas. H. Cook, of Catonsville, will build two new houses, each 23 x 100, for cut stock. Q.

ASCHMANN BROS.
Second and Bristol Sts. PHILADELPHIA

LANCASTER, PA.

A meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Association was held February 15, with an attendance that filled the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

H. D. Rohrer & Son exhibited some exceptionally fine white and yellow daisies and a vase of White Wonder that was far ahead of anything seen at Detroit.

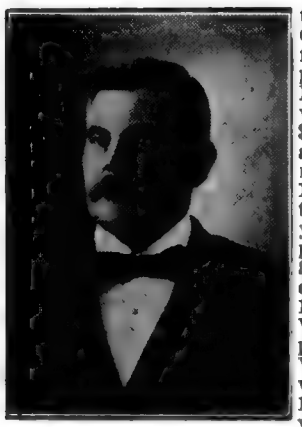
Elmer Weaver and the Wheatland Aquarium & Greenhouse Co. each exhibited a vase of well grown Mrs. C. W. Ward, which is a popular variety in this section.

Amos Rohrer, of Strasburg, exhibited a fine vase of Mrs. T. W. Lawson, a variety which he has grown continuously since its introduction, and with continuous success.

Washington was shown in fine form by Albert M. Herr.

The new daisy, Mrs. F. Sander, was exhibited by E. P. Hostetter, of Manheim.

Three fine vases of sweet peas were shown by Charles Weaver, of Ronks, one vase being a selection of Earliest of All, a big improvement in color.



The paper of the evening, by H. D. Rohrer, with carnations as the subject, was partly historical and partly cultural and was both interesting and instructive. The paper brought forth a lively discussion.

On motion it was decided to invite D. T. Connor, Philadelphia representative of the Foley Mfg. Co., to read a paper on greenhouse construction at the meeting of March 21.

Lancaster county has long enjoyed the distinction of being the garden spot of the United States; this association is going to try to make it the floral center of the United States for our specialties, carnations and geraniums, if we all have to get under the same greenhouse roof to do it. A. M. H.

Little Falls, N. Y.—J. O. Graham says the zero weather has been quite a tax on the coal pile and great watchfulness is necessary in order to be sure that steam is kept up. Following a busy holiday trade, this uses up some of the profits, but as business generally is reported as better than the average, one must not complain of this cold snap.

I've everything the people need,
All growing strong as any weed.

And oh, the beauty of them all,
The best of earth, both large and small!
Why, Godfrey Aschmann leader stands,
With all that's good from many lands.

We have an immense stock of EASTER AZALEAS, blooming at Easter or before. Mme. Vander Cruyssen, double pink; Simon Mardner, double pink; Deutsche Perle, double white; Niobe, double white; Helene Theleman, Professeur Wolters, Vervaeneana, double variegated; Apollo, red, and others, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Vervaeneana, Simon Mardner, Deutsche Perle, nearly in bloom, 75c to $1.00.

NOTICE

We have the finest LILIUM MULTIFLORUM in the market. All the Dutch and Belgian drummers, who visit all the noted growers in this country, say: "These are the best lilies we have ever seen in all our journey." No wonder we paid our growers in Japan $95.00 for selected 9-10 bulbs. The best is always the cheaper—this our motto. We offer them in 6-in. pots, 5 to 10 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Plants have good foliage from bottom up, are of medium height, and the buds are just right for Easter sales.

We have to offer, in prime condition, a large stock of ARAUCARIA EXCELSA, 5½, 6 and 7-in, 4, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, 18, 20, 28, 30 to 40 in. high, 50c up to $1.25; ROBUSTA COMPACTA, EXCELSA GLAUCA, $1.00 up to $2.00.

FERNS.—SCOTTII, WHITMANI, BOSTON, SCHOLZELI and GIATRASII, 5½, 6 and 7-inch sizes, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

RUBBER PLANTS, 6 and 7-in. pots, 25 to 35 in. high, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

20,000 ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS, 2½, 3 and 4-in., 3c, 5c and 10c; SPRENGERI, 4-in., 10c.

KENTIAS, BELMOREANA AND FORSTERIANA, single, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25, 30 to 40 in. high, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. KENTIA BELMOREANA, made up, 60c, 75c to $1.00.

LATANIA BORBONICA, 7-in., 30 to 35 in. high, 8 leaves, 75c to $1.00; made up, 6-in., 30 in. high, 50c.

ARECA LUTESCENS, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 15c, 25c; 5¼ in., 25c.

COCOS WEDDELLIANA, 3-in., 15c; 4-in., 20c.

PRIMULA CHINENSIS, in bloom. 4-in., 10c; 5¼-in., $2.00 per doz.

CINERARIA HYBRIDA, our well known strain, 5½ to 6-in. pots, in bud and bloom and for Easter sales, 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c; 4-in., to grow for Easter, 10c; 3-in., 5c.

The Edgebrook Greenhouses and Nurseries of the Geo. Wittbold Co., Edgebrook, Chicago, Ill.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held at Pembroke hall February 14, with President J. F. Johnson in the chair.

A circular was read from the New York Florists' Club, containing a call for delegates to attend a conference to be held at Ithaca, N. Y., in reference to forming a state organization. After some discussion, J. F. Johnson and Jas. Duthie were appointed to attend the meeting.

Walter McKinley was elected to active membership and there was one application.

The judges of the exhibits were J. Ingram, J. McQueen and A. McKendrie. J. Everett was awarded a cultural certificate for a fine specimen gardenia plant and honorable mention for a vase of gardenia blooms. Frank Patroccia received honorable mention for two plants of Primula malacoides. The society's prizes were awarded as follows: Six gardenias, first, G. Augey; twelve mushrooms, first, J. Everett; twenty-five sprays of freesia, first, J. MacDonald.

It was decided to hold the fall show October 29 and 30, and that the profits be given to the Nassau hospital, at Mineola, L. I.

Mrs. E. M. Townsend, of Oyster Bay, offered a silver cup for the best collection of outdoor roses, to be won three times and to be competed for at the fall show.

S. Trepess and E. Brown were appointed to represent the society at the annual dinner of the Yonkers Horticultural Society.

The exhibits for next meeting will be three cauliflowers, twelve mixed roses and one cineraria.

The society held an enjoyable euchre and dance February 15, with about 200 present. It was a great success financially and otherwise and seems likely to become an annual affair. J. M.

Rome, N. Y.—The Humphrey Floral Co. is buying some new pink carnations, being of the opinion that Enchantress can not continue to give such satisfactory results as formerly. The business is conducted by the two Misses Humphrey, who are thorough artists and clever growers.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' prices

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By CHARLES HENDERSON. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth. $2.50

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

The Nursery Book.

By L. H. BAILEY. A complete guide to the multiplication of plants. The book comprises full practical directions for sowing, the making of all kinds of layers, stools, cuttings, propagation by bulbs and tubers, and very complete accounts of all the leading kinds of budding, grafting and inarching. An alphabetical catalogue of about 1500 plants—of fruit, kitchen-garden, ornamental and greenhouse species—with directions for their multiplication. Cloth. $1.50

Hedges, Windbreaks, Shelters and Live Fences.

By E. P. POWELL. A treatise on the planting, growth and management of hedge plants for country and suburban homes. It gives accurate directions concerning hedges; how to plant and how to treat them; and especially concerning windbreaks and shelters. Cloth. 140 pages. Illustrated. 50 cents

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

The Florists' Manual.

By WM. SCOTT. A practical guide for the florist, covering the successful management of all the usual florists' plants; including many topics, such as greenhouse building, heating and floral decorating, etc. Written so you can understand it and profit by its guidance. Fully illustrated. $5.00

Bulbs and Tuberous Rooted Plants.

By C. L. ALLEN. A complete history, description, methods of propagation and full directions for the successful culture of bulbs in the garden, dwelling or greenhouse. The illustrations which embellish this work have been drawn from nature, and have been engraved especially for this book. Cloth. $1.50

Practical Floriculture.

By PETER HENDERSON. An illustrated guide to the successful propagation of florists' plants. A detailed account of the requisites to success and a clear explanation of improved methods. For the amateur and professional florist. 325 pages. Cloth. $1.50

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 25 cents

Greenhouse Heating.

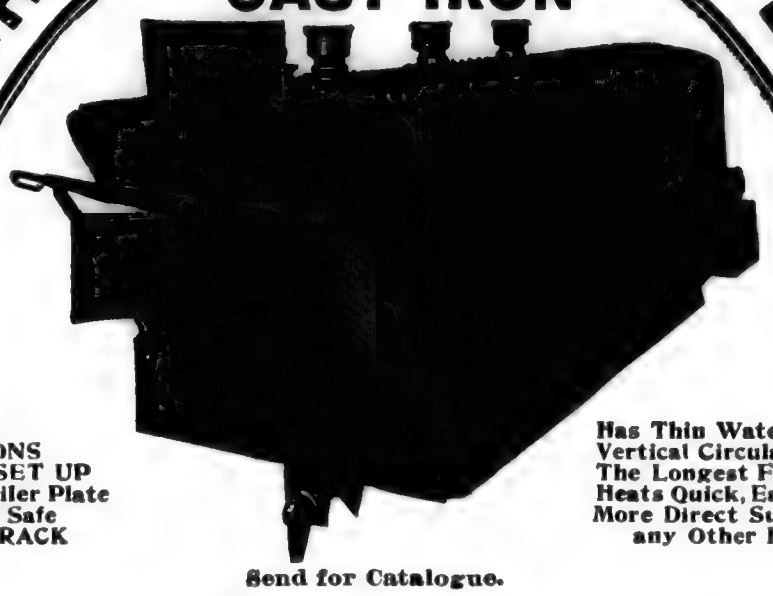
PRACTICALLY everyone in the coal business is looking for a suspension of mining March 31, when the mine operators' contracts with the miners' union will expire both east and west. Under the circumstances the wise florist will fill up his bins while he can.

COST OF FUEL—A COMPARISON.

Regarding F. B.'s communication in The Review of February 15, page 92, under the head of "Burns Too Much Coal," does it not seem probable that F. B. installed an old, discarded boiler, to save first cost, and relied on incompetent advice as to radiation? While the first cost of hot water heating with an up-to-date boiler is more than for steam, he would have just about saved the difference by this time if he had chosen the right outfit. As is stated in the answer to his inquiry, he has burned at least twice the necessary amount of coal, and this does not take into account the sitting up every night to shovel it in, which calls for an extra man to do it.

This case interests us particularly, as the houses are almost identical with ours, except that we have 300 more square feet of surface covered. We burned last year about $225 worth of coal, and this year, in spite of the bitterly cold weather, we expect to cut this about $25, though we have maintained a higher temperature than has F. B. About three weeks of this winter one man stayed awake to do the firing, not so much from necessity of frequent firing, but as a safeguard against letting the fire get too low. And while we did this, as every greenhouse man knows, growth was practically at a standstill on account of the severe weather and there was not the usual amount of work to do in the daytime; hence we were not out a dollar for extra help, having put the man on at night instead of in the daytime. Now that the weather has moderated, we are able to do this firing by setting the alarm and getting up once or twice, as the occasion requires. Our houses are on an elevation and exposed to every wind that blows.

We think that F. B. would have saved many good dollars had he spent a few before building, in visiting some one, two or three places of about the same size as those he was planning to build. J. E. Hitz.



HEAT FOR BEDDING PLANTS.

What is the best way to pipe my new house, 14 x 60 and eleven feet to the ridge? I have a 2½-inch pipe for the flow and some 2-inch pipes for the returns. Will three returns under each side bench be sufficient for growing bedding plants and mums? I am located in southeastern Pennsylvania.

B. J. P.

The letter does not give an exact idea of the temperature needed, as some bedding plants can be grown at 50 degrees, while others should have a temperature of 60 or more degrees. The side walls are presumably five or six feet high, but the inquiry does not state whether they contain any glass or not. If the house is well built and has no glass in the walls, it will be

WILL IT COST YOU $260 OR $1200?

Study our illustrations—see how a certain greenhouse man paid $260.00 for his boiler and fuel during the winter—while his neighbor tried to save money by buying a "cheap" (?) boiler and sank $1200.00

The man who spent $260.00 used our GIBLIN "Standard" Greenhouse Boiler.

It is the biggest saver you can put into your greenhouse.

Philip Warner, Newtonville, N. Y., in August, 1911, bought one No. 408 Giblin Standard Greenhouse Boiler. January 7, 1912, the thermometer was 12 degrees below zero outside, with a strong gale blowing. He fixed his fire at 8 p. m., and every part of the greenhouse registered 52 degrees, the temperature desired. Because of the wildness of the night, he arose at 2 a. m. and found every part of the greenhouse 52 degrees and the fire in good condition. Because he was up, he placed a very small quantity of fuel on the fire and went to bed until 6 a. m. He then found the fire in splendid condition, the thermometer registering 52 degrees in all parts of the greenhouse, with conditions unchanged outdoors. The boiler that will heat a greenhouse ten hours without attention, when the thermometer is 12 degrees below zero and a gale blowing, is the boiler every florist wants in his greenhouse.

Can you afford to disregard the importance of this showing?

You save money every year you use our GIBLIN "Standard" Greenhouse Boiler, by reducing your fuel consumption, repairs and labor cost to the minimum.

Not a "Cheap" Outfit

Although we offer an extra discount of 25%, in addition to our liberal regular discount, for the purpose of introducing our boiler in your neighborhood, this is not a "cheap" outfit. The price is right for the grade and quality of workmanship we put into it—the very best.

You want a boiler that requires very little attention and leaves you free to devote your valuable time to more important things. Neither you nor your men relish getting up at midnight, 3 a. m. and sunrise to feed a hungry heater.

The GIBLIN "Standard" requires attention only once in twelve hours in ordinary weather.

It economizes on repairs because of its unusually sturdy construction. All of the castings are tested at pressure of 65 lbs. to the square inch—far more than they will ever undergo in actual use. Our boiler will last a lifetime, and once you've bought it your heating worries are off your mind for once and all. Can you say the same about your present boiler?

Wouldn't it pay you to "scrap" the outfit you now have and start saving by using a GIBLIN "Standard"?

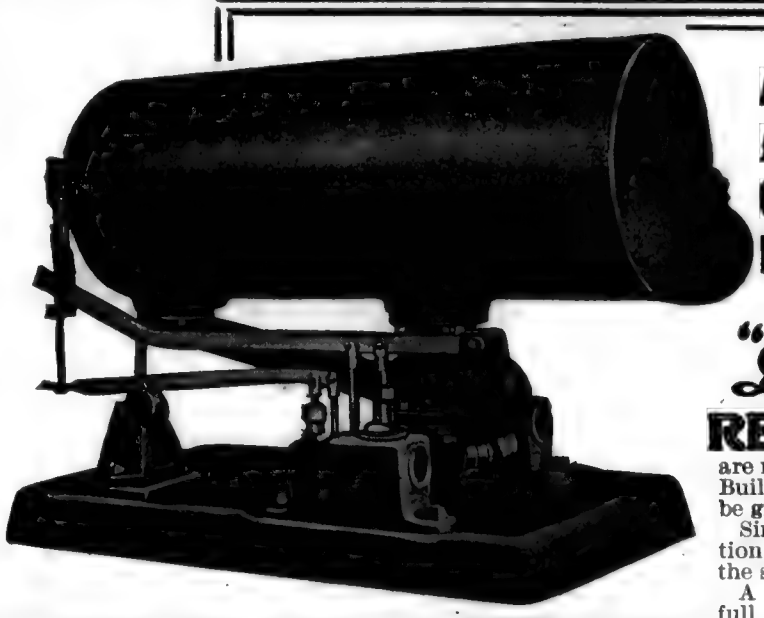
possible to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees, when the weather is at zero, by the use of one 2½-inch flow, carried on the downhill plan, and six 2-inch returns. If there is glass in both walls, use an additional return for each foot of glass, and if a temperature of 60 degrees is desired, use two or three additional 2-inch returns.

ABOUT AIR VALVES.

I recently wrote to you asking for some advice about the heating of my greenhouse, 22½x150, with hot water, and my inquiry was satisfactorily answered in The Review of February 15. However, there are one or two questions that I neglected to ask. Where shall I put the air valves? Will the lower end of the flows need an air valve? Can ¶ use automatic air valves to take care of the air? J. G.



If the flows run downhill and the expansion tank is connected at the highest point of the flow pipe, there will be no occasion for any air valves in the system, either on the flows or returns, as the air can escape through the pipe which leads to the expansion tank. There will then be no possibility of air collecting at any time in the pipes, provided, of course, they have been given a slight downward trend.

IN EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Will you please tell me how to pipe a greenhouse, 39 x 150 feet, six feet high to the gutters and fourteen feet to the ridge? How deep should the boiler be placed in the ground? The outside temperature here sometimes drops below zero, but not often. M. H. H.

If a house 39 x 150 feet is to be heated to 50 degrees in zero weather, it will be well to use five 2½-inch or three 3-inch pipes as flows, and thirteen 2-inch returns. Place one of the flows about four feet under the ridge and one upon each of the plates. If five are used, one can be carried under the upper row of purlins, or on the purlin posts if there are any. For a temperature of 60 degrees use from eighteen to twenty returns, and add one return for each foot of glass in the walls.

The letter does not indicate whether beds or benches are used, or how they are located; hence no definite advice upon the location of the returns can be given. Whenever possible, it is desirable to have two or three of the returns upon each of the side walls and the others distributed beneath the benches. If possible, the top of the boiler should be lower than the returns, but if this can not be arranged it will be well to attach a mercury circulator to the system and thus assist the circulation.

and arranged with hermetically sealed case, safe from hose or dampness. It is an instrument developed specially to meet greenhouse conditions. It cannot be tampered with and remains absolutely accurate and effective, no matter how damp your house may be. In all other respects, however, this is practically the same as Style I, advertised in last week's Review. It gives positive warning of approaching fire or frost, heat or cold.

Anybody can put it up—only a screwdriver needed. All necessary directions with each instrument. Order today. Ask for

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 6, 1912.

The Aphine Manufacturing Co., Madison, N. J.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of ——— [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

We will be glad to refer any of the Grand Rapids growers to these products.

The Market.

The zero weather broke just in time to allow the Valentine's day business to come and be handled without any trouble. The temperature was around the freezing point and was such a contrast to the preceding weather that trade took a decided change for the better. Heavy advertising and circular work made the day popular and trade was away in advance of other years. Violets were the leaders, but heavy sales were reported in all lines. Sweet peas sold well and the mild weather made it possible for corsages to be worn on the street. The day showed a marked increase in the use of flowers, and the increase will no doubt continue until the day can be compared to Thanksgiving and the larger holidays. The window displays were extensive and the novelties were well worthy of mention.

Bulb stock is now in the market in a crowded condition, with not much sign of an outlet. Carnations are also plentiful, but the shortage of roses is marked.

Various Notes.

R. M. Rebstock has entirely remodeled the store and added elaborate fixtures, and now has a store which anyone might well be proud of. The best feature of all is that business keeps coming and there was a fine Valentine's day business. A Ford car for delivery has now been added. R. A. S.

Somersworth, N. H.—G. S. Ramsburg had the decorations for the recent ball of the Somersworth Clerks' Association.

Albany, N. Y.—Whittle Bros. expect to remove from their present store, 10 North Pearl street, to 52 North Pearl street, about May 1.

Hartford, Conn.—The city is seeking to open a street, laid out in 1867 but never opened, across which now stand the greenhouses of J. Albert Brodrib, who has thus far prevented by injunction the removal of his buildings.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Annual Dinner.

The New Jersey Floricultural Society held its annual dinner Saturday evening, February 17, at English's hall, 396 Main street. This was the first time in the history of the society that the ladies were present at an affair of this kind, and everyone voiced the sentiment that this was the most enjoyable meeting the society ever held. The hall was decorated with flags of all nations and on the tables were vases of the new carnations, including Totty's Wodenethe; Scott Bros.' new scarlet, Wm. Eades; Brooklyn, the new pink from Charles Weber, Lynbrook, L. I., also vases of other seasonable flowers.

President F. Drews in a few appropriate remarks welcomed the assembled guests and called on George Smith, who was chosen toastmaster. Mr. Smith is always equal to the occasion with his witty remarks. Songs were rendered by Miss Hayes, Miss Maud Knight and Miss McGall; recitations by Miss Jessie McRorie and Geo. B. Wilson. Wm. Duckham, Arthur Herrington and Edward Reagan spoke for the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society and mentioned the fact that the N. J. F. S. is the oldest society of its kind in the state. Mr. Tricker, representing C. H. Totty, spoke of the forthcoming National Flower Show and hoped that all the societies would coöperate and help to make this show a success. J. A. Manda, president of the New York Florists' Club, spoke in like manner, asking that all the societies give their support. J. Austin Shaw paid tribute to the ladies and said this was our crowning triumph in bringing the ladies here, and he hoped that we would not fail to repeat this year after year. Mr. Shaw also spoke of the delightful time he had in Bermuda.

Dr. J. M. W. Kitchen, of East Orange, gave some of his experiences on mushroom growing. He said he had read all the literature he could find on the subject and talked with growers, but as to growing a crop with any certainty he was just as far from a solution as ever.

Among the visitors were: Isaac S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, L. I.; Jasper R. Lewis, New York city; Wm. Scott, Elmsford, N. Y.; Chas. Weber, Lynbrook, L. I.; J. I. Donlan, Charles McTaggart, representing W. E. Marshall & Co., New York city. W. R.

A Letter About a Rose House and Nine Growers —Their Opinions—

ONE day last August I found a letter on my desk that put me in a particularly good humor. It came from Philadelphia. Here is an extract from it:

"Mr. Joseph Heacock recently invited several florists to visit his new rose house at Roelofs, Pa. Among those who yesterday accepted his invitation to go were Mr. Robert Craig, J. Welsh Young, Geo. C. Watson, Geo. Craig, David Rust, Fred Hahman, Thomas Logan, John Westcott and myself. They all thought that the new L. & B. Iron Frame house, 55x600 feet, was one of the best they had ever seen.

"It is a well-known fact that Mr. Heacock has been sending in the best Killarney roses that have come to the Philadelphia market the past winter. He has been able to get a better price for his roses from the new house than any other grower. The reason for this is undoubtedly because Mr. Heacock has an up-to-date house. One of the growers remarked that 'most growers can cut good roses at certain times of the year, but with a house like this one it makes it possible to produce high-grade stock at all seasons.' This proves conclusively to my mind that your large Iron Frame house, which gives the most light and largest amount of air space, is the ideal rose house, other conditions being equal."

To which we would add—send for our catalogue.

Advertising forms close

TUESDAY

The latest hour at which advertisements, or changes of advertisements, can be accepted is 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Binghamton, N. Y.—M. H. Mills has discontinued business because of advanced age; he is 86 years old. The greenhouses have been torn down.

Geraniums

GERANIUM FOLIAGE CURLING.

I am sending you some geranium leaves and should like to know what causes them to curl under as they do. The top leaves do not open out straight, but curl under. Quite a lot of the lower leaves turn yellow. I have them in 2½-inch pots and some in 4-inch, but they are all alike. I have not sprayed or fumigated them at all. Last spring I had a lot on which the bud only got about as big as a good sized pea and then would dry up and drop off. G. H. P.

The plants have probably been much potbound or may have been kept too long in the cutting bench before potting. Spraying or fumigating would not be likely to cause the trouble in any way. Aphis does not usually attack the zonale geraniums, but it does occasionally, and a fumigation or spraying with nicotine would then be necessary. A suitable potting soil is one containing good pasture loam, with some spent mushroom manure or old, decayed cow manure added. Some fine bone is also excellent; use a pot to each bushel of soil. Never use any fresh manure; it always produces a rank, soft growth. You do not state how warm you are keeping your geraniums. They like 48 to 50 degrees at night, with all possible sun and a comparatively dry atmosphere. Never let them get potbound, but feed occasionally when they show such a tendency. C. W.

DISEASED GERANIUM LEAVES.

I am troubled regarding my geraniums. Recently they were attacked by some insects or a disease. The older leaves first show tiny spots on the under side, which to the naked eye almost look like little welts. Soon the leaf begins to turn yellow and the under side looks as though the tissue had been punctured. The surface sometimes has tiny red spots. The leaf turns yellow at the edge first. The plants have been kept on the dry side and in a cool house and I am not able to find any insects on them. I have painted one of the pipes with sulphur, so that the color of it can just be detected on entering the greenhouse. Is that too much? The geraniums were affected before I used the sulphur and had only been fumigated with tobacco. Any information you can give me will be gratefully received. V. R. F.

The foliage forwarded showed no signs of any insects, but had the appearance of being attacked by bacteria. The sulphuring of the pipes would not cause this; in fact, it should, if anything, help to prevent its spread. Pick off the worst affected leaves and give the plants a spraying with Bordeaux mixture. Give them all the sun and light possible. Ventilate the house freely. Do not spray them overhead. If well rooted in the pots, give them a moderate stimulant once a week to encourage them to make new growth. For this purpose a teaspoonful of nitrate of soda in a 12-quart watering pot is good. After using this twice, a considerable improvement should be detected. Your plants are similar to many others at this season, but do not be alarmed about them, as they will eventually come out all right. Do not let the plants stand too close together. Pick off all dead and dying foliage. Keep a pure atmosphere and a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees and they should soon pick up. C. W.

FUNGUS ON GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

I send you a few geranium leaves which are affected with a disease which I would call fungus. If you know anything about the disease, would you kindly let me know what to do for it? F. G. E.

The leaves, which had almost crumbled to pieces before they reached me, had evidently been attacked by some fungoid growth, which is not at all uncommon at this season. The best remedy is to pick over the plants frequently, removing affected foliage; also give them a spraying with Bordeaux mixture. Keep the plants somewhat on the dry side and do not syringe overhead at all. Let them have plenty of sunshine and fresh air. Keep them spaced well apart, for if allowed to crowd, many leaves will decay. To assist the diseased plants to make a better growth, feed them with weak nitrate of soda water, a teaspoonful to a 12-quart can, once a week until they improve. Always avoid a moist, close atmosphere, which would aggravate fungoid troubles on geraniums. C. W.

DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

You will find enclosed some geranium leaves. The leaves dry up around the edges and finally drop off. I would like to find the cause of the trouble and a remedy, as some of the plants are entirely without leaves. H. G.

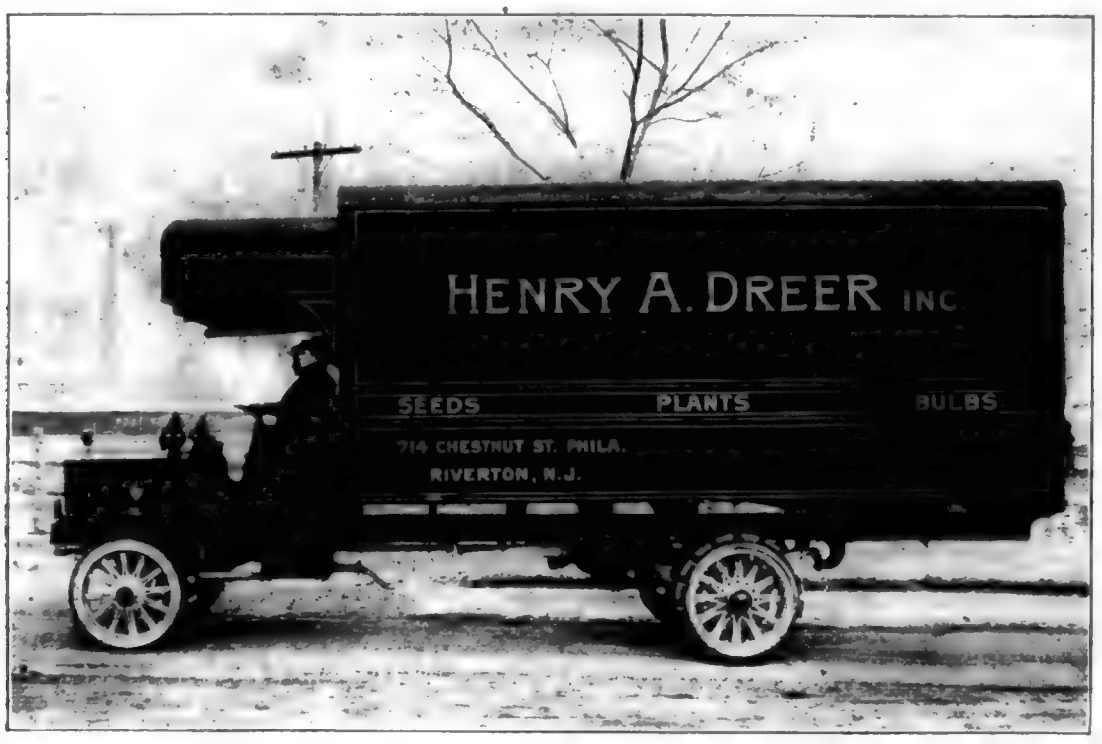
Isolate the affected plants from those which are apparently healthy. Give all your plants a spraying with Bordeaux mixture; also keep them picked over. Allow a little space between the plants, and do not syringe them overhead. If the plants are well rooted in the pots, feed them with soot or nitrate of soda water once a week until they show an improvement. A teaspoonful of nitrate of soda to a 12-quart can of water will suffice. Plenty of sun and air and an average minimum temperature of 48 to 50 degrees will suit the plants. The cause of the trouble can only be conjectured, but with care you can overcome it. C. W.

HUEBNER'S NEW ANTIRRHINUM.

The photograph here reproduced shows some vases of the new antirrhinum raised by H. Huebner, of Groton, Mass. With reference to the origin of the plant, Mr. Huebner states that about twelve years ago he found an antirrhinum seedling growing among his violets outdoors. In housing the violets he also took in the snapdragon plant. It proved to be a dwarf sort, not over eighteen inches high. The flowers were white with a pinkish tip, not a really decided color, but the plant bloomed profusely all winter. He propagated it and grew it again the following winter. There was a noticeable improvement each succeeding season. Even if the color was not first-class, the flowers were highly acceptable in midwinter.

About six or seven years ago Mr.

H. Huebner's New Winter-flowering Antirrhinum.



Huebner discovered on one of the plants a branch that produced a clear white flower. He made as many propagations of this as possible and found that it had all of the good qualities of the original, besides growing taller. By selection and cross breeding with some of the choice outdoor varieties, he says, he now has a number of good colors, particularly white and yellow. The pink, he states, is not yet as clear a color as he would wish, but he hopes soon to have the right shade. The flowers are set quite close together on the stalk and make a handsome, compact spike.

Mr. Huebner states that this antirrhinum has proved to be his best money-making crop for the last few years. Some of the flower stalks, particularly on the pink variety, which he showed at Horticultural hall, Boston, February 2 to 4, had forty open flowers, besides the buds, on stalks four feet tall.

In regard to the treatment of the plants, he says he grows them in much the same way as carnations, with the exception that he does not plant them in the field. He takes cuttings any time from January to April, pots them along as needed and plunges them in a sunny frame, in ashes, about June 1. By pinching them back as often as necessary, he usually has nice, bushy plants, mostly in 4-inch pots, by the middle of August, when he benches them the same as carnations. He continues to pinch them back until the end of September. By fumigating lightly about every ten days, he keeps them perfectly clean.

DREER'S BIG AUTOMOBILE.

It recently was reported in The Review that Henry A. Dreer had put a large motor truck on the road between the greenhouses at Riverton, N. J., and the city store in Philadelphia. A picture of the truck now is presented. It will be apparent at a glance this is one of the largest of motor vehicles. It is a Packard machine of three tons capacity. While only in use for a short time, the Dreer concern already has demonstrated that it is a great convenience, giving immediate and constant transportation facilities between the greenhouses and the store.

On the Road from Riverton to Philadelphia.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

DELIVERY METHODS.

Their Value as Advertising.

Just exactly what the advertising value of a good delivery wagon or auto is, it would be difficult to say, but it is considerable. I know of a city of 350,000 population where only one retail florist has his own delivery wagon and there is not a single automobile except such as are hired at busy times. Some of the delivery boys have motorcycles, but the majority of the delivering is done on bicycles or by using street cars. Funeral designs are sent out without boxes or covering of any sort, the boys pushing about during the rush hours through crowds of people and frequently damaging the work entrusted to them.

The Vehicle and Its Accompaniments.

Contrast this state of affairs with that obtaining in other cities, where a smart turnout, well horsed, or a fine automobile, in either case with a delivery boy in a natty uniform, is the rule rather than the exception. It is only reasonable to suppose that the first retailer in the former town to break away from the cheese-paring policy and put out something neat in the way of a delivery outfit is going to get a lot of credit and, incidentally, gather in a lot of the business of his benighted compeers. Every retailer worthy the name ought at least to have a good wagon, and if his business does not admit of his keeping a horse or team of horses, then let the vehicle be horsed from a livery.

The bicycle, useful as it is for many purposes, is surely not a good method of delivering flowers, while the motorcycle, unless attached to a covered carrier of some kind, is almost as bad. In either case the delivery boy picks up too much of the dust and grime of the streets to be at all presentable, either at the store or at the residence of the customer, and a slipshod, dirty appearance of the messenger boy gives patrons the idea that the store methods are also slipshod. On the other hand, a neat appearance gives the opposite impression, with results that may easily be foreseen.

A Record of Deliveries.

Besides the manner of the actual deliveries, the method of keeping the records varies widely. When sending out goods that are to be charged, there is nothing better than the threefold check books. These are numbered so that every invoice is easily located; they are written at the store and the delivery boy takes two of the three records or checks, one to be delivered to the customer, the other to be signed and returned. The stubs only are priced and these never leave the store, the bookkeeper using them for entering up the daybook. Even at the busiest times this system saves trouble and, if the boys are instructed to hand over their return checks every night, there can be no dispute by customers as to the delivery or non-delivery of an order.

Promptness in Delivery.

Promptness, it is hardly necessary to add, is one of the most important of all points in the delivery service. People generally are thoughtless about giving orders in time for any occasion. Telephones and department store methods have brought customers into so close a touch with the stores of all kinds that they include the florist among those that can be called upon at a moment's notice to give good service. And the up-to-date retailer must really foster this habit of his patrons. He can not help it if he is to hold the better class of trade. Still less can he afford to be behindhand after taking the order. Milady is often exceedingly impatient when anything affecting the toilet is concerned, and if that corsage bouquet is not on hand when wanted there is likely to be trouble for the florist. Funeral work, again, for obvious reasons, has to be handled with great dispatch; consequently one of the mottoes to be, figuratively, pasted in the hat of the successful retailer, is "Be on time."

THE CROSS OF VALLEY.

Charles A. Samuelson, the well known Michigan avenue retailer at Chicago, has made a number of casket crosses similar to the one shown in the accompanying illustration and in each case the design has met with general approbation. The base for the cross is a wire frame of the usual type, except that each one is made to order to fit the casket, exact measurements being taken by the wire worker. The cross is made the full length of the casket, and the full width. The frame is made with the ends of each of the four arms turned down at the bevel of the casket, so that the design fits perfectly and will not fall off, even with rather inexpert handling by the pall bearers. The back of the frame is protected with green cloth to prevent any scratching. The frame is filled with foil and moss and then is made solid with white carnations. Valley is stemmed without any foliage and set as solidly as it can be put in. In the cross photographed there were 3,500 spikes of valley. Mr. Samuelson received for the design $250. Other crosses have been made containing considerably more stock. For the funeral of the late Marshall Field Mr. Samuelson made one of these crosses containing 5,000 lilies of the valley, for which he is said to have received $500.

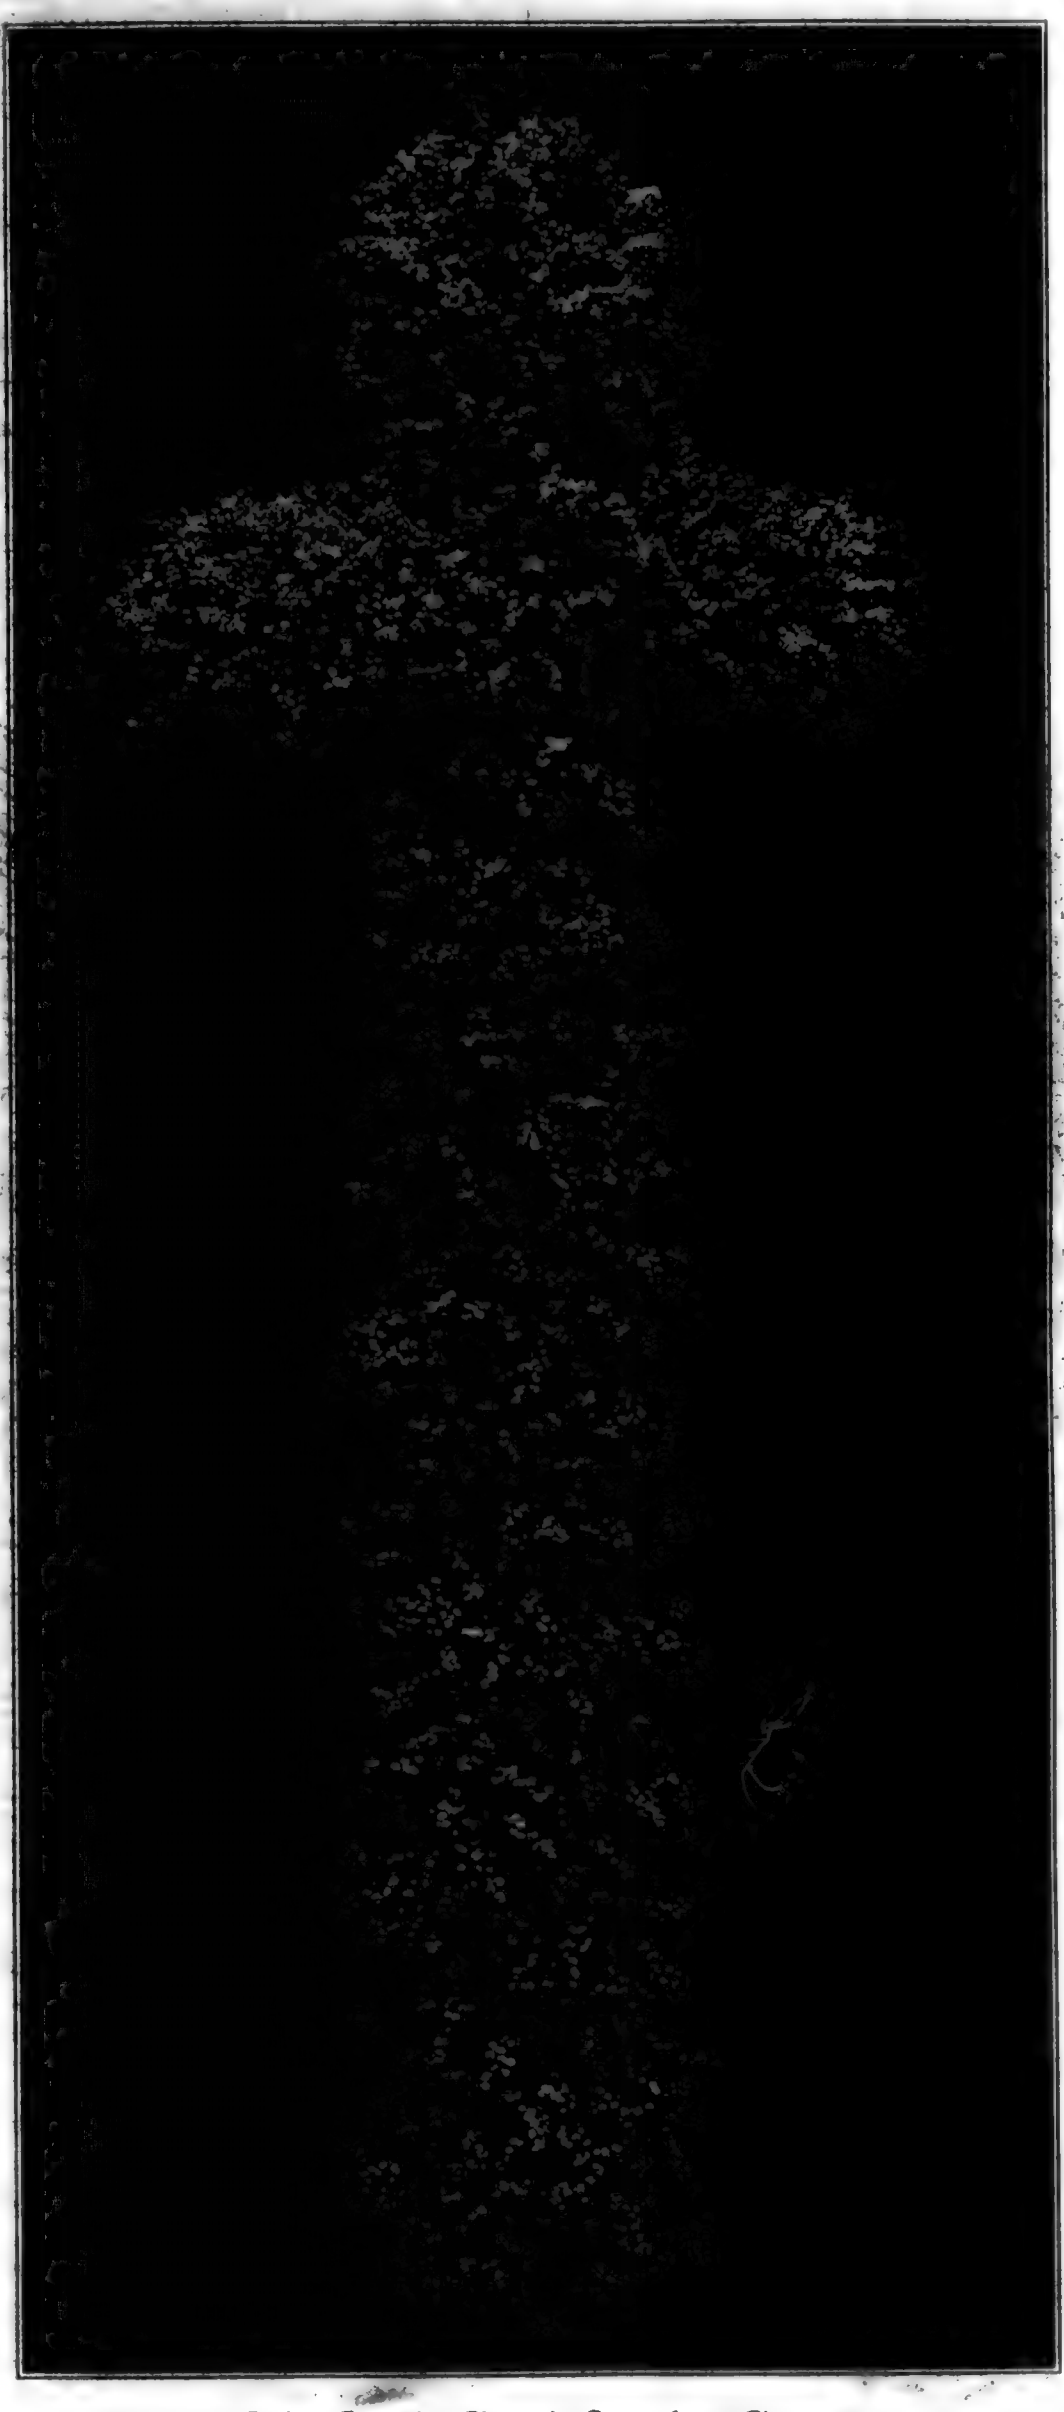
THE ASTER AND ITS CULTURE.

[A summary of a lecture by George Arnold, of Rochester, N. Y., delivered at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., in the Fifth Annual Farmers' Week, February 19 to 24, 1912.]

In the lecture on "The Aster and Its Culture," by George Arnold, farm superintendent for James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., the history of the aster in Europe and America, and the development of the different forms, was briefly given. The introduction of double, quilled and variegated flowers was noted, as well as that of dwarf and semi-dwarf plants. Attention was called to the fact that there are still being offered in European catalogues a proportionately large number of asters that are dwarf or semi-dwarf, with flowers that have petals that are either quilled or comparatively short, and in colors that are either variegated or of shades that are unsalable in America.

The importance of the aster in America as a commercial flower, Mr. Arnold said, began with the introduction, between 1890 and 1895, of Queen of the Market, Comet and Branching. These asters all have petals that are long, loosely and irregularly arranged, and the flowers, when not fully double, have the centers well covered. They are thus splendidly adapted to the florists' uses, and the American amateur is using practically the same varieties and the same range of colors as the professional grower. A number of the principal types of flowers were illustrated by lantern slides.



Soil and Cultivation.

Early asters were declared to be the most profitable if properly grown, but those present were warned that they must be prepared to give early sowing, early planting, rich soil and good cultivation. It was useless, said the speaker, to grow early asters if these conditions were not fulfilled.

The plants should be hardened so that they could be set out before hard frosts were past—in April for western New York.

The liberal use of quantities of stable manure was recommended for both early and late asters, either well rotted or applied the previous year. The market is always full of short-stemmed asters from land insufficiently fertilized and tilled.

The use of a covering of sand or Casket Cross by Chas. A. Samuelson, Chicago.

[The usual method of making a cross with valley is to stem the foliage with the flowers, setting not too thickly together, over a green base. In the cross illustrated just the opposite course is pursued—the frame is filled with white carnations as a base, on which the valley is set thickly, stemmed without the foliage, no green showing.]

sterile soil was recommended, when seed is to be sown under glass, as a preventive of damping off and of stem-rot. Investigations at the Massachusetts College of Agriculture, some years ago, showed that most of the destructive stem-rot in the field comes from a fungous infection in the seed bed. Keeping the surface dry, well stirred and aired was urged as the best preventive.

For the September market it was recommended that seed of late varieties be sown in frames about the first part of May, or in sandy soil outside from the middle to the last of April.

Diseases and Pests.

Passing to the troubles of the aster grower, lantern slide pictures were shown of plants affected by the yellow disease, and others showing injuries by the tarnished plant bug. No remedy has been found for the yellows. Maintaining a nearly uniform condition of soil moisture by thorough cultivation seems to be the best preventive. Amateurs having small plots that are subject to this disease were advised to try mulching the plants to preserve uniform moisture.

The wide-spread injury caused by the tarnished plant bug was declared to be commonly attributed to other causes. Attacking the tips of the branches, it causes the blasting of the terminal buds and the dwarfing of the plant. These bugs can not be poisoned. Spraying with Whale Oil soap or kerosene emulsion renders the plants distasteful for the time being. Growing in partial shade when possible was recommended, as these insects seldom work in the shade. A trial of cheesecloth shading was suggested, where the stunted growth caused by this plant bug was prevalent.

The question of growing asters for cut flowers on muck land was brought up and instances of successful trials were cited, a really remarkable growth having been obtained in some cases. The soiling of the flowers by the black dust in a dry time has proved an objection in some cases. If that could be overcome, there would appear to be great possibilities in the growing of this flower on muck land.

VARIETIES FOR A BEGINNER.

I intend to grow a few carnations next year, and, being a new hand at the business, I should like to ask which, in your estimation, are the best varieties of red, white and pink for a beginner to grow. F. W. B.

The Enchantress family does so universally well that I do not hesitate to advise you to plant them. In addition, I would recommend to you White Perfection, White Wonder, Gloriosa, Pink Delight, Winona, Dorothy Gordon and Beacon. All these are standard varieties and any one of them is likely to suit you better than anything else in the same line of color. Get some of each and then select those that suit you best. A. F. J. B.

PROBABLY THRIPS.

In a separate cover you will find a bloom of a Perfection carnation. It seems to be filled with small bugs, hardly visible. Please tell me the name of the pest, its cause and a remedy.
L. C.

The specimen forwarded was badly frozen and I was unable to find any insects in it. From your description, however, I am inclined to think that your plants are being attacked by thrips. Look for a crawling insect, about a sixteenth to an eighth of an inch long and as thick as a thread. The color is a yellowish brown, light or dark according to the age of the insect. Nicotine in the various forms of application is the most effective remedy for this pest. In the summer months you can use hydrocyanic acid gas with good effect, but it is dangerous to use this gas during the winter period, when firing must be attended to and the temperatures watched. I would advise you to wage a fierce warfare against this pest while the weather is still in your favor. After warm weather sets in you will find it uphill work to get rid of it. You can employ both the spraying and fumigating methods to advantage. A. F. J. B.

PLANTS HAVE TURNED YELLOW.

Can you tell me what might have caused my carnation plants to turn a pale yellow? The plants seem to grow and they even bloom quite well. My soil is two-thirds well rotted manure and one-third sandy loam. The color of the plants seems to indicate sour soil, but I have not found it so upon examination. I have used wood ashes and liquid manure, but quite sparingly.
M. N. A.

I would have to see a specimen of your plants before I could suggest the cause of the yellowness in them. It might be caused by too much manure, and again, it might be caused by stigmonose or something else. If you used two-thirds manure and one-third soil, you surely have too much manure, according to our way of preparing soil.
A. F. J. B.

FAIRY RING.

Will you please tell us what is the trouble with our carnation plants of the Boston Market variety? About one-fourth of the house is planted with these and the other three-fourths with Sangamo. All receive the same treatment and yet the Sangamo plants are as fine as can be. The plants were bought last November, and, although housed late, they took hold at once and began to grow and bloom by Christmas. They were fine field plants—that is, the Sangamo were—but the Boston Market were little plants from inside. Any information will be appreciated.
L. M. S. & C.

Your plants are afflicted with the dread disease called fairy ring. You will find this subject treated in The Review of February 8, page 16. I will merely add that if your plants are not too badly affected, you may be able to save them, as the weather from now on is likely to be in your favor. But go to work on them at once with all your might. A. F. J. B.

THIRTY PER CENT SPLIT.

Will you kindly give me any information you can as to the cause of the splitting of my carnations, a sample of which I am sending? Our method of culture has been as follows: The plants were benched in the second week in July, 1911, and all flowers were pinched off till September 1. The house is of recent construction, running north and south. By the middle of November the roots were showing on the surface, when a light top-dressing of decayed cow manure was given. Six weeks later, as the roots were again appearing, a watering of weak cow manure was given. As the stems showed weakness, a top-dressing of wood ashes was given January 25. Care has been taken in watering and ventilating. The night temperature has been 50 degrees, rising 10 to 15 degrees on bright days. On one occasion, in January, the temperature, owing to an unexpected frost, dropped to 35 degrees for an hour or so.

At present thirty per cent of the plants are splitting before opening, and the blooms and stems show weakness, while the plants otherwise are healthy. Our soil was stacked in the spring—four loads of loam to one of rotten cow manure. We were not bothered with stem-rot, except in the case of C. W. Ward. Has that variety a tendency to rot? Please give your opinion also on the sample of soil enclosed. O. A. H.

Neither your letter nor the specimens forwarded disclosed any reason why so large a percentage of the calyxes should split. Your treatment seems to be all right and the soil has the appearance of being about as good as anyone could wish for. That drop in the temperature last November ought not to have any effect this late. You understand, of course, that splitting is not always caused by variable temperature. During the short days of midwinter any check will manifest itself first in the splitting of the calyxes if a full crop is on. A strong dose of feed, or letting the soil dry out excessively and then flooding it, will have that effect. Taking off a large crop of cuttings will do the same. Hence one must be careful to avoid anything which might cause a sudden check or spurt in the growth during these winter days.

Varieties also differ greatly in this respect. Beacon is usually one of the worst offenders and I notice that most of the specimens forwarded were of that variety. Sometimes, however, we find a reversal of the reasonably expected, as in our experience with Beacon this season. We have a part of a bed, about 600 plants, planted to this variety. We let them come in with a midwinter crop of blooms, and they have been blooming since early December. About January 1 we went through them and robbed them of all the good cuttings they carried. This has been repeated every time a good crop came in sight. Inasmuch as Beacon has always heretofore split a considerable percentage of the calyxes with us during midwinter, we expected that they would nearly all do the same act under this treatment. To our great satisfaction and surprise, we have this winter cut a smaller percentage of splits from these plants than we ever did from Beacon in other years—less, even, than we have from Enchantress. I merely cite this instance to show that a case of splitting can be brought on easily and the grower frequently finds it difficult to explain the reason.

A BIG CARNATION HOUSE.

W. G. Dobbs, of the firm of Dobbs & Son, at Auburn, N. Y., has been trying his skill in the operation of a revolving-lens camera, and as a result he has pictures of the Dobbs establishment from various points of view. Two of the photographs are here reproduced. One of them shows part of the range of houses, with the big new carnation house in the foreground; the other shows the interior of the same carnation house.

This house was built by the Geo. M. Garland Co., of Des Plaines, Ill. It is 42x250 and is said to be one of the finest greenhouses in the state. Especially noteworthy is the fact that a house forty-two feet wide can be built without posts or supports of any kind. Truss construction accomplishes this, and Mr. Dobbs says he believes the houses thus built are as strong as those on posts. If this is true, it is certain that much less shade is cast, and with sunlight at a premium, as it is during the winter, the truss method naturally holds great interest for the grower. The sides of the house are built of pressed concrete blocks, with rock face, and the offices, boiler rooms, stacks, etc., all have the same finish. There are ten beds in the house, each 6 x 120 feet and six inches deep, and all of concrete construction. The posts, sides and bottoms were poured in one continuous mass. These beds are all planted with carnations—about 13,500 plants. The boiler room and coal cellars are all fireproof, being entirely of concrete; even the roofs are concrete, with expanded metal reinforcing.

Dobbs & Son state that they are thinking seriously of incorporating during this coming season, as they believe that a corporation has many advantages for the transaction of a business of any size.

EUROPEAN NOTES.

Hayward Mathias, Lucerne, Stubbington, England, one of the founders and the first secretary of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society, died suddenly from heart failure, February 10. His end was not unexpected, as he had been in failing health for a year and had resigned his secretarial duties on that account. By all who knew him he was held in the highest esteem for his unfailing courtesy and devotion to his duties.

Carnation British Triumph, raised by C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, has received an award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society.

The total membership of the Royal Horticultural Society, England, December 31, 1911, was 12,839, an increase of 796 as compared with the same date in 1910. The subscriptions paid amounted to £17,965. The annual meeting of the National Chrysanthemum Society showed a year of good progress also.

The annual trip and congress of the Federation of French Nurserymen, recently referred to in The Review, passed off with great eclat. For nine days at the end of January the French nurserymen made merry under the azure skies of southern France and Italy, while Europe generally was shivering in sleet and rain. They discussed railway freights, the export flower trade and other subjects pertaining to their calling. They were in a joyous mood and introduced much humor into their discussions. But Frenchmen are always vivacious, and their confreres in the south entertained them with vins d'honneur, aperitifs d'honneur, champagne d'honneur and banquets amid the palm groves of Hyeres, the mimosa, rose and carnation plains of Cannes and Nice. So there is excuse for their joviality, and—tell it not in Gath!—the Casino of Monte Carlo had attractions for a few after the strenuous discussions on railway freights, etc. There is an enormous acreage devoted to flower growing around Cannes and Nice, and visitors saw the fields in the zenith of their flowering season. FORWARDERS ARE FINED.

At New York last week three Chicago forwarding agents were fined on a charge of false representation of contents of packages delivered to the Baltimore & Ohio railroad for transportation in interstate commerce.

One of the men fined, $100, was August Bontoux, president of the International Forwarding Co., which concern handles large quantities of bulbs, nursery stock and other imports for florists all over the country. Mr. Bontoux was charged with having shipped 8,500 pounds of natural flowers, or immortelles, as millinery goods not otherwise specified, at a rate of 75 cents per hundred pounds, whereas the regular prescribed rate on natural flowers is $1.50 per hundred pounds. Another of those in the case was Oscar Kosche, proprietor of C. D. Stone & Co., who handled some horticultural business, but the importation on which he got into trouble was for another line.

STATE FLORISTS' ASSOCIATION.

President Washburn's Appeal.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will hold its seventh annual meeting in Joliet, March 5 and 6. This is a call to every florist in the state to come to this meeting. We need you to help the good cause of the florists' trade and you not only need us but can see what the association has done and will do for you. The florists' industry is growing rapidly and has various needs, such as the standardization of grades, both of flowers and plants, which should be made uniform all over the state. There is also a universal demand that introducers of new varieties should not only show these varieties to the florists but should explain their methods of culture and give the average number of blooms that can be cut from a plant under ordinary conditions. We need some uniform methods of determining the values of new varieties. Take, for instance, this new rose, Sunburst. E. G. Hill has promised to come to our meeting and give us some facts regarding it. These are what we want to know.

The association assisted materially in getting the express rates reduced and stands ready to join with the other mercantile associations in the state in protecting our trade from unreasonable rules or rates.

Our association is recognized by the other trade associations as being an important factor in the general business of the state. This puts all florists on a good commercial basis and helps advertise the business as an important and prominent industry. Now, don't stand back and let some brother florist do your share as well as his own in looking after the interests of such a business, but come on along and help all you can. Bring a small exhibit if possible. The dues are only $1 per year. Illinois expects every florist to do his duty and attend this convention.

C. L. Washburn, President.

Arrangements at Joliet.

Arrangements have been made for holding the business sessions of the Illinois State Florists' Association at the Hotel Monroe, which will be headquarters. Just down the street is the Sweet-Orr building, and here the exhibition will be staged. Peter Olsem is chairman of the exhibition committee, and from information already in hand it is expected that the display will exceed in size anything in the previous history of the society. No charge is made to exhibitors of greenhouse products, but a charge for space is being made to help meet expenses in the case of displays of florists' supplies and advertising banners.

The attendance is expected to be large and representative of the entire state. A large party will attend from Chicago, leaving Chicago at 11:45 Tuesday morning, March 5. For those who cannot attend the opening day, but who can attend the second day, a train leaves Chicago at 8:30 a. m., reaching Joliet at 9:40. The visitors will be escorted to the state penitentiary at 10 a. m.

The program is as follows:

TUESDAY, MARCH 5.

Afternoon Session, 2 P. M.

Introductory Remarks—W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park.
Address of Welcome—Hon. Edmund A. Allen, Mayor of Joliet.
Response—George Asmus, Chicago.
President's Address—C. L. Washburn, Hinsdale.
Report of Secretary—J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville.
Report of Treasurer—F. L. Washburn, Bloomington.
Report of Advisory Committee, Illinois Floriculture Experimental Station—W. N. Rudd, secretary, Morgan Park.

Evening Session, 7:30 P. M.

Report on the Work at the Experimental Station—H. B. Dorner, Urbana.
Unfinished Business.
New Business.
Question Box.
Nomination and Election of Officers.
Adjournment.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 6.

In the hands of Joliet florists.
Trip through the penitentiary.
Luncheon at noon at the greenhouses of the Chicago Carnation Co.

THE NEW YORK FEDERATION.

Answering the call of the New York Florists' Club, the delegates appointed by the different clubs and societies of the state of New York assembled at Cornell University, Ithaca, Friday, February 23, and organized the New York State Federation of Florists' Clubs.

There were present Wm. F. Kasting and W. A. Adams, Buffalo; George Arnold, E. R. Fry and W. T. Logan, Rochester; C. B. Weathered and John Young, New York; Dr. E. A. Bates and George E. Thorp, Syracuse; Arthur Cowee, Berlin, and T. S. Hendrickson, Floral Park. The meeting was called to order by Charles B. Weathered, who read the call. Wm. F. Kasting was made temporary chairman, and John Young temporary secretary. Prof. L. H. Bailey gave a brilliant address on the necessity of organizing the floricultural interests of the state, and outlined what other lines were doing. Mr. Kasting also gave an interesting talk and urged the members to so organize that they would not only be in a position to ask for state aid, but be in a position to demand it. Upon motion of Arthur Cowee, it was decided to form the state organization. A constitution and by-laws were adopted and the following officers then were elected:

President—William F. Kasting, Buffalo.

Vice-presidents—Dr. E. A. Bates, Syracuse; Charles B. Weathered, New York City; E. R. Fry, Rochester.

Secretary—John Young, New York City.

Treasurer—W. A. Adams, Buffalo, N. Y.

Executive Committee—Prof. A. C. Beal, Ithaca; George Arnold, Rochester.

President Kasting appointed the following committees:

Legislative—F. R. Pierson, chairman, Tarrytown; Wm. T. Logan, Rochester; S. A. Anderson, Buffalo; Charles B. Weathered and John Young, New York City.

State Fair—George E. Thorp, chairman, Syracuse; Wing R. Smith, Syracuse; A. Cowee, Berlin; Frank H. Traendly, New York; F. A. Danker, Albany.

Resolutions were adopted pledging the support of the organization to secure a state appropriation of $75,000 for a Horticulture building in Syracuse, and to support the bill introduced in assembly by Mr. Wende to secure an appropriation of $50,000 for erecting greenhouses for experimental work in floriculture at Cornell University.

The next meeting, which will be the annual one, will be held at Syracuse in September, at the time of the state fair.

Constitution and By-Laws.

The following is the constitution and by-laws adopted:

Name. New York State Federation of Floral Clubs.

Object. The objects of this Federation are to promote in all possible ways the art of floriculture, ornamental horticulture, and gardening under glass, including educational and civic improvement benefits arising therefrom, among the people of the state of New York.

Membership. Club memberships only shall be held. These memberships shall consist of delegates appointed or elected by the various floral clubs of the state. Each club shall have the right to appoint or elect one delegate for each twenty-five members in good standing. Each club shall be represented by at least one member. Whenever possible a club shall be represented by two or more members, according to the size of the club.

Officers. The Federation shall elect at the annual meeting a president, three vice-presidents, a secretary, treasurer and an executive committee of five persons, three of whom shall be the president, secretary, and treasurer.

Elections. Nominations for the different officers shall be made from the floor, and elections shall be made by ballot by a majority vote of the accredited delegates. A quorum shall consist of the majority of the delegates present from each of the floral clubs. A majority of the members of the executive committee shall constitute a quorum of that body.

Meetings. An annual meeting shall be held at Syracuse during state fair week and a regular meeting at New York State College of Agriculture during farmers' week. Other meetings may be called by the president or executive committee when deemed necessary.

Fees. A membership fee of $5 for each club and 5 cents per capita for every member over 100 shall be payable to the secretary-treasurer January 1 of each year.

The income of the association shall be used for printing and postage expenses, for expenses of legislative committee, but shall not be used to pay expenses of delegates in attendance at annual or special meetings.

Committees. The president shall appoint standing or special committees when necessary. The following standing committees are recommended: Legislative Committee, Committee on Coöperation with Department of Horticulture, New York State College of Agriculture, Committee on Transportation and Publication, Committee on State Fair.

The Federation shall publish a brief report at the close of each year, reciting its activities for that period and outlining a program of work as far as possible for the incoming year.

This constitution may be amended at the annual meeting by a vote of two-thirds of the members present, provided notice of such proposed amendment shall have been given at least thirty days prior to the meeting.

WHO GETS TRADE PRICES?

I, for one, am glad to see W. W. Wilmore bring up the question: "Who Gets Trade Prices?" Our answer to this is: "Those who are making the growing and selling of flowers and bulbs a business." How is the local florist to make the business pay if the trade is going to give wholesale prices to amateurs who buy in large quantities? Then there is the fellow who makes a sideline of the business and,

Isaac S. Hendrickson.
(President American Gladiolus Society.)

when he can not get florists' prices, takes a spite at the florist who can, and sells for any old price, which, of course, hurts the local trade. We have had experience in this line and know.

The other florists in our locality, having specialties in other lines, have the same trouble. People who are not in the trade seem to have no difficulty in getting wholesale prices, and at the prices for which the goods are sometimes sold we wonder if they are ever paid for. The wholesale man has to dispose of the greater part of his output to the retail florist and he should protect him by making sure the party is in the trade before giving wholesale prices. FLOWERS AS A FIELD CROP.

[A paper by I. S. Hendrickson, of Flowerfield, N. Y., read at the New York State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y., in the Fifth Annual Farmers' Week, February 19 to 24, 1912.]

It seems to me that, as the general public begins to awaken to the real love and taste for flowers, particularly those grown outdoors, there will be presented to the fruit and vegetable farmer, or anyone cultivating the land, one of the greatest opportunities for increasing his income that one could imagine. While at the present time we are too dependent on certain markets to justify every farmer or fruit grower in going into the growing of flowers for profit, yet I believe the time is coming when conditions will change, and it will be the expected and common thing to see a flower section on every farm. This condition will be hastened when the housewife looks upon flowers as a necessity, or at least an important part of the home decoration. There are some sections of Europe where this condition prevails, and as the marketing is done each day a bunch of flowers for the table, or other decoration, is included, just the same as vegetables, fruits, etc.

While there are many flowers that can be grown for cut flower purposes with profit, we want to deal in this paper particularly with peonies and gladioli. One advantage of these two flowers is that we can get returns at both ends; that is, from both the roots and blossoms.

The Gladiolus.

First we take up the gladiolus. The popularity of this flower has increased amazingly during the last five years, and it is no wonder when we consider the wonderful beauty of the newer varieties, and the many good qualities of this king of summer flowering bulbs. When we also take into consideration the possibilities of developing its popularity by judicious advertising and exhibits, it presents one of the best propositions as a side crop for the farmer for several reasons. Among these reasons is its ease of culture. There is no flower grown that will thrive and do well under nearly all conditions as will this flower. While it enjoys special care in the way of good soil, yet it will give splendid returns and do the best it can under ordinary conditions and in ordinary soil.

Again, the bulbs are easy to care for over winter. Of course they are not hardy, so must be taken up before freezing in the fall and stored in some frost-proof place. If they are put into trays and stacked up so that a circulation of air can reach them, they will keep in good condition until planting time in the spring. The blooms are easy to handle and make one of the best flowers to ship, as they have considerable substance in the stalks, and even after a trip of two or three days they will freshen up soon after being put in water. The lasting quality of the flowers is another point in their favor, as a spike will last in fairly good condition from one to two weeks, if the water is renewed every two or three days and old flowers are removed and part of the stem cut off.

Varieties of Gladioli.

As to varieties, while the gladiolus enthusiast will enjoy testing every variety put on the market, I believe that when it comes to growing for commercial purposes it is much better to confine ourselves to a few varieties. The important part is to have the main crop in the principal colors, such as light and dark pink, a good red, and a white or light colored variety. There is occasionally a call for yellows and other combinations of colors, but what is true of roses, carnations, etc., is true of the gladiolus; that is to say, what is most generally wanted is solid colors confined to a few varieties. As has been stated before, if the gladiolus crop is handled properly there is a good return for labor and trouble, as the sale of flowers will usually pay the expense of cultivation and more, and if such varieties as America, Augusta, May, Brenchleyensis, Shakespeare, etc., are grown, there is always a good market for the bulbs at a good profit, as you would sell the large bulbs that have bloomed and save the bulblets that form around the base of the old bulbs. These are sown in much the same way as garden peas in the spring, and during the summer they will make growth to the size of hazelnuts or larger. They are then lifted in the fall, and in the following spring they are again sown like garden peas, but not quite so thickly as the first year. They will make considerable growth during this second season and a large number of them will run from one-half to one and one-fourth inches, and a small percentage larger. These are usually sorted out and graded into different sizes and in the following spring are set up in straight rows, some two, some three and some four in the furrow, about four inches apart, and are covered three or four inches with soil. They will then give you their flowers during the summer and salable bulbs in the fall.

Another great advantage in the gladiolus is the length of its blooming season, as by early and late planting we can have the bloom from July to October. It is a good plan, and can be carried out successfully, to divide your bulbs into three or more lots and plant them ten days or two weeks apart. They can be planted as early as the ground can be worked and as late as July 1, provided you store the bulbs in a cool, dry place to keep them from starting.

Planting Gladiolus Bulbs.

In growing gladioli commercially I believe the best way to handle them is to plow the ground in the fall and again in the spring, in order to pulverize the soil just as much as possible. Then, if enough are to be planted so that it would pay to work a horse, the furrows should be three feet apart. When the furrow is open it is a good plan to go through with some sort of leveler, to pulverize the soil still further and to get a good, even surface. The bulbs are then planted similarly to onions. If they are planted in quantity, it is advisable to cover about five inches deep in the first instance, and after the bulbs have been planted about ten days or two weeks the weeder can be used, which will accomplish two things; namely, it will break up the surface and destroy all young weeds and will level down some of the soil, which after three or four weedings will be reduced at least one inch from the original ridge.

There is just one drawback that I see in the growing of gladoli for cut flower purposes, and this is not really serious. The bulk of the growers usually come in crop during the month of August, when, if we are depending on the city trade, the prices are likely to be at a low ebb, as the flower-buying population is usually away from the city, but if we can get in touch with the large summer resorts, there is a chance of supplying the blooms for the decoration of hotel dining rooms, etc., and they are fast becoming popular for these purposes. While we can never get a fancy price in the summer for field flowers, we have a condition which offsets it, and that is that we are not bothered with the constant care of a greenhouse, which needs watching night and day, to say nothing of the enormous coal bills that are to be met.

The Profits from Gladioli.

As to the prices we can expect for the flowers, this will vary in different parts of the country; for instance, during the month of August in the city of New York the flowers bring about 50 cents to $1 per hundred, but the early ones that reach market in July and the late ones that reach there in September bring as high as 75 cents and $1 per dozen. Prices in Pittsburgh and Chicago usually run somewhat higher. The bulbs of the standard commercial varieties sell at wholesale all the way from $10 per thousand up to $50 per thousand. Some fancy varieties are usually quite valuable, owing to the limited quantity of stock, and it is possible to get excellent prices from enthusiastic amateurs, even as high as $25 per bulb in some cases. Of course, this is the exception, but there are a good many varieties that sell every year as high as $15 to $30 per hundred. It is usually the case, however, that the high priced, fine varieties are slow propagators, so that it is impossible to get a large stock. It is possible to grow 40,000 or 50,000 large bulbs to the acre.

On the face of it, this may seem a large return, but we must remember that we are obliged to spread our account over three years, because it practically takes three years to get a salable bulb from the bulblet, and the expense of cultivation and care of gladiolus bulbs is somewhat greater than of ordinary farm crops.

As suggested before, gladioli are among the easiest flowers to ship. I have known a shipment to be packed up on Saturday morning and shipped by express to a distant city, and when they were opened on Monday afternoon and put into water they revived splendidly, keeping in good condition for exhibition purposes during the entire week, and this was in the warm month of August.

Peonies.

Now a word as to peonies. Where is there a person who does not experience a thrill of joy when this noble flower is mentioned? When you show me such a person, I will show you one that is not familiar with the peony of today. They are such gems of beauty! How I should like to be able to express in words just what I feel when I think of them! And I believe that when they are generally known they will be grown extensively. To be sure, harvesting the flowers of peonies is hard work, as their season lasts only about three weeks. The work usually comes fast and thick during that time, if we expect to realize on all of the blooms.

Peonies have an advantage over gladioli in that they are perfectly hardy in almost any part of the country and do not have to be lifted and planted each year. In fact, to get the best results it is necessary to leave them undisturbed for at least three years; they can even be left six to ten years without any disadvantage, and they will increase in size of bloom and plant each year. Therefore the return from the flowers will be greater each year, and when you come to lift the plants for dividing there will be a splendid increase, as the clumps can be cut up into divisions containing two or three eyes each. No flower loves care and attention as does the peony, and the more we feed it and cultivate it, the more it will respond to our care.

Ptychosperma Elegans.

Planting Peonies.

The planting should be done with the greatest care and it is not enough simply to dig a hole and drop in the root, but the ground should be thoroughly prepared if one expects to realize the highest quality in the flowers, as well as the highest prices. If you are planning to grow peonies, it will pay to select your ground at least a year in advance and begin to prepare it by enriching the soil with a liberal quantity of well rotted manure, plowing this under to allow it to become incorporated with the soil. The roots should be planted in furrows at least four feet apart and the plants should be three feet apart in the rows. By giving them this space you will be enabled to cultivate them thoroughly, and they will not need to be moved for four or five years or more.

The best time to plant peonies is during the months of September and October, as they are dormant at that time and stand transplanting better than at any other time of the year. The eyes usually make so early a start in the spring that it is with indifferent success that they can be planted at that time, and if they are planted in September under good conditions they will give some flowers the first year.

The Returns from Peonies.

To realize the best prices for the flowers we ought to get the earliest varieties, as they are recognized as the principal flowers for Decoration day trade, and if we can be fortunate enough to have them in bloom on that day we can realize good prices. It is better to have a few standard varieties than a large number, and the following list can be depended on:

White—Festiva Maxima, that glorious white, with just a dash of crimson in the center; Couronne d'Or, Duchesse de Nemours, Mme. de Verneville and Queen Victoria. Pink—Edulis Superba, Lady Bramwell, Livingstone and M. Jules Elie, claimed by some to be the finest of its color in size and form. Red—Adolph Rousseau, Felix Crousse and Officinalis Rubra.

Everything about the flower business is not rosy, as flowers, if anything, are more perishable than fruit and vegetables, and much depends on cutting at the proper time, even to a day. While some use is made of cold storage facilities, it is only on occasions that it works out well to put them in storage, for while they can be kept in fair condition while in storage, they go down fast when taken out and it is far better to handle them as fresh flowers.

Another point in favor of gladioli and peonies from the fruit grower's standpoint is that they fit in well as to seasons of blooming. The flowers of the peonies come usually ahead of strawberries, and gladioli come ahead of peaches, or will if planted early enough, which is quite possible and desirable, both from the standpoint of better prices and getting them out of the way of other crops.

PALMS AT LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The accompanying illustrations will give eastern readers a good idea of the tropical growth of palms and other plants in the favored clime of southern California. The specimen of Jubæa spectabilis is growing at the Homer Laughlin home at Los Angeles, and, while it might not be safe to say that it is the finest specimen growing outside in the United States, there certainly are few, if any, to beat it. J. spectabilis is a native of Chile and is said to grow farther south than any other American palm.

Ptychosperma elegans is perhaps better known to the trade as Seaforthia elegans and is of Australasian origin. It makes a handsome palm outdoors at Los Angeles, thriving best in partial shade, though the plant illustrated holds its foliage and color well and is growing in the full sun.

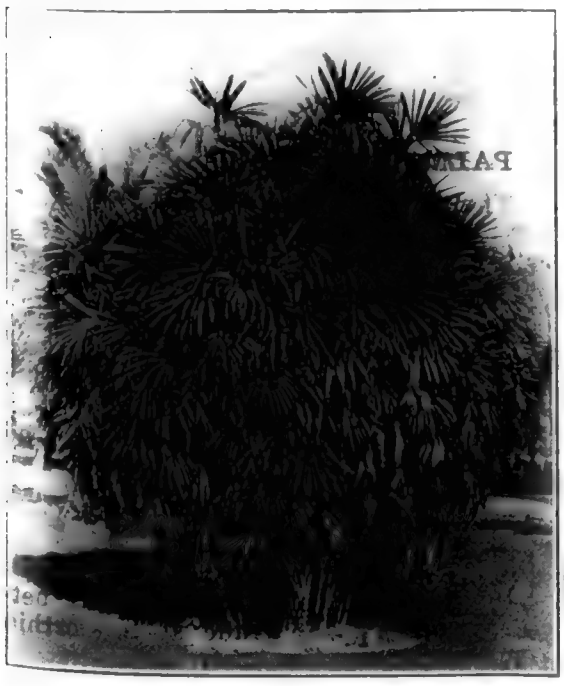
The plant of Phœnix Canariensis is not growing at Los Angeles, but a few miles distant, at Pasadena. As will be noted, the plant is finely developed, having held its fronds for a number of years. It is a quick growing, robust palm, needing ample room for its full development.

Rhapis flabelliformis is another beautiful palm when well grown, and one that is not as much grown as it deserves to be.

LILY FOLIAGE BROWN AT TIPS.

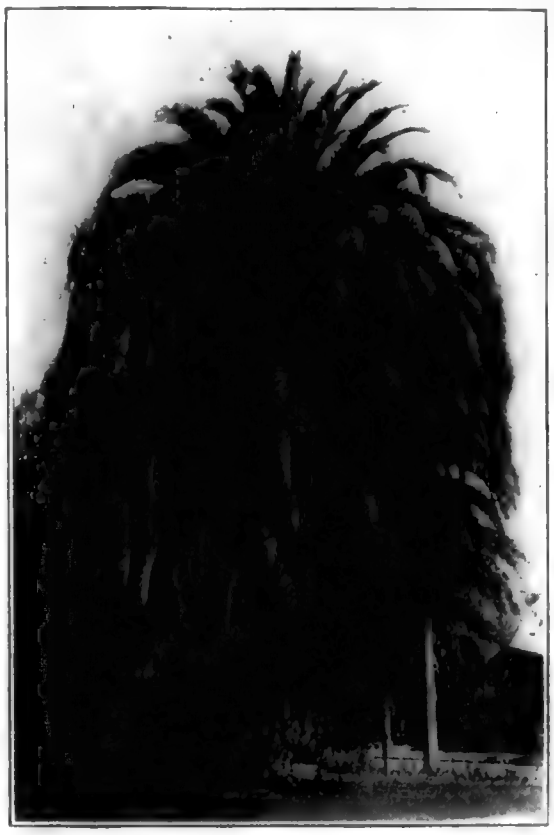


Can you tell us what makes the ends of the leaves on lily plants turn brown?
K. B. F. C.

There are two or three possible causes for the foliage on your lilies turning brown at the tips. If they are standing too close together and are hosed quite freely, an excess of moisture may start it. Overdoses of stimulants, particularly those of a chemical nature, may produce a like result. Strong fumigations are another cause. None of these may meet your case, but if you can give the plants a night temperature of 60 degrees, water freely and care for them well the trouble should practically disappear, although occasional plants may continue to develop it, especially if they are kept too wet at the root. C. W.

TREATMENT OF CANDYTUFT.

I have a batch of candytuft just nicely out of the soil. At what time can I expect them to bloom, and at what temperature shall I keep them? Which would be better, to transplant into flats or into pots before putting them in the bench? How much space will each plant require in the bench?
W. D. H.



Candytuft is in great demand at Memorial day. Your plants are just a little late for that date, but it will pay to give them a little extra care. Pot off singly. When they are nicely established and before they become too much potbound, plant them out in beds or benches in rows twelve inches apart, allowing six or seven inches between the plants. The soil must be well enriched and such as you would use for carnations or chrysanthemums. Give them a temperature of 45 degrees at night. Raise this to 48 or 50 degrees as they advance, running them a trifle cooler as the flowers open. C. W.

Rhapis Flabelliformis.

ADIANTUMS.

Where adiantums have been resting for a few weeks they can now be overhauled and, where necessary, repotted. Large sized plants will carry for several years in the same pots if occasionally fed with liquid manure, but smaller sizes are liable to become starved if not shifted, and furthermore there is more or less danger of their drying out and losing much of their foliage. One severe drying off is generally sufficient to ruin the appearance of an adiantum, and this is most liable to occur with the smaller plants. Large plants can be divided, but these divided portions do not give as satisfactory returns as younger plants potted on. While the adiantums take kindly to soil containing considerable leaf-mold, and this is particularly good for young stock, larger plants want something heavier, and good pasture loam, with some thoroughly decomposed manure added and a good dash of sand, will grow excellent plants. Bone and chemical fertilizers are better not used in the soil, although a little Clay's or Bon Arbor in the water during the growing season is excellent for them. A. cuneatum, while still the species mostly grown, is not equal to A. Croweanum commercially. The growths of the latter are tougher and keep much better out of water.

Phoenix Canariensis.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

With conditions favorable, how long should Primula obconica continue flowering? We have some that began flowering about January 10. We should like to hold some of them until Easter if this can be successfully done. They are in 5-inch and 6-inch pots and are well flowered. We are giving them liquid cow manure every week or ten days. They have a nice head of flowers, with spikes in all stages of growth.
T. S. M.

This primrose is persistent-flowering and will easily last until Easter in a cool house. In fact, it will bloom until June if wanted. Keep the faded flowers and seeds removed and continue to feed with cow manure as you are doing?
C. W.

Jubaea Spectabilis.

EFFECT OF SULPHUR IN WATER.

We are in need of information regarding the use of water from a sulphur water well, for irrigation. What effect will it have on flowering plants, such as sweet peas and asters, and what effect on the soil? We thought that perhaps some of the readers of The Review might have had experience along this line. We have a sulphur water well which will furnish all the supply we shall need and there is no other water available. D. R. W.

So far as the sulphur water is concerned, whether it will injure plants will depend upon the amount of sulphur and the form in which it is found. A small amount of sulphur would not be injurious and might be helpful, as it is a splendid fungicide. The trouble is more likely to come from various alkalis which are often associated with the sulphur in the water, but, as they are odorless, their presence is not suspected. If they are present in considerable quantities the water would not be fit for greenhouse use. The best way to determine whether or not it can be used with safety is to try it for watering a few plants and at the same time water the same number of other plants with water which is known to be free from sulphur and alkalis of all kinds.

Large plants can be divided, but these divided portions do not give as satisfactory returns as younger plants potted on. While the adiantums take kindly to soil containing considerable leaf-mold, and this is particularly good for young stock, larger plants want something heavier, and good pasture loam, with some thoroughly decomposed manure added and a good dash of sand, will grow excellent plants. Bone and chemical fertilizers are better not used in the soil, although a little Clay's or Bon Arbor in the water during the growing season is excellent for them. A. cuneatum, while still the species mostly grown, is not equal to A. Croweanum commercially. The growths of the latter are tougher and keep much better out of water.

Phoenix Canariensis.

PRIMULA OBCONICA.

With conditions favorable, how long should Primula obconica continue flowering? We have some that began flowering about January 10. We should like to hold some of them until Easter if this can be successfully done. They are in 5-inch and 6-inch pots and are well flowered. We are giving them liquid cow manure every week or ten days. They have a nice head of flowers, with spikes in all stages of growth.
T. S. M.

Jubaea Spectabilis.

This primrose is persistent-flowering and will easily last until Easter in a cool house. In fact, it will bloom until June if wanted. Keep the faded flowers and seeds removed and continue to feed with cow manure as you are doing?
C. W.

EFFECT OF SULPHUR IN WATER.

We are in need of information regarding the use of water from a sulphur water well, for irrigation. What effect will it have on flowering plants, such as sweet peas and asters, and what effect on the soil? We thought that perhaps some of the readers of The Review might have had experience along this line. We have a sulphur water well which will furnish all the supply we shall need and there is no other water available. D. R. W.

So far as the sulphur water is concerned, whether it will injure plants will depend upon the amount of sulphur and the form in which it is found. A small amount of sulphur would not be injurious and might be helpful, as it is a splendid fungicide. The trouble is more likely to come from various alkalis which are often associated with the sulphur in the water, but, as they are odorless, their presence is not suspected. If they are present in considerable quantities the water would not be fit for greenhouse use. The best way to determine whether or not it can be used with safety is to try it for watering a few plants and at the same time water the same number of other plants with water which is known to be free from sulphur and alkalis of all kinds.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

At the end of February, if lilies are not showing their buds, they are late and to get them in flower for Easter they must have a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees at night and be frequently sprayed. It will pay to do this forcing now, for it is well to remember that lilies are little in demand after Easter and fetch only low prices. Watering once a week with weak nitrate of soda water also has a tendency to forward these laggards. Plants with buds prominently showing will be all right in an average night temperature of 55 degrees. Where the buds are already hanging down a colder house is necessary, but do not move from a high temperature house directly to a cold one or many buds will be destroyed; place in an intermediate temperature for a few days first.

Ampelopsis Veitchii.

There is always more or less call for Ampelopsis Veitchii. This popular hardy climber is the best clinging vine that we have for covering stone, brick or woodwork. If a good stock is wanted sow seeds now; they are not long in germinating. Pot them off singly later and gradually harden off. If plunged over the pots outdoors, they will make considerable growth the first season if afforded some water during dry weather. An easier plan, of course, is to plant out the seedlings. This causes a stronger growth, but such plants are not so good for your customers as those from pots.

Feverfew.

Feverfew is a useful crop for Memorial day. It is not in much demand at any other season, but the flowers stand shipment well and although the odor is not specially agreeable, it is always in great request for bouquet work. The earlier the plants are got into the bench the better the crop will be. Give a generous compost such as would produce good mums or roses and the feverfew will revel in it.

Cinerarias for Easter.

While Easter comes moderately early this season, it is a little late for cinerarias, but if a cool house is at disposal, with the glass well shaded, the plants can be held back nicely. The night temperature can go down to 38 degrees or 40 degrees, or, in fact, anywhere not down to actual freezing, without injuring them. There are some other plants, among which Primula obconica is quite important, which can be kept in good condition for the coming Easter if grown cool, airy and well shaded.

Seedling Primulas.

As soon as the seedlings of P. obconica, Sinensis, and the various other primroses have made their second leaves, and before they can crowd each other, transplant them into shallow flats of light soil, the major part of which is leaf mold with some sand. Shade them for a few days, then gradually expose them to the sun. They do not require a warm house; 50 degrees at night is sufficiently warm.

Fancy Caladiums.

The tubers of fancy-leaved caladiums can now be shaken out and started in flats of sand in a warm, moist house. Be careful to water the tubers only moderately or they will decay. Pot them up before root and leaf growth becomes too advanced. A mixture of equal parts fibrous loam and peat, with some old cow manure and coarse sand added, makes a good potting medium for these colored caladiums.

Hydrangeas.

In order to increase the stock of hydrangeas and produce strong plants for next fall, insert a good batch of cuttings now, selecting the non-flowering shoots. These will root in about a month, when they can be potted off. Kept growing along in pots outdoors through the summer or planted out in May, they will make fine stock for next fall.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Vegetable Seedlings.

Many florists do a considerable business on various vegetable plants, generally growing them in small flats containing twelve or twenty-four plants each, of tomatoes, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, egg plant, pepper or celery. It is a little early to sow all of these plants yet, but celery, cabbage and lettuce can be started at once, while tomatoes and egg plants are better sown a little later. All these grow best in a light and moderately rich soil.

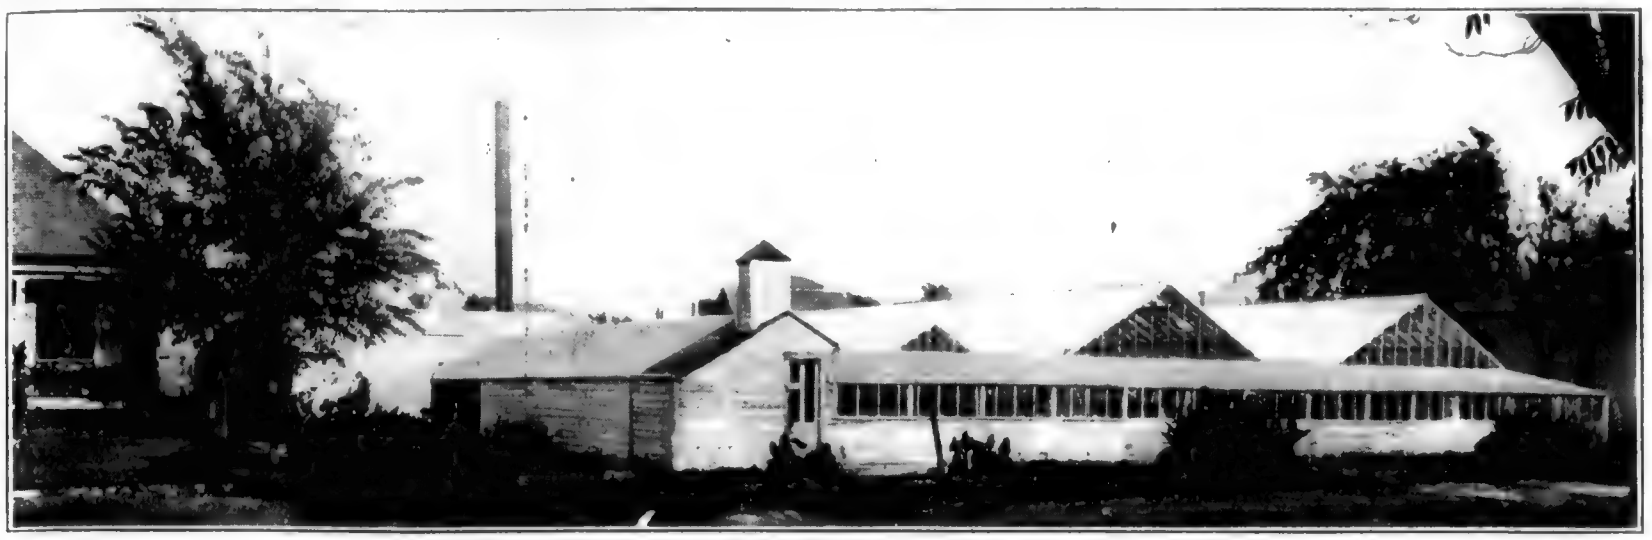
Foliage Plants.

March is an excellent month in which to do any necessary overhauling among the pandanus, crotons, dracænas, marantas and other foliage plants. The bulk of these plants need an annual potting or surface dressing. Nearly all do well in a compost containing some fern fiber or peat in addition to loam, but this is not really necessary. Marantas like some peat, as do anthuriums such as Andreanum and colored varieties like Veitchii, but crotons and dracænas do well in pure loam with a little old manure and sand added. Frequently plants can be shaken out of their pots, have their bulbs picked over, fresh drainage be given them and some new surface soil and the same pots will carry them for another year.

The young stock rooted during the present winter should have a bench where they will get the benefit of some bottom heat and be kept freely syringed. It is astonishing how quickly they fill the pots with roots in a warm, moist, genial atmosphere. It will be necessary to give a light shading to some of the colored-leaved foliage plants now, to prevent scorching. Be sure to make it light, however, as we are still likely to get considerable dark and gloomy weather.

Miscellaneous.

Now is the time to prepare a goodly supply of flats for seed sowing and transplanting seedlings in. Do not wait until the plants are ready for the flats and discover that you have forgotten to stock up on them. Also see that a necessary supply of pots and pans is on hand, and, of course, it is needless to remind the average grower that plants thrive best in clean pots. It is most important to have the insides of the pots clean, but it is best to have the outsides clean also. New pots should always be well soaked in water before being used.



BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Oscar Scheiske has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. Assets, $300; liabilities not stated.

PETUNIA PLANTS TURN YELLOW.

Can you tell me why my petunia plants turn yellow? Sometimes they are quite small when they become affected, but more frequently they seem to be all right until they are three or four inches across; then the trouble begins in the center of the plant and spreads until the plant is a sickly yellow. I lose a lot of the plants every year. The soil I use is rotted manure from the bottom of hotbeds. I put it in for the heat one year and it rots until the next year. It is horse manure. Is it too strong for petunias? I have a number of large hotbeds, and everything except petunias and verbenas seems to do well in the soil. I use it for all kinds of plants. Will you please tell me what you think is the trouble, and suggest a remedy? C. A. H.

The soil you are using is too strong for your petunias and other seedlings. Instead of using the pure manure, add equal parts of loam and leaf-mold to it. If you have no leaf-mold, use your original compost and loam in equal parts. Your compost is splendid for adding to soil for seedlings, but even in its decomposed state is rather too strong by itself. C. W.

HANGING OUT THE WASH.

I have often read in The Review that a florist should "wash all you got and hang out all you wash." I tried that last spring and am sending you photographs to let you see my results. The pictures were made September 20, 1911. It was so terribly dry last spring and summer that stock did not make the showing it should have made, but I am proud of what I did get. The space between the curb line and sidewalk, around my grounds, is ten feet wide. I find it will grow all the bedding plant stock I need, and some to spare, which easily sells at wholesale through offering in the Classified columns of The Review. I profit from this method of planting in several ways: I save my ground proper for other uses; by producing my bedding stock here I don't have to cut the grass or weeds, and have a place that is the talk of the town. The beds shown in the view of the back of the place are raised, supposed to be terraced, but it was impossible to get sod, it was so dry. This was a rubbish catching hole in the ground that looked like sin. It takes lots of soil to fill a hole as large as that three feet deep, but it took only a few loads to make it look as it does. The walks take up a good bit of the space.

I often read inquiries in the heating department about gas fuel, etc. I think I have my heating system down to date. I have thermometers in each house that connect with a bell at my bedside. There is an electrical alarm water column on the boiler. Then I have a steam regulated gas burner which cuts the fire down or turns it on as required. In short, I use gas for fuel on a steam system and sleep without being afraid of something going wrong. I see to it myself that these safety devices are working and I can say with Antonio, "My ventures are not all in one bottom trusted."

Loyd C. Bunch.

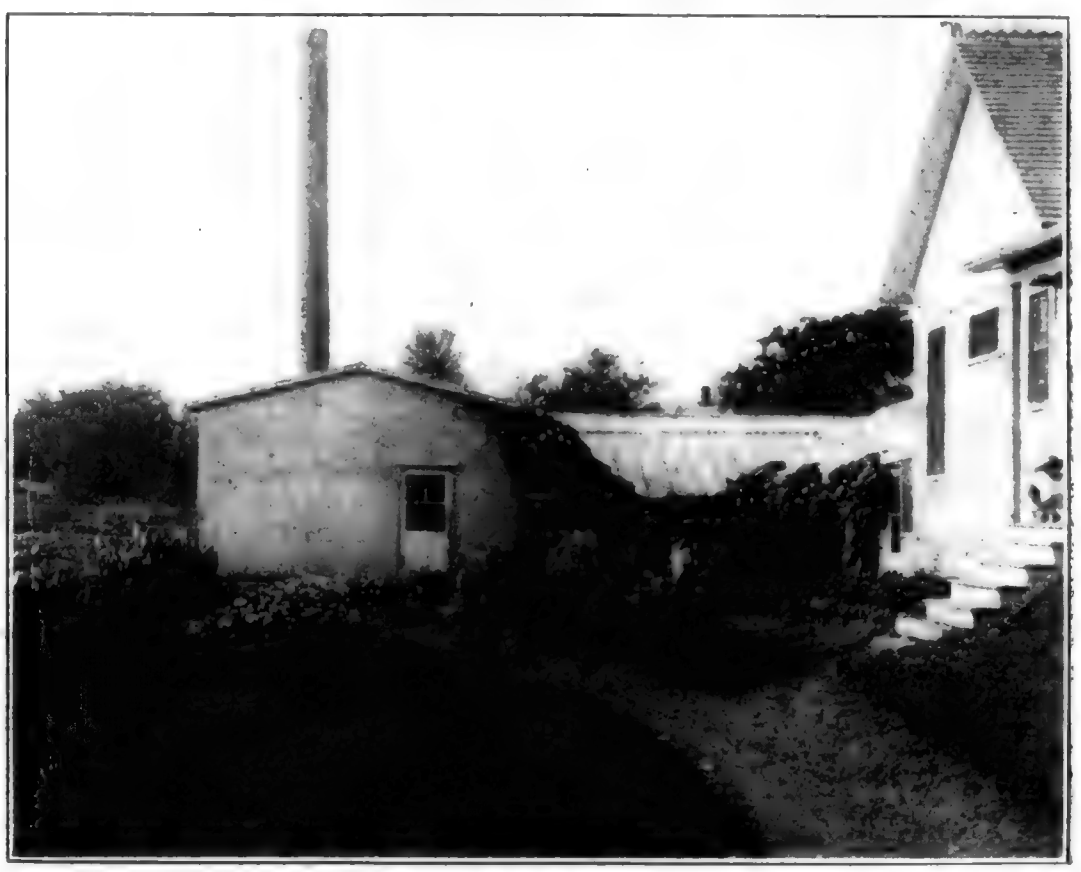
GLADIOLI A SECOND SEASON.

After forcing gladiolus bulbs, such as Blushing Bride and Peach Blossom, are they good to use again or what shall I do with them? R. S. H.

The varieties of gladioli named will make up excellent bulbs, larger than those which come each fall from Europe. They do not, however, for some reason, flower at all satisfactorily if forced a second season. We have made several experiments with these bulbs and are now satisfied that it pays best to purchase new bulbs each season, especially when their wholesale price is so low. C. W.

LEAF MINERS ON MARGUERITES.

I am enclosing some diseased marguerite leaves. Will you kindly tell me what to do for them? I have noticed one or two tiny black flies buzzing over the plants. Do these lay the eggs that make the little grub under the skin of the leaf? C. M. B.



The leaves have been skeletonized considerably by the attacks of a leaf miner, which is often found on marguerites, as well as on quite a variety of outdoor plants in summer. Marguerites, if planted in close proximity to beets, spinach and other plants similarly affected, are liable to have these leaf miners working within the tissues of their leaves when housed. Picking off affected foliage will relieve the situation if it is not too acute. In bad cases it is best to head the plants back and let them break again. Spraying twice a week with a nicotine extract has been found helpful by some growers. C. W.

GLADIOLUS TROUBLES.

The gladiolus situation is certainly in a condition to cause many of us to wonder what the future will bring. As a commercial flower it is surely taking its proper position in the cut flower trade, and there seems to be nothing to compete with it strongly. It is just beginning to show its real value and well deserves the best attention that can be given.

In late years the experiment stations have been endeavoring to find out the causes for the various diseases that affect the corms, and with some good results. One thing has been clearly brought out, and that is, that present conditions need attention. When we attack Mother Nature we are up against a never-ending problem. Just when we think we have it, just then is the time we haven't. In looking at the question as a whole, I have often wondered how we are able to grow as good stock as we do. From the beginning everything that grew was sim-

SWEET PEA STEMS ARE SHORT.

Will you kindly give me some information about my sweet peas? I commenced to pick them just before Christmas and the stems were ten to sixteen inches long. Now a great many of them are three or four inches long. What is the reason for this? They have a night temperature of 52 degrees. The vines seem to be all right and we are picking large quantities. The shortening of the stems began in the end of the greenhouse farthest from the boiler. I heat with hot water. They are in solid beds, with four or five inches of space between the vines, but they are sending up lots of shoots. What can I do to make them lengthen their stems?

C. G. P.

The fact that your sweet peas had excellent stems six weeks ago and are now coming short would indicate that they have used up much of the available plant food and are in need of stimulants. Of course, plants which may have been flowering for two or three months will naturally come a little shorter stemmed, but there should not be so decided a shortening as you have had. I would advise watering with cow or sheep manure water, and in addition give a good top-dressing of the sheep manure and fine bone. These can be given together or separately. After applying, lightly point over or hoe the surface and then soak thoroughly with water.

Sweet peas require quite rich soil. This should be well trenched over, working in plenty of cow manure. A coating three inches thick is not too much to apply each season. Keep your night temperature as near 50 degrees as possible, and by regular feeding your plants will soon come with longer stems.

GREENHOUSES WRECKED.

A tornado swept over the city of Shreveport, La., at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday, February 20, leaving death and destruction in its path. The accompanying illustration shows the residence and greenhouses of A. J. Manhein, photographed the day after the storm. In the destruction of the residence the life of the 2-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Manhein was lost, the body being found a block from the home. The greenhouses and stock are a total loss. Rebuilding will be begun at once.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Sunday, February 25, was springlike and everybody seemed to be wearing violets. The street merchants were at every corner. The surplus price was 10 cents per hundred, wholesale, and one veteran violet authority declared there were "so many in the market that they could not be given away." The average price for the best and freshest arriving was 25 cents and few sold above that figure. The one redeeming feature, from the growers' standpoint, was the American Beauty. So scarce have Beauties been that the few perfect ones that arrived Monday morning sold at $1. This high-water mark was touched several times during the last week. The supply of roses now increases daily and prices are on the down grade. The warm, bright days of last week started the big shipments in earnest. Richmond has been in good demand and exceptionally fine, touching 20 cents at times. The newer varieties are in constant demand and light supply, but of Killarney, Bride, Maid and Maryland there will be, from now on, practically no limit.

It is difficult to account for the drastic cut in carnation values; 50 cents to $2 are the extremes. It is not fair to quote prices on the new varieties, as only a few arrive, and these have their destination fixed before shipment. The street men have been offering carnations and violets in about equal quantities and the sales Sunday were enormous.

The fashion of flower wearing seems to be reviving. Many orchid and valley corsages were on display on Fifth avenue Sunday morning. Cattleyas still are abundant, and the price is stationary, 40 cents apparently being top. Gardenias have touched $4 a dozen again for the selected. There is plenty of valley at the regular winter rates. Lilies are down to 6 cents and under and growing abundant again. This applies to callas also. Bulbous stock floods the market. There is no decrease in the supply of tulips and only a few of the varieties are salable at living prices. Hyacinths, narcissi, daffodils, daisies, sweet peas and mignonette are in overabundant supply. There has been no change in the quotations for asparagus and smilax.

Various Notes.

The event of this week will be the Greek-American florists' annual ball. Everybody in the wholesale district takes this in, employers and employees, and many of the prominent retailers will be there, including every Greek florist in the big city. Harmony and union as a valuable basis for success are here illustrated, for fraternity is the watchword of this wonderfully prosperous organization.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held March 11. This will be rose and orchid night and exhibits may be sent care of Traendly & Schenck, 133 West Twenty-Eighth street. The success of the twenty-fifth anniversary banquet of the club, which will take place at the Park Avenue hotel, March 23, is already assured. Tables for six or eight may be secured in advance, by sending to Secretary Schenck for tickets.

Sydney Wertheimer, of Wertheimer Bros., has returned from a successful western trip. He says business is booming and the outlook for the Easter trade immense. This ribbon house has now ten travelers.

The auction houses will reopen about the middle of March.

Lion & Co. are much pleased with their new headquarters on Fourth avenue, overlooking the Park at Union Square. M. Americana Alexander, one of the firm's salesmen, is back from a seven weeks' canvass and Julius Berg, a other successful representative, has arrived from a six weeks' trip.

The Johnston Heating Co. reports a busy season with its new boiler. The new offices of the company, at 131 East Twenty-sixth street, are decidedly convenient.

Greenhouses and Residence of A. J. Manhein, Destroyed by Tornado, February 21.

The latest branch enterprise, now so popular a policy with some of the wholesalers, is the firm of Siebrecht & Siebrecht, this house having taken space on the first floor of the Coogan building.

The florists' supply houses already are rushed with Easter orders. Some novel designs in baskets are noteworthy. There has been no complaint all the season by the supply houses, as to any lack of business, the principal anxiety being to meet the call for prompt delivery.

Geo. Cotsonas says his new enterprise has been a growing success from the start. The Greek patronage is an immense factor.

The Growers' Cut Flower Co. finds its branch in the Cooper building helping to fill a long felt want—the want of room.

J. K. Allen has fully recovered from his tussle with bronchitis and says he is ready and waiting for a bigger Easter trade than ever.

Everybody is glad to hear of Charles Millang's rapid recovery. He was able to leave the hospital for his home last week, and hopes to return to the scene of his many enterprises in time for the rush of the Easter business.

Gunther Bros. contemplate calling their new carnation the American Association.

Badgley, Riedel & Meyer say they have no fault to find with anything but the weather, and that the volume of the Easter trade will be a big surprise to the street.

Robert Schultz, of Madison, is sending in some especially fine Richmonds.

M. C. Ford says the quality of Hession's carnations never was better than now. J. Austin Shaw.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Wm. C. Barry.

Mrs. William C. Barry, Sr., wife of the well known nurseryman of the firm of Ellwanger & Barry, died suddenly at her home, 706 Mt. Hope avenue, Rochester, N. Y., February 20. Mrs. Barry had been ill for some time, but the end came unexpectedly. She is survived by four children, W. C. Barry, Jr., Frederick Barry, Arthur A. Barry and Mrs. Charles Stearns.

B. F. Waitt.

Benjamin F. Waitt, who had conducted a greenhouse business in West street, Wilmington, Mass., for a number of years, died of acute indigestion February 20, at his home near the greenhouses. He had been ill since the preceding Friday night. He was 66 years old and was born in Haverhill. He is survived by four sisters and a daughter, the latter making her home with one of her father's sisters in Haverhill. Two of the sisters live in that city and two in Lynn.

known to nearly all the growers north of Chicago. He was born in Newburg, Wis., March 20, 1859, and removed to Chicago when a boy. He engaged in the wagon manufacturing business with his father before going into the lumber business. He was prominent in lumber business circles and was a member of the National Lumbermen's Association. Mrs. Wildner survives him, with two daughters, Mrs. Julia Seng and Mrs. George Nicholas.

Victor Schrage.

Victor Schrage, one of the pioneer seedsmen in the central states, died at his home in Cincinnati, February 18, 1912. He was born in Germany in 1834 and emigrated to this country in 1850, settling in Cincinnati shortly afterward. His first employment was as a machinist, which occupation he followed for a number of years. At the outbreak of the Civil war he took an active interest in the recruiting of the Ninth Ohio Regiment, which became famous as Cincinnati's "Fighting Germans," being composed almost exclusively of German residents of that city. Upon the close of the war Mr.

Victor Schrage.

Schrage engaged in commercial business and in 1870 established a seed store in Court street, where he was actively engaged until his retirement a year ago in favor of his son, G. A. Schrage, who is still operating Schrage's Seed Store. He became a recognized authority not only on seeds but on nursery stock, bulbs and plants, and his death caused general regret among the trade.

The memorial services, held at the residence in the evening of February 20, were largely attended. Burial was the following morning. The floral tributes, which were numerous and magnificent, were donated to the city hospital patients.

Easton, Pa.—During a recent cold night about $600 worth of plants were frozen in the greenhouses of Arthur B. Kleinhans. The fire door of the boiler was thrown open by an explosion of coal gas and thus the temperature was allowed to go down.

...NEWS NOTES...

De Kalb, Ill.—J. L. Johnson, of the De Kalb Greenhouses, has removed from the store on South Third street to 311 East Main street, where he will have considerably more space and better facilities. Hereafter he will handle seeds as well as flowers.

Bloomington, Ind.—J. H. Cain has sold a two-thirds interest in the Cain Floral Co. to Sam Scheinuk and Arnold Winkler, who have taken over the active management and will conduct the business under the name of the Standard Floral Co. They are redecorating the retail store and plan a number of changes in the growing department.

Ashtabula, O.—Two new florists' establishments will be started here during the coming summer. Charles Phelps will build a plant north of Prospect, between Benefit street and Woodman avenue; and John Regner will construct one on the South Ridge, west of town. Mr. Regner was formerly manager of the Ashtabula Greenhouse Co.'s place, on Bunker Hill.

Des Moines, Ia.—The W. K. Fletcher Bulb & Floral Co. has leased for a long term a 40-acre tract of ground. Though this property is inside the city limits of Des Moines, yet it is so close to Valley Junction that the firm intends hereafter to have all its mail matter addressed to the latter town. Des Moines will be the shipping point, however, as formerly.

New Carlisle, O.—The weight of the snow February 20 caused the collapse of about two-thirds of the greenhouse establishment of W. M. Scharff, with an estimated loss of something like $3,500. The plant consisted of two houses, each 65x200 feet, of iron frame construction. The houses were filled mainly with celery, much of which was just ready for market.

Trenton, N. J.—The Blackmon Floral Co. has let the contracts for the erection of two greenhouses, 28x100 and 28x75. The houses will be located on Center street, below Lalor. The firm has also taken a lease on the entire property where it conducts a store, on North Broad street, and is remodeling the building, putting in a new store front and installing new fixtures.

Streator, Ill.—Mrs. M. E. Finkler has had an unusually busy season, with a great deal of funeral work and a good general trade. Besides using all the flowers she could grow, she has been obliged to buy a great many roses and carnations. She has 24,000 square feet of glass and grows the best market varieties of roses, carnations and chrysanthemums, as well as bulbous stock and bedding plants.

Shawnee, Okla.—A. Schoepen, formerly manager for the Otto Schwill Co., at Mempnis, Tenn., and C. E. Franke, superintendent of parks at Oklahoma City, have formed a partnership and have leased the establishment of the Brenner Floral Co., which some time ago went into bankruptcy. The business will hereafter be conducted under the name of the C. E. Franke Floral Co.

The Review brings results.

Some of the growers are having their own troubles in rooting Pink Delight carnation cuttings.

Some of the houses best worth dealing with do not allow wholesale rates to those who do not have printed letter-heads.

Some of the big growers say there is no demand for Lorraine begonia—all the buyers want Glory of Cincinnati for next Christmas.

This is the Leap Year Number of The Review, the first edition ever dated February 29 and the first time five publication days ever have fallen in the month of February.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Anonymous inquiries still come in, although it has been stated over and over again that no attention is paid to any communication which does not show the full name and address of the writer.

Mrs. F. F. Thompson, whose beautiful place at Canandaigua, N. Y., is one of the show places of the country, has contributed $500 to be used towards securing foreign exhibits for the National Flower Show and Chairman Totty expects to have a great many more such donors within a short time.

The preliminary plant schedule of the Third National Flower Show has been issued in pamphlet form, bound in a bright red cover, and mailed to all who are thought to be interested. Anyone who has been overlooked can secure a copy by dropping a line to John Young, secretary, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city.

EAST AND WEST.

The circulation of The Review is distributed pretty evenly over the trade of the entire continent—the paper goes wherever there are florists, and the location of the advertiser appears to make little difference in his ability to use the paper with success. For instance, one mail brings the two letters printed below, one from New England and one from Wisconsin:

Please withdraw my advertisement for carnation cuttings. I have had good sales from it, am all sold out and have had to refuse a lot of orders.—James Wheeler, Natick, Mass., February 25, 1912.

We have a great many inquiries for the different items that we offer in The Review. It puts us on the map, and we are yours for more business.—Haentze Co., Fond du Lac, Wis., February 26, 1912.

DR. TRELEASE RESIGNS.

Dr. William Trelease, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden since the death of its founder, Henry Shaw, in 1889, has tendered his resignation to the Board of Trustees. Dr. Trelease gives as his reason for his action th need of more leisure for scientific search. He is ranked among the wor famous botanists. No successor been appointed.

Dr. Trelease was selected for the directorship more than twenty-two years ago by Henry Shaw, the creator of the Missouri Botanical Garden, commonly known by his name. He has built the garden up to be the finest botanical garden in America, with 12,000 species of living plants, 700,000 herbarium specimens collected from the flora of the world and a library of 70,000 books.

Dr. Trelease will remain in St. Louis, for the present at least, as he is making special studies for which the garden facilities offer exceptional opportunities.

PENCIL PUSHERS WANTED.

Practically all the larger cities of the United States, from 100,000 up, are represented in these columns by a weekly news-letter. Most of the cities are well represented—all the news is faithfully and impartially reported. But there are a few cities that are not represented in proportion to their importance in a trade sense. Here are some of them:

Washington, D. C.
Louisville, Ky.
Nashville, Tenn.
Minneapolis, Minn.
St. Paul, Minn.
Omaha, Neb.
Spokane, Wash.

The Review would be glad to hear from anyone who has an inclination for pencil pushing, located in any of the above cities, or others that may not be regularly represented in these columns. Correspondents should be connected with the retail branch of the business.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Two blizzards within the week of February 21 to 27 pretty thoroughly demoralized the Chicago market. The fall of snow February 21 was the heaviest of the winter and, of course, the weather conditions retarded the rapidly rising tide of cut flower production; but the same conditions cut down demand even faster than they cut down production. The result was that after the first storm the market was seriously overloaded and had no more than effected a clean-up Saturday, February 24, than another all-day blizzard arrived February 26 to again cause stock to accumulate badly.

Old heads at the business say that they cannot recall a year in which the general line of cut flowers gave such low average prices in the last week of February as has been the case this season. Only a small part of the receipts were required to satisfy the legitimate demand, and the balance of the stock was sold for whatever it would bring, no inconsiderable quantity going to waste. The result was that the fair prices realized for a small quantity of selected stock were reduced to an extrem average by the sacrifices nec is said that the average v lines of stock have week in the month ere up to St. Val-be filled. Neither are Beauties in oversupply. There are a few fairly sizable crops being cut, but too many of the flowers are of only medium quality, and the demand for Beauties is not insistent. The crops of Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond are coming on heavily. Not only is there no difficulty in filling the orders, but prices have fallen. Roses are still doing better than other lines, however, for at this date last year rose prices were lower than at present, but a few days of bright weather will greatly increase the production and a further fall in prices is in immediate prospect. The quality is fine in all lengths.

Carnations are in extremely large supply and the prices are unusually low for the date and the quality. Carnations have given the wholesalers little trouble at any time thus far this season, but this is being made up for now and prices for the last week have been the lowest ever known in the month of February. Splits are numerous, because of the dark weather, and are hard to move with good stock so plentiful.

Violets have fared probably worse than any other item. The supply has been so much ahead of requirements that the average returns to growers have fallen to a point where there can be little profit in shipping to this market. The surplus has been sold to the peddlers at a nickel a bunch, and quite a few violets have gone to waste for lack of a buyer even at this price. Sweet peas are in extremely large supply for this date. The quality is fine, with prices extremely moderate. Bulbous stock is coming in heavily and those who run the special sales have been able to buy in quantity at almost their own figure. Some of the tulips now offered are the best of the season.

The green goods market is steady. Mexican ivy has been in demand and rather in short supply, but of everything else there is enough. Ferns generally are poor and the wholesalers have just been notified by the eastern shippers of an advance in price covering the next three months, which puts the ferns at the highest valuation ever known, indicating that good stock is decidedly scarce with the first hands.

Our Politicians.

The trade was interested in the aldermanic primaries February 27, as several candidates are florists or in the allied trades.

Peter Reinberg was renominated by the democrats of the twenty-sixth ward. A strong fight on him was made by the regular democratic organization, but Mr. Reinberg won handily by 797 votes. He had the support of the Harrison-Hearst alliance. It is a republican ward except when Mr. Reinberg runs. This time the total republican vote was 1,911, and the democratic vote 3,437. Mr. Reinberg's republican opponent at the election will be a Mr. Pretzel.

In the twenty-first ward William F. Scofield, a retail florist on North State street, secured the democratic nomination, receiving 1,185 votes, as against 1,429 for the five other candidates. His plurality was 557.

In the thirty-second ward Melville G. Holding was unopposed for the democratic nomination. Mr. Holding

Cape Flowers

Natural, 55c per lb.
Colored, 90c per lb.

These prices are good for the week of March 4 to 11 only.

Probably every florist will recognize that this is a bargain that ought to be snapped up. The prices are so much below what one usually has to pay for Cape Flowers that every store man had better buy a year's supply—the savings will pay big interest on the money invested.

Customers having orders for these goods placed with us for later shipment are invited to take advantage of this special offer by having the shipment go forward at once.

exports bulbs to Europe, but—Otto Wittbold recently filled an order for two bushels of small gladiolus bulbs for a firm in Holland. Nearly four cars of coal each week has been the toll demanded by the cold weather at the Edgebrook greenhouses.

A raise in greenhouse glass prices within the week is predicted by D. F. Webster, of the James H. Rice Co., and it will certainly be welcome—to the glass men. The latter say that the recent low prices have left nothing in it for the manufacturer and jobber.

Henry Wittbold has worked a transformation in the south half of the room so long occupied by the Flower Growers' Market, but which has been vacant for nearly a year. He has put down a waterproof floor and is building offices and demonstration rooms. A big stock of decorative plants already has been moved in. Percy Jones occupies the north half of the floor.

John Kruchten states that the Deerfield Nurseries is preparing to put up two more houses, thereby doubling the space for gardenias. The range now consists of two houses of gardenias, three in sweet peas and miscellaneous stock.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that on figuring up it is shown that the growers have cut more flowers from January 1 to date than within the same period last year, but that the average prices have not been so good.

rapidly after her serious operation and expects to be able to leave the hospital within a few days.

The new store, called Weiland's, in the basement of the Venetian building, on Washington street, probably will be ready to open by the end of this week. The room was furnished by Orr & Lockett and is extremely well fitted up. The display refrigerator is a fine one. Everything is in white enamel with gold trimmings.

The Market.

The cut flower market became dull during the latter part of the week as far as demand was concerned, though in other respects the market was at its best. Greatly reduced prices prevailed. The florists in the west end who do most of the social work report that trade has fallen off since Lent began, though considerable funeral work has helped out.

In the downtown district the store men say transient trade was a big feature last week, though reduced prices prevailed at all the downtown stores.

The wholesale men had a hard time disposing of their large consignments during the week. Violets and sweet peas were sold in large lots at low prices. All bulb stock is now coming in quite heavily and some extra fine tulips, Dutch hyacinths and valley were to be had daily at any of the wholesale markets. All of the above-mentioned flowers are a glut.

Roses have held their own so far, with no glut in sight. Still, a great many are coming in and prices have weakened. All are of the best quality except American Beauties, which are of inferior quality and have little demand. All grades in these are plentiful. The great snow storm on Tuesday, February 20, did not help the business any.

Various Notes.

The local trade was greatly surprised last week when the announcement was made that Dr. Wm. Trelease had resigned as director of the Missouri Botanical Gardens, which position he has held since 1885, being brought here by the late Henry Shaw, from the Wisconsin University. Mr. Trelease gives as his reason for leaving the gardens that he desires to give more time to his botanical works. The trustees of the gardens have not, as yet, made known his successor. Dr. Trelease is a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and the Engelmann Botanical Club.

The trustees of the St. Louis Florists' Club have decided to hold the club's rose and carnation exhibition on the second floor of C. A. Kuehn's new wholesale house. This exhibition will take place Thursday afternoon, March 14, at 2 o'clock. All in the trade are invited to attend. Growers of new varieties in carnations and roses will find this a splendid opportunity to show the home growers a few blooms. The club meeting will take place the same afternoon and the members will attend in a body afterwards. A talk will be made on "Easter Stock" by Geo. B. Windler, John Held, C. C. Sanders and Emil Schray.

The city park department is making great improvements in all the parks on the north side, removing all fences. These have been replaced with hedges and shrubs. Several carloads of shrubs were put in, but the big snow storm last week put a stop to the work.

The meeting of the Retail Florists' Association on Monday night, February 19, was well attended. Alex P. Geranios, of the Metropolitan Floral Co., was elected secretary of the association in place of R. J. Windler, who declined reëlection.

W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. had a lot of extra fine quality violets and sweet peas and, as the demand is not too large, the prices were greatly reduced on large lots.

At Geo. H. Angermueller's and H. G. Berning's large consignments of carnations came in daily, and in order to clean up on these the prices suffered. Bulk stock, too, came in large quantities. There are plenty of Beauties coming in, but the bulk of them are deformed, with no demand.

The Market.

The business for Valentine's day was not marked by any special features, except, perhaps, the sale of more than the usual number of plants with appropriate trimmings. The volume of business was slightly greater than last year. The stock was excellent in quality and sufficient in quantity, the demand being hard on the violet supply, as usual. Cut flowers were sold mostly in ordinary arrangements, not much excitement being evidenced over fancy boxes. Trade conditions are good, though there is little that is unusual going on. There have lately been several occasions when a prominent funeral has made things more than interesting for the stores. The stock exhibited is of good quality and assortment and is commanding good prices.

The weather has remained comparatively mild for February, which is a relief after the extreme cold of January. This winter seems to be marked for an unusual quantity of snow, and as the humor of this community reflects somewhat the humor of the surrounding agricultural population, we are willing to put up with the inconvenience underfoot for the good that is to follow. As most of the florists here rely on motorcycles for the majority of their deliveries, there is a united hope that the streets will not get much worse, as a slimy ooze seems to appear on the pavements, regardless of cleaning. The extreme cold of January made things inconvenient for the growers who kept bulb flats outdoors and who had taken only the usual precaution against freezing. Most of the flats were frozen solid and required coaxing with a pick to loosen them. Bulbs of the narcissus type seem none the worse for their enforced storage, but the hyacinths seem to think it was intentional and refuse to respond when brought into warmth.

From the quantity of seedlings and young bedding stock coming on at the various plants, it would seem that a splendid spring business is the expectation of everyone. The new seedlings and cuttings share first place for attention with the lilies for Easter. Both Formosa and giganteum are being grown for this important crop. The general idea of the Formosa seems to be to bloom and have it over with as soon as possible, while the giganteum will require a little extra steam to bring it along in time. If all the bulbs planted for Easter flowers at the various plants come in on time, there will certainly be no trouble for the ordinary individual to find a place to purchase his Easter lilies this year.

Various Notes.

Bixby & Co. have three houses set aside for lettuce and are starting a large number of vegetable plants for the spring demand. This firm devotes the remainder of its glass to carnations

YOUR CAR FOR A PERFECT DELIVERY SYSTEM

In a very few lines of trade are hours so precious as with the florist. He must turn his stock into money with as little delay as possible. He cannot afford delays in delivering. Every hour saved is an asset that can be turned into a profit. The greatest time-saver and money-maker you can have is

AN INTERNATIONAL COMMERCIAL CAR

With it you will be able to cover 2 to 3 times as much territory—in less time—at less cost. Or you will be able to make the same territory in one-half to one-third the time.

There are so many reasons why an International is the best investment you can make; there are so many reasons why you should have motor delivery that you ought to know all the facts.

Write and tell us the conditions you have to meet and we will gladly furnish you an estimate of what the International Commercial Car will save you, based on the actual experience of others.

Mrs. L. D. Johnson was also a busy florist last week, and especially so with funeral work.

H. H. Ritter tells us that trade over his way has been sufficiently swift to consume the supply.

Latest news from W. C. Hood, of Los Angeles, Cal., is that he intends to come east again as soon as circumstances permit. R. A. L.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The gross sales are satisfactory, but the supply has become so strong that the demand is scarcely keeping pace with it. The shipping business is good.

The rose supply has increased slightly since the last writing and before many days should be adequate for all requests. As it is now, however, they still clean up on sight. Killarney is in somewhat shorter supply than White Killarney. Richmond is in fair supply and is selling nicely. The American Beauty offerings are good and ample. The long, choice ones are taken up quickly, while shorts sell much slower.

Carnations are almost a glut. The offerings as a whole are good, but the large number of sales do not take up all the stock. The white enjoy the best call. The bulbous line is long on every kind of flower, and all are generally of excellent quality. The supply of Easter lilies and callas is again easily sufficient for needs and, judging from the offerings the early part of the week, a few heavy orders for these would not be amiss. Sweet peas also are in oversupply. Only the best and longest sell. The short pink do not move at all. Violets have experienced a tremendous slump. The doubles hardly sell at all and singles not much better. Valley, while running short now and then, manages in a fair way to keep up with the demand. The call for decorative greens of every kind is large.

A New York Society Woman on a recent visit to Philadelphia remarked, "How artistic and beautiful were the flower decorations, ribbons and design work by Philadelphia florists!"

A majority of Philadelphia florists, and thousands all over the country, use Pine Tree Ribbons in their decorations and bouquets.

These ribbons are particularly adapted for florists' work, made of good, weighty silk stock, finished in effective and rich-toned shadings.

Popp Bros., the Central Covington florists, have a fine lot of hydrangeas that will make Easter. The other stock on the place, including lilies, ferns, azaleas, geraniums and carnations, is looking fine.

E. G. Gillett's wire department is having a strenuous time trying to keep up the stock of hanging baskets.

Chas. McCrea, of Hardesty & Co., is kept busy these days. He is in town one day and then down at Frankfort helping to make laws for the well-being of the commonwealth of Kentucky.

L. H. Kyrk and the other florists living on Price Hill were put to some inconvenience February 25. The ground on the hillside slid down on the car tracks and blocked traffic.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange has erected a blackboard upon which they can note their specials. It is above the wrapping table and, surrounded by a gilt molding and with the green wall for a background, is bound to catch the buyer's eye.

P. J. Olinger's loss at New Castle was fortunately not as large as was at first supposed. The weight of the drifting snow February 19 caused one of the houses to fall in places. It is estimated that $1,500 will cover the loss.

Mr. Lodder, of Hamilton, was almost a daily visitor last week. He came to the market personally to buy for heavy business at his place.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market has declined since Ash Wednesday. There is less business, with about the same quantity of flowers. Prices have receded on nearly all varieties and the effort has changed from filling to finding the order. The shipping demand gives strength to the market, although the shipping orders are not so numerous or large as a week ago. The local demand has been improved by the milder weather; there were few flowers carried over Sunday, a fact that goes a long way toward preserving the tone of the market.

The principal decline in roses has been on the shorter grades. Beauties continue firm; the supply of shorts of this variety is increasing. Violets have been plentiful, particularly so on the sunny days. Many have been marketed at good prices, while for others it seemed impossible to find a buyer. Carnations have held their own as well as any other flower; some wholesalers say a little better. The increasing supply makes it harder to market them at satisfactory prices, although the quality is generally fine. Mrs. C. W. Ward, Gloriosa, Pink Delight and a few others are equal to anything offered this season. Sweet peas are divided into two flocks, the sheep and the goats; the former are few by comparison and satisfactory to wholesalers and growers alike; the latter are many and the reverse, the purchaser feeling that he has conferred a favor by taking them in thousand lots at prices most ridiculous.

There has been no particular change in the flowers making up the rest of the list; they have receded with the staples described above, excepting in a few cases where quality and lack of quantity holds the price. The bulbous flowers form by far the larger part of those unnamed, but the prices realized for them are so low that they are much more satisfactory to the retailer and his customer than to those on the other side of the line. Emperor surpasses Golden Spur when well grown and finds favor with the buyers.

Compared with the first week of Lent a year ago, many of those best able to judge say that the cut flower market is in satisfactory condition, particularly so when compared with the dullness evident in other industries.

Joseph Beavis & Son.

The professional history of Joseph Beavis marks the changes that have been taking place all around Philadelphia. Starting as a general grower—that is, with a little of everything of promise in cut flowers or in plants—he has gradually blossomed into a specialist.

Mr. Beavis was a painstaking grower of marked ability. His place in Tioga, which would now be considered small were it in existence, was known to all leading florists in the city, as well as to many of the smaller florists. His stock was varied and well grown. The plan then was to produce as many cut flowers as possible during the winter. As fast as benches went off crop they were refilled with cinerarias, primroses, tulips and daffodils in pots. These were, in turn, succeeded by the Easter specialties. So numerous were these that the week before Easter, when fifty or sixty large wagon loads of plants were sent out to the stores, was the most important period of the year. Then came the geraniums and other soft-wooded spring plants, grown in quantity in the houses and in the frames, to say nothing of hardy roses, vines and so forth, followed by the period of house-cleaning, profit-counting and preparation for the fall, with occasional bright spots in the shape of productive beds, sometimes outdoors, sometimes indoors.

These were hard working days, when prices were higher than they are now. They were ended by the march of city improvement, which surrounded and then overspread Mr. Beavis' place. The ground was sold and the houses were moved from Tioga away out on the Limekiln pike to Pittville. Here the houses were rebuilt on modern lines, especially for growing roses—Kaiserin for summer, with Brides and Maids from September to June, not just until time for pot plants for Easter—such Brides and Maids as made the name of Beavis, father and son, familiar to every florist. With the improvement in varieties came Richmond, now chiefly relied upon for the midwinter crop; the long, heavy canes from the base have often brought extraordinary prices in midwinter, when Beauties were scarce.

Two new houses, each 35x150, were added last summer, Killarney, the dominant variety, making its first appearance on Mr. Beavis' place. The addition is open-span, of King construction, and divided between Killarney and White Killarney. Though the plants were not set out until August, they have made good growth and are producing fine, large flowers. The Richmonds have been managed this season so that they produce continuously from Thanksgiving until February. The winter-resting plan, including first crop for Easter, is pursued with Kaiserin and with Maryland; both varieties are now breaking strongly and promise well.

Mr. Beavis contends that the profits in rose growing do not compare favorably with those of the general grower, as shown by his success in Tioga, but he admits that the chances are poor today for the grower who attempts everything, with chief dependence on the wholesale market.

of any sizes of coal, and prices are high. In addition to this, there is still the prospect of a strike or a suspension of mining April 1, at which time the present agreement with the mine workers expires. The bituminous coal trade is more active than it has been in years. The demand is enormous, and prices are high. This applies to practically all grades of coal. This condition has arisen for the same reason that it has in the anthracite region,'' they say.

TEMPERATURE FOR PRIMROSES.

What temperature should seedlings of Primula obconica and Sinensis be given until the time for potting them?

T. S. M.

Until they germinate, 60 degrees at night may be given. Gradually reduce this about 10 degrees as they grow; 50 degrees should not be exceeded after potting.

C. W.

PEAT VERSUS LEAF-MOLD.

Is decayed peat suitable to use in place of leaf-mold in soil for ferns, cyclamens, gloxinias, etc? T. S. M.

Peat will answer well for ferns in lieu of leaf-mold, but for cyclamens, primulas, gloxinias, begonias and similar plants it is not nearly so good. It will answer fairly well until the seedlings are transplanted, but should not be used later. If you cannot get leaf-mold, well decayed cow manure will do as well or better. In fact, after the first potting there is no particular benefit in using the leaf-mold, as the plants prefer some medium with more body to it.

PREPARING LAND FOR ASTERS.

We should be pleased to receive information as to what to do with a 2½-acre piece of land which has considerable quack grass on it. We plowed the land in the fall and also last spring. This land has not grown any crop for several years. Would it be advisable to put manure on it this spring, or would it be more profitable to use sheep manure and bone meal? We intend to grow carnations and asters on it.

F. B.

I have had no experience with quack grass, but imagine that you could get rid of it by plowing the patch every month or so. I know of nothing you can put on the ground to kill the grass, but what would render it unfit for any other crop. It might take a whole season to rid the ground of this grass by plowing, but it is the only means I can suggest at this time.

H. & D. FLORISTS' BOX

Universally used for shipping cut flowers and designs. The dead-air cells form a perfect non-conductor of heat and cold, thus preserving contents much longer than ordinary wood box.

H. & D. Florists' Box can be used several times. Is much lighter than the ordinary box, thus saving in express charges.

Asters like a fairly rich soil, but do not like fresh manure. The time to manure land for asters is in the fall, before you give it the fall plowing. Then by spring the manure is pretty well rotted and the spring plowing will thoroughly mix it with the soil. If you think the soil is not rich enough, I would advise using the pulverized sheep manure in preference to the stable manure. I doubt whether the bone would be of any benefit whatever. If the soil is not actually poor, the best thing you can do is to give it a good dressing of slaked lime. Apply it after you plow the ground and then harrow it in.

PACIFIC COAST.

Subscribers on the Pacific coast should not fail to note that their special department of The Review has grown until it now occupies five pages. Give us a boost and the Pacific Coast Department will keep right on growing.

There should be in this department a weekly letter regarding trade doings at Spokane. Who will send it?

On page 52 is an illustration showing one of the houses of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., with Lorraine begonias in full bloom.

The severe storms have delayed the mails from the Pacific coast this week, trains being far behind their schedules. This accounts for the absence of several regular news-letters.

On pages 18 and 19 are illustrations showing palms outdoors in the vicinity of Los Angeles, the Jubæa spectabilis on page 19 being said to be the finest specimen in the United States.

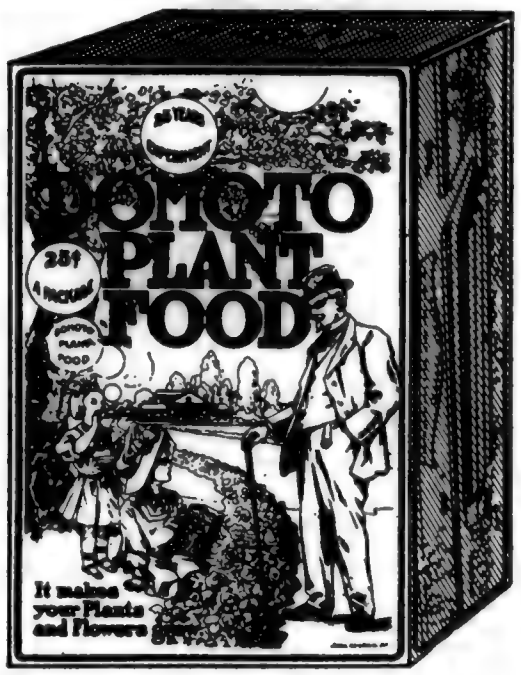
Portland, Ore.—J. G. Bacher has published in the Oregonian a column article on how to plant roses that surely will stimulate the demand for stock.

Klamath Falls, Ore.—S. G. Bryant is looking forward hopefully to the early spring season, as that is his especially busy time. During the winter, when trade is rather dull, he increases his income by taking charge of a greenhouse for a private family.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions are about the same as last reported; there has been a steady business daily, enough to keep all lines of stock moving. Spring stock is here in abundance, but the prices have held up remarkably. The favorable weather has started the daffodils into bloom in the yards, while hyacinths and tulips are pushing the ground rapidly. Rose bushes and shrubbery have commenced to put on leaves, but all danger of frost has not yet passed.



February 22 was designated as the official rose planting day here, in which the school children took an active part. Washington and Oregon officials attended in a body. E. R. C.

The Market.

Flowers of all kinds are still a glut in the market and, with the advent of Lent, business is not as brisk as we should like to see it. There has, however, been a fair amount of funeral orders during the last ten days, and they seem to have been divided up well among the different retailers. Daffodils are now at the height of their season and are the best selling article that the florists handle. Paper Whites are also taking the place of the cheaper white stock in funeral designs. Valley and hyacinths do not move as quickly as they did a few weeks ago. Lilium longiflorum is quiet, with plenty of stock in sight for Easter.

Carnations are cheaper and roses, except some fancy stock, are at rather low figures. Freesias and tulips hold their own. Fruit blossoms of half a dozen kinds are in good demand for decorative purposes. Wild adiantum is being used heavily for mixing with violets and bulbous stock. Other sorts of flowers all show a slight tendency to drop gradually in price. Violets are slightly on the wane, owing to the warm weather and the tendency to begin the growing of the plants.

LORRAINES ON THE COAST.

The extent to which Lorraine begonias are grown by some of the western concerns is shown by the accompanying illustration, which is reproduced from a photograph made in the establishment of the MacRorie-McLaren Co. Thus far the Pacific coast growers have had no problem of distribution to consider, such as is beginning to be apparent in the east—their only difficulty has been to keep pace with the increasing demand.

MAKING A START.

At present I have nothing but a small stock for retail trade, but some day I hope to help crowd that Pacific Coast Department onto the fifth, sixth or seventh page; I have watched the growth it has made in the last few months. I am just beginning my business and am new to the trade, but I have sent halfway across the United States for stock that I could have bought right here at home, almost, if I had only known where. I think The Review is just the finest ever, and I always turn first to the Pacific Coast Department. I am starting in business in a small way; in fact, I wonder if you would care for a little bit of our history. Six years ago last June we, my husband, a 6-year-old son and a 16-year-old stepson, arrived here with two trunks, $100 in gold (my husband had his barber tools in a hand bag) and enough to pay rent on two furnished rooms for two weeks. I was helpless with heart trouble; had been under the doctor's care for two years, which explains our financial condition. The doctors said my only hope was the coast. Today we own our own home, my husband owns his own business, and, as my heart grew stronger, our family increased. Two dear little girls and a 2-year-old "man" now help me in the garden, and I have succeeded in stocking our 200-foot lot with good roses and about 500 carnations for cut flowers. When we first bought our home—paid the original $100 gold down, the balance in payments—my husband could not spare me money for roses, so I knit a baby jacket and cap and earned $2.50 for my first twelve plants. And I have kept on buying roses with every cent I could save. I have studied roses day and night, eat with a book in one hand and go to sleep at night with a rose book in my hand. When I was studying hybridizing I would nurse my babies with a rose in one hand and a book in the other. I have three roses of my own that promise to be good. But above all I have got a reputation; people here think that no one can raise roses like Mrs. Paquette, and you know that is good for the trade. I am small in business yet, but I have patience, a bulldog persistence, a passion for roses, and a kind, encouraging husband and a good heart. So with the help of The Review I intend to grow.

Mrs. E. E. Paquette, Ventura, Cal.

GLADIOLUS TROUBLES.

ply grown again, ad infinitum, and no wonder we get the heritage of diseased bulbs we now enjoy. It looks as though the ordinary care rendered by the potato grower was lacking in many cases. The best potato to type is selected—the cleanest, healthiest, of a certain form, and precautions are even carried so far as to go into the field while the crop is growing and select certain hills that show up the best. How much of this care has been used with the gladiolus? In a large majority of cases everything goes in, good, bad and indifferent, with the results we now have.

Planting year after year on the same ground only adds to the confusion. And I believe the foregoing methods of procedure, added to carelessness in handling the bulbs from harvesting to planting, are responsible for nine-tenths of the diseases attacking gladiolus bulbs. A low temperature, aided by moisture, also helps in the destruction. During the winter of 1910-11 I left out over the winter some America and King, covered with a good mulch-ing, and those that survived and grew last summer showed plainly the effects of such treatment, in increased disease conditions and smaller bulbs. But, where the bulbs were well mulched and kept free from frost they were fine and healthy, showing conclusively that environment was largely responsible for poor conditions. I have left out bulblet stock over winter and, where well covered with snow and the ground well drained, they came through nicely and did at least as well as when they were taken up and replanted. The rows were a veritable mass of small bulbs, not as large, perhaps, but vastly more of them grew. This, however, can not be done with certainty. General conditions are against the practice. Moisture and cold in the storehouse will have a weakening effect on the bulbs, making them more susceptible to the attacks of fungus. Just because the bulb will live is no reason why it should not have reasonable care during the winter, and also no reason why a rigid system of selection should not apply to the bulb as well as to the flower when selections are made for cross breeding.

Another practice that I believe is detrimental to the healthy bulb is the continued selling of bulblets and small planting stock. Of course the high prices are tempting, but they are paid for in the end. If the same careless practice of selection were used by the potato grower, any variety would soon go out of existence. The right practice is to sell what might be called old bulbs, three years old or over from seed or bulblet, and keep the young stock continually on the advance in growth. In other words, take advantage of the Creator's evolution of growth and the result can not be otherwise than good, and there is a continual growing of better stock to place on the market. And again, these so-called old bulbs are in the pink of condition to bring the best results when forced by the florist and others. When you add a careful selection during harvesting and cleaning, keeping these bulbs separate, growing the bulblets separate and taking proper care of stock, you have about as good conditions as ordinary mortals can produce.

Another injunction that may be added is, don't grow bulbs more than two years in succession on the same land. Seed down and grow clover for two years. This will take more land, but pays in the end. If these simple conditions are followed, with good care during the winter months, I see no reason why the larger part of all diseases can not be eradicated. You can not cure a consumptive with foul air. You can not grow good gladiolus bulbs with carelessness and bad temperatures. The gladiolus was not intended by the Creator to be grown under the forcing conditions now applied, and extra care must be used all along the line to keep conditions up to standard, to say nothing of progress. I believe the industry is but in its infancy, but to get the best out of it men must step to one side for the moment and sacrifice a little of present profit for future good. I believe this is being done, and in the end those that follow a rigid system of selection and using the best of care will be well rewarded, when the time comes that our seedsmen will more earnestly demand good, clean and healthy stock for their customers.

A reference to one little experiment may not be out of place. We used Augusta gladiolus, grown two years from eastern stock; 100 bulbs were selected, the choicest to be found. From these were grown 126 bulbs, largely No. 1. As to the opposite method, 100 bulbs were selected from the poorest to be found as to disease and other conditions. Result, twenty-four bulbs were grown. It would seem as though such an experiment would show any thinking man the value of careful selection in securing the best results.

EVER-READY POT COVERS may not make the plants, but you'll find them a great help in selling your plants to your trade. It is like putting on your Sunday suit, when you dress your plants in the Ever-Ready way. With these pot covers the ugly clay pot is completely hidden, making the plant far more attractive.

Made of strong cardboard, covered with Waterproof Crepe Paper, tied with Silk Fiber Ribbon at top and bottom, and securely fastened. Four shaded colors, and sizes and shapes to fit any pot or pan.

EARLY OUTDOOR TOMATOES.

When is the right time to sow the seed of Burpee's Sparks' Earliana tomato for an early crop in the spring? The plants are to be put out in the field after danger of frost is over, which in this locality, in northern Maryland, would be about the middle of May. I intend to sow in paper pots, in a violet house with a temperature of 45 degrees at night. Should they get a little shade when the sun becomes hot in the spring? Will it be necessary to harden them in a coldframe before planting them out? Any information you can give me will be greatly appreciated. E. A. P.

Many gardeners like to plant their early tomato seed March 1 and get fine, large pot plants to put out May 15, but I find that they get too large for 3-inch pots unless planted later, and if too large and spindly they do not do as well as younger plants. If you start them in the violet house, however, they will be so cool that they will not grow much for some time.

I should think you could plant them outside by May 1 in your latitude. They will not need to be hardened if grown in a cool, well ventilated house, but should be if grown in a warm house. They need no shade at all. I would advise the starting of two lots of seed, so that later you could use whichever lot you find preferable. Start them March 1 and 15. H. G.

"The Finest Greenhouses in New York State" is the way Dobbs & Son, of Auburn, describe their new range of glass, which is illustrated herewith. The house shown is 42x250 feet, without posts or other means of support, yet it is as safe as any house can be. It need hardly be said that Garland Truss construction was used. It is the only truss that has stood up successfully under all kinds of conditions and strains.

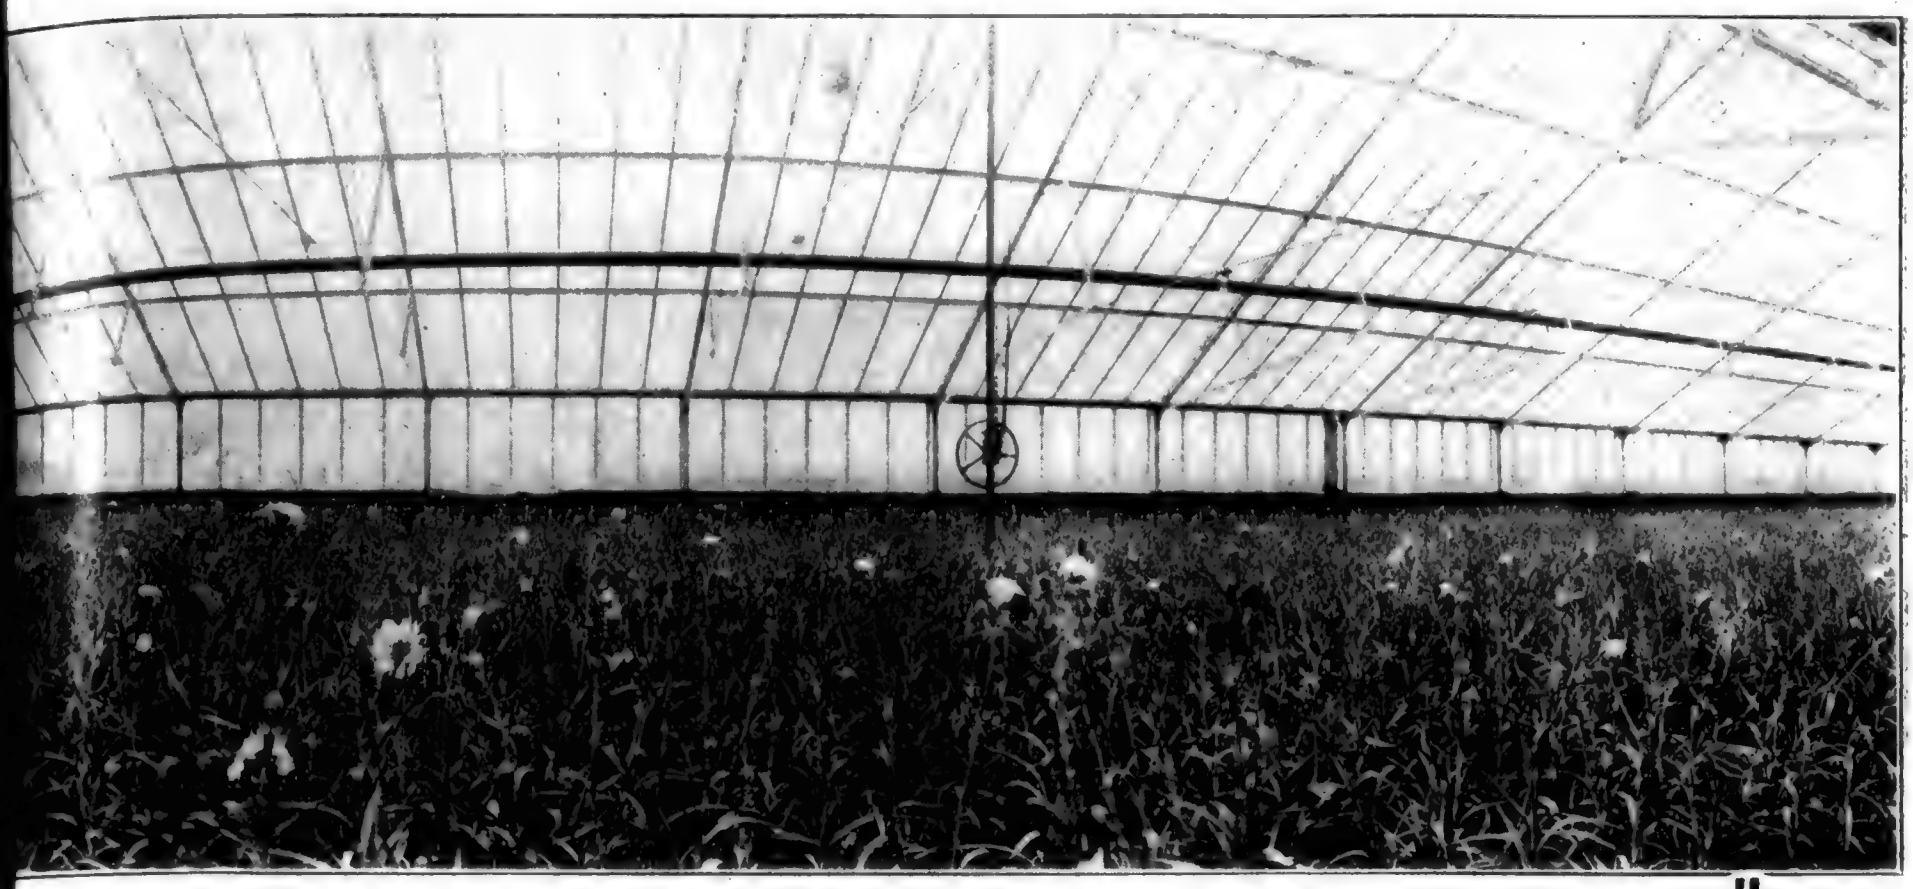
It was Garland Truss construction that made the Stahelin movable greenhouses a possibility and a success. It is Garland Truss construction that is ordered for "the largest range of greenhouses ever erected in one season." These will be built this summer for O. C. Barber, of Barberton, O., and you can be certain he carefully investigated all types before deciding on greenhouses that were to cover over 213,000 square feet. Mr. Barber had to make the right choice.



YOU will make the right choice if you use Garland Truss construction when you build.

We have just completed an addition to our factory which fully doubles our capacity, and are now in better position than ever before to take care of your orders. Drop us a line now—while it's on your mind.

GEO.

LOCK BOX

THE above picture was taken by Mr. Wm. Dobbs with a revolving camera and shows the exceptional light obtained with the Garland Truss construction. There are no posts, no beams, no heavy rafters to obscure the sun's rays during the long winter months when every bit of sunshine is needed for the proper growth of the plants.

Imagine yourself standing at the center of a big 42x250-foot house. Let your eye travel, as the eye of the camera traveled, from one corner, along the side to the opposite end. An unbroken view the entire distance (the pipe just at the right of the center is solely for the ventilating machinery), and a lighter, stronger house in every way than can be built by the use of any other form of construction. The lower picture shows the exterior of the house shown above.

Investigate GARLAND STEEL TRUSS CONSTRUCTION and GARLAND SEMI-MALLEABLE CAST IRON GUTTERS before you decide and you'll never be satisfied with anything else.

We'll gladly furnish estimates and sketches on your prospective houses without charge.

While it is not long since roses and many other flowers were scarce, and some trouble was experienced filling orders, conditions have changed entirely. Now there are more flowers of all kinds than are wanted and the wholesalers are having their troubles disposing of the surplus. There is some complaint that many of those persons who were buyers during the scarcity are now consigning to the wholesalers and, of course, expecting large returns, for they remember what they paid for poorer stock only a few weeks ago.

The social season just closed was good, or bad, depending on whom you asked, for with some it was the best season in years, as with one set of people it was one continued round of functions with good decorations, while the small trade was hardly up to the average.

The lenten season has not started in at all badly and we are hoping it will hold on. However, a week's good each week and sales total high as a result. Stock keeps about even with the demand, but as yet the cheaper roses are scarce. Bulb stock, as usual, is plentiful, with a large quantity of it moving every day. Washington's birthday failed to make much stir on the market, owing to the storm and the fact that the large stores were closed a half day.

Various Notes.

The Buffalo bowlers have accepted a kind invitation from the Rochester boys to have a game of bowling and the usual good time which we are always afforded at the hands of the Rochester boys.

Friday, February 23, three delegates from the Buffalo Florists' Club took in the meeting of the State Florists' Association, and we were agreeably surprised to learn that one of our men was elected president. The meeting was held at Cornell University and William F. Kasting was the man elected. Mr. Adams and W. J. Palmer also attended the meeting.

Edward Stephan, for many years with S. A. Anderson, is now employed by W. J. Palmer & Son.

The new greenhouses at Delaware park, in charge of Mr. Keyser, are now near completion and already make a splendid appearance. Mr. Keyser now has the finest collection of cinerarias ever shown in Buffalo. R. A. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The arrival of the lenten season has caused a cessation of social activity and continued mild weather has greatly increased the output of flowers. The warmer weather has allowed the street venders to ply their trade and they have taken a large quantity of second rate flowers which would otherwise have been a complete loss. Roses are arriving more abundantly and prices show a downward tendency. Beauties are not of good quality, but Killarneys, Richmond, Ward, Hillingdon and other sorts are uncommonly good. Yellow varieties continue popular. These are now being much used in funeral designs, as well as in bouquets and for centerpieces. Carnations are in heavy supply. Pink Delight is the best seller of all. Gloriosa also is popular. Enchantress brings lower prices and will be less grown next year. White Wonder and White Enchantress are the leading whites. Beacon easily leads all scarlets, and Fenn is still the most largely grown crimson.

Violets are abundant. The milder weather has especially brought forward the singles, which are making much leaf growth, a sure sign of their approaching finish. Sweet peas are popular but overplentiful. Callas and lilies are abundant. The Formosa lilies are in evidence. Tulips and narcissi of all sorts are in oversupply. Hyacinths do not sell well. Mignonette is still good, but will deteriorate with warmer weather. Pink snapdragon is in demand. Gardenias are selling well. The best make $3 and $4 per dozen. Valley is more plentiful. Cattleya Trianæ is still in good supply, averaging $4 per dozen. Other flowers noted are tritonias, cut acacia in variety, lilac, amaryllis, the first Spanish iris of the season, yellow marguerites, calendulas, ten weeks' stocks and forget-me-nots. Plant trade, with the more open weather, has taken quite a spurt.

Various Notes.

Several exhibits were inadvertently omitted from the list shown at the club meeting February 20. These included superb Gorgeous and Benora carnations from Peter Fisher, a splendid collection, comprising Gloriosa, Pink Delight, White Wonder, Loris, Golden Ray, Fenn, Beacon, Helen Goddard and a new seedling from S. J. Goddard and excellent Fenn, Pink Delight and a Winsor sport from W. D. Howard, of Milford. The display of exhibits was the largest in the club's history.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, has a house 28x150 containing 5,000 Campbell violets, which gives him many thousands of flowers daily. He has a smaller house also devoted to them, also a house 30x209, containing 5,000 Princess of Wales. His other specialties, all of which are well grown, are yellow marguerites and sweet peas.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, our largest bulb specialists, have an immense daily output of hyacinths, narcissi and tulips. They find a good call for La Reine, pure white as well as pink in color. Their Formosa lilies are good. They will start cutting Spanish iris in a few days.

M. F. Gray, of Mattapan, at the Boston Co-operative Market, has an excellent assortment of hyacinths in pans, also lilac plants and cut speciosum lilies in quantity.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, is sending excellent pink annual lupines to the Flower Growers' Sales Co., also pink and lavender sweet peas.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will have a rousing meeting March 19, when George W. Kerr, of Doylestown, Pa., speaks on sweet peas and their culture. Extraordinary interest is this season being manifested here in sweet peas, due in large measure to the big sweet pea show in July.

Alexander Porter, of Woburn, has splendid sweet peas in variety, and Princess of Wales violets, at the Boston Co-operative Market.

Paine Bros., of Randolph, are now heavy bulb shippers to the Boston Flower Exchange. Their specialties are La Reine tulip, Golden Spur, Victoria and Princeps narcissi.

Prof. E. A. White, professor of floriculture at the Amherst Agricultural College, accompanied by sixteen students, spent February 22, 23 and 24 visiting leading Boston stores and greenhouse establishments in Framingham, Ellis, Cliftondale, Natick, North Easton and Nahant.

Arthur Capers, of Wellesley, is an excellent carnation grower, whose stock of Pink Delight, Beacon, Fair Maid and White Enchantress is in brisk demand at the Boston Co-operative Market.

Fine, the Dartmouth street florist, reports excellent business, both in plants and cut flowers, during all the present winter. He always has an attractive window.

Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, is this season particularly strong on sweet peas and Campbell violets. The latter he grows remarkably well.

W. N. Craig lectured at Horticultural hall February 24 on "A Year's Vegetable Supply for the Home Garden." There was the largest audience of the season. Martin Sullivan, gardener for W. Whitman, had ten splendid specimen plants of Cineraria stellata on exhibition; awarded a gratuity.

The B. F. Washington Estate, of North Stoughton, is shipping a fine lot of callas, calendulas, snapdragons and bulbous stock to the Boston Co-operative Market.

Charles Rapp, of Melrose Highlands, in addition to his usual line of carnations, is cutting some excellent Cattleya Trianæ.

Israel Quint, of Roxbury, is sending fine hyacinths, tulips and narcissi to the Boston Co-operative Market.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, states that his plants for Easter trade never looked better. He has a new azalea of Haeren's introduction, which in color and as a keeper will, he states, beat anything now in commerce.

J. M. Cohen, at the Boston Co-operative Market, is getting some superb wallflowers from W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro, grand pink snapdragons from W. T. Walke, of Salem, and top grade yellow marguerites from J. W. Simpson, of Woburn, and D. J. Horrigan, of Foxboro.

J. Streiferd & Son, of Weymouth, are sending in an excellent assortment of roses and carnations, as well as callas.

Great sympathy is felt for Charles F. Boyle, of Galvin's, who lost his wife and twin infants February 18. Mr. Boyle had only been married a little over a year.

Adolph E. E. Koch, of Nobscot, states that the demand for rooted cuttings of pink snapdragons is so strong that he has had to refuse many orders.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club will hold a field day with W. W. Edgar Co., at Waverly, March 23.

M. A. Hudson, of Natick, has excellent yellow marguerites and calendulas at the Boston Co-operative Market.

N. H. Silverman, in line with other retail florists, is featuring old-fashioned bouquets with holders. There seems to be a growing call for this class of bouquets.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. are busy preparing for their extensive garden display at Horticultural hall, which will

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirtieth annual convention, Chicago, June 25 to 27, 1912.

VISITED CHICAGO: Charles Loechner, New York; Chas. P. Guelf, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, has returned from a trip to Florida and Cuba.

THIS week's obituary column contains a report of the death of Victor Schrage, a prominent seedsman of Cincinnati, O.

THERE is a good demand for seeds of the pickling varieties of cucumber, and it is expected to increase as the season progresses, for the pickle market is pretty bare because of the short pack last season.

THE L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., has considerably increased its advertising compared to last year's appropriation. The advertising is placed by the J. Walter Thompson Co., Frank B. White acting as counselor.

BEAULIEU, the seedsman at Woodhaven, L. I., has retained Coudert Bros., 2 Rector street, New York, to prosecute certain claims against the American Express Co. for overcharges, excess duty paid and delay in delivering a shipment of thirty-two bags of French seeds.

THE McVay Seed Co. has been incorporated at Birmingham, Ala., with an authorized capital stock of $10,000, and will start business with $5,000 of the stock paid in. The officers are: President, J. B. Dolsen; vice-president, John L. Parker; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. C. E. McVay.

FROM all the talk about peas in Idaho and Montana it would appear that the acreage growing out there would be enough to supply an average season's needs. But the trade is not apt to wholly desert the old pea section all at once. Wonder where all the stock seed is coming from, anyhow?

THE blizzard that was general February 21 from the Missouri river to the Atlantic, extending far south and in some districts being the most severe in twenty years, stemmed the rapidly rising tide of mail orders, but it was too late in the season for the snow to last long and business soon was gathering volume again.

FERRY AT TWIN FALLS.

The following is from the Times, of Twin Falls, Idaho, for February 16:

"A proposition of interest to every resident of the Twin Falls tract, and farmers especially, was presented to the Twin Falls Commercial Club this week by R. M. Moore, representing the D. M. Ferry & Co. seed house of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Moore's proposition in brief is to make contracts with the farmers to raise garden peas, the entire crop to be purchased by D. M. Ferry & Co. at 3 cents a pound, and will wait for its pay for the stock seed until the crop is sold in the fall. The farmer will be at no cash outlay whatever, his only expense being the work of planting and harvesting the crop. It isn't even necessary to cultivate them.

"The average crop of garden peas, according to Mr. Moore, is from twenty-five to fifty bushels, and the high record in Montana last year was fifty-eight bushels three pecks. The average crop on the Twin Falls tract should be fifty to sixty bushels, as all farm profit may be had by turning the hogs into the field after harvest, as the waste peas and vines are excellent feed.

"Peas were grown extensively last year at Livingston and Bozeman, Mont., and at St. Anthony, Idaho, and the farmers are so well pleased that they are putting out a much larger acreage this year.

"Mr. Moore is now visiting the farmers on the tract with the intention of signing up for 500 acres."

THE AMZI GODDEN INTERESTS.

For some time the Amzi Godden Seed Co., Birmingham, Ala., has been considering the question of discontinuing its retail department and devoting all of its capital and energy to its large and rapidly growing wholesale and mail order business. It has had several attractive offers and has finally traded with the McVay Seed Co., which will take over this department and cater to the retail trade of Birmingham and vicinity.

For several years the wholesale trade of the Amzi Godden Seed Co. has been one of the largest in the south, but it is now the expectation of the officers of the company to make it one of the largest in the entire country. They feel that with ample capital, experience and concentrated energy, they can reach every state in the south and make Birmingham the home of the south's largest wholesale seed business.

PEAS IN WASHINGTON STATE.

I have noted the frequent references in The Review to the growing of garden peas for seeds in Idaho. We grow many tons of peas for seeds in this county, Whatcom, State of Washington. We are far up on Puget Sound, close to the Canadian line, but it is a natural climate for the best of peas and a large yield is quite common. We reckon our crops by the ton. In well prepared land we get two tons to the acre, equal to sixty-six and two-thirds bushels per acre, and they sold last fall at $62 per ton. Counting $20 per acre as the cost of seed and labor, we can pay 10 per cent on land valued at $400 per acre. Our peas are nearly all contracted to C. C. Morse & Co., of San Francisco. This class of peas has only been grown here the last two years.

This west Washington climate is specially fine for peas. Our extremely heavy summer dews are the cause of it; all plant life is fed to the complete saturation point every night. In twenty-four years of residence here I never have known of a crop failure. Sometimes we are damaged by too much rain, but never by the lack of it. In 1910 we had sixty-three inches of rain; in the dry year of 1911, forty-three inches.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston, June 1912.

JOSEPH ROLKER, of A. Rolker & Sons, New York, has just made a trip among the nurserymen of the middle west.

THE death of Mrs. Wm. C. Barry, Sr., wife of the well-known member of Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester nurserymen, is reported in the obituary column this week.

ORLANDO HARRISON, the well-known nurseryman at Berlin, Md., is president of the Peninsula Produce Exchange, operating at forty shipping points, with head office at Pocomoke, Md.

THE Sacramento Valley Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Willow, Cal., with a capital of $100,000. The members of the company are Levi C. Rice, R. D. Banbury, W. M. Connarn, John E. Finnall and F. W. Huggins, of Los Angeles; W. R. Chesley and F. H. Griswold, of Willow.

THE nurseries in Oklahoma report deliveries of nursery stock to be far above normal for this season of the year, January having seen larger shipments than any previous January in the history of the industry in the state. The items principally in request are apple, peach, plum and pear.

THE Phoenix Nursery, comprising thirty-one acres, at Delavan, Wis., has been purchased by F. B. Stowe, of the Maywood Nursery Co., Maywood, Ill. Mr. Stowe has remodeled the office on his new property and is planning other improvements. Will Moore, who has been connected with the nursery for many years, will be retained under the new management.

ISAIAH MARTIN, nurseryman and real estate dealer at Redlands, Cal., has made some particularly generous offers of aid to the Board of Trade, of which he is a director. The Board is making a special effort to increase its membership and the funds in its treasury, and Mr. Martin has been stimulating this effort by making various liberal propositions, including an offer to "give as much as all the rest of the real estate agents in Redlands give together."

FIELD ROSES IN ENGLAND.

A Beautiful New

ORNAMENTAL CLIMBER

The so-called Air Potato, an extremely decorative climber, a species of Dioscorea, or Ornamental Yam. It is a very rampant grower, with emerald-green, glossy, strongly nerved, heart-shaped leaves, long tassels of white flowers, and provided all along the stems with potato-like tubers, the size of a hickory nut up to a large apple, of a light grayish color. The leaves overlap like the shingles of a roof. The plant was introduced a few years ago from the South Sea Islands by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, under the name of Smilax sandvicensis. It makes fine specimen plants in a few months, being particularly valuable for veranda decoration. Shoots 60 to 80 feet long in one season are no exceptions. These potato-like tubers can also be grown in pots into very ornamental specimens and may be sold as such. The glossy foliage alone recommends them to everybody. In our gardens it is admired more than any other plant.

PRICES:

$20.00 per 1000 for tubers of hickory nut size
30.00 per 1000 for tubers of walnut size
50.00 per 1000 for tubers of apple size and larger

Also for sale: Xanthosoma maculatum, leaf stems marbled white and purple, $10 00 per 100; Xanthosoma violaceum, leaf stems violet purple, $10.00 per 100; Alocasia Roezlii, leaves marbled white and green, $25.00 per 100. All are grand Caladium-like foliage plants.

a very considerable surplus in hand,'' and continues: ''We hope the trade will keep a level head in this matter and that there will be no panic or rush to clear out by slaughtering the prices in the spring. Any small gain from such a course would do infinitely more harm to business the following season than any little saving now could possibly compensate for, and we had better make up our minds now to a small sacrifice rather than try to avoid it by wrecking the prospect for the future.''

BUY HILL'S EVERGREENS AND GET BEST SELECTIONS

Your standing with your customers depends on the kind of stock you supply them. If it's evergreens, you doubtless have to buy—very few general nurserymen can command the facilities necessary to grow evergreens right.

It's doubly important, then, that you get your stock from growers whom you know you can depend on—whose product you can recommend to your trade as confidently as though you had grown it yourself.

We have the facilities, the men, and the skill necessary to grow evergreens right—and you can depend on what we tell you as gospel fact. We are evergreen specialists—have been pushing that line for over 50 years, and are now growing millions of evergreens annually. No other American grower can offer nearly such a complete stock.

CLEVELAND.

The Sixth City.

Stock of all kinds is arriving in quantities to meet the demand and prices are lower than for several months. Killarney and White Killarney are to be had in any quantity and some extra good stock is seen. Sweet peas, valley and jonquils are a trifle short of the demand, but all other stock, such as carnations, tulips, calla and Formosa lilies, are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Various brands of entertainment were uncorked on the evening of February 22, when George Washington Smith entertained his florist friends at his new home on Lake avenue. The boys were treated to some excellent music. The best selection was Herman Knoble's rendition of "The Sextet from Lucia." He sang it nicely, all by himself, ably assisted by Prof. George Bate at the piano. Fred Witthuhn gave some good reasons "Why Girls Leave Home," which caused G. P. Scherer to remember several stories that he said he should have forgotten. Well, to sum it all up, everybody had a good time—Chas. Russell had the tallest stack of blues. I nearly forgot to mention that George Washington Smith had sent his wife and family away for the evening. George Washington was the recipient of a handsomely carved table, the gift of the assembled party.

The Cleveland Chamber of Industry, which has so freely donated the use of its banquet hall for the Florists' Club's dances, has called on the florists for a return of favors. It is celebrating its fifth anniversary March 7 and has asked the florists to contribute the decorations. This will be a case of the individual repaying the favor done to the Florists' Club, but stock is plentiful and if the growers furnish the stock and the retailers their time, they should be able to make good with the Chamber of Industry.

Visitors: J. J. Karins, with Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia; Robert Fulton, with Henry & Lee, New York.

The Market.

Trade has been only fair for the last week. A fall of about twelve inches of snow in the early part of the week brought things almost to a standstill. The market is well stocked again and the street fakers are making their appearance. Carnations are plentiful and the price dropped to $2 to $3 per 100 last week. Roses are available in quantities and some first-class stock is to be had. Beauties are scarce and none too good, but the demand is not great. Easter and calla lilies are in good supply. Sweet peas are becoming abundant and are moving well. Bulbous stock is plentiful. Valley, violets, freesias, mignonette and snapdragons are abundant. Pot plant trade has picked up wonderfully since the first part of the month. Azaleas, primulas, cyclamens, lilacs, hyacinths, tulips and daffodils find a ready sale.

Various Notes.

Peter Weiland, of New Castle, has been shipping quantities of sweet peas to this market.

Fred Stolti, formerly with A. Wiegand & Sons, has taken a position with Alfred Brandt.

Paul Berkowitz, with Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, spent a day with the trade here last week.

John Grande and August Rieman are cutting some fine Easter lilies.

Albert Pittet will exhibit some of his new seedling sweet peas at the Chicago spring show.

A. Wiegand & Sons have received material for two new 27-foot houses.

C. Boheit, formerly with Sidney Smith, has taken a position with L. F. Benson.

The next meeting of the State Florists' Association will be held in the horticultural rooms at the State House on Tuesday, March 5, at 7 p. m. This meeting is to be devoted to novelties. Anyone having any novelties to exhibit may send them to Secretary Herman Junge, at 134 North Alabama street, and they will be properly staged.

ENOUGH FOR A WHILE.

It makes hardly any difference what is advertised in the Classified Department of The Review, or when; there almost always is some part of the country in which the stock offered is in season and in demand. A propagating house can be kept busy with the use of classified space in The Review.

Please discontinue our advertisement for chrysanthemum cuttings, as we have sufficient orders to keep us busy for a while. We will mail you revised copy soon and thank you for the excellent work The Review is doing for us. —Zieger & Sons, Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 24, 1912.

Parentage, HARLOWARDEN and ENCHANTRESS

As a medium-priced "red" it has a very promising future

From the Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., where this has been grown on trial, we have a letter under date of Nov. 24, 1911, saying: "So far we like the new seedling very much; the color of the flower is fine and the size good. The stems are stiff and the number of blooms to a plant shows it will be a good producer."

E. J. Weaver, of Ronks, Pa., who has been growing five hundred on trial, writes us under date of Jan. 8, 1912: "So far this season this variety has produced more than double the blooms Beacon has, planted in the same house, and I feel sure it will maintain its lead the balance of the season. It is of a much brighter color than Beacon, flower as large, with a good stem, and a calyx that practically does not split, not averaging more than one split flower a week from the five hundred plants."

AMHERST, MASS.

The program for Farmers' Week at the Massachusetts Agricultural College has just been issued. A new feature this year will be a day devoted to glass house agriculture. The morning of Thursday, March 14, will be devoted to a consideration of market gardening problems, and in the afternoon and evening more distinctly floricultural subjects will be under consideration. At 1:30 H. D. Haskins, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, will speak on "Fertilizers for Glass House Agriculture." Mr. Haskins has made extensive studies along the line of commercial fertilizers for greenhouse crops. At 3 p. m. Dr. H. H. Whetzel, of the Department of Plant Pathology, Cornell University, will speak on "Plant Disease Problems of the Florist." Dr. Whetzel has made wide investigations on this subject and is an authority on plant diseases. At 7 o'clock Dr. H. T. Fernald, of the Massachusetts Experiment Station, will speak on "Some Recent Investigations in Greenhouse Fumigation."

In addition to these addresses on floriculture, there will be an exhibition of roses, carnations, etc. Among those who have signified their intentions of sending material for the exhibition are: A. N. Pierson, Inc., Peter Fisher, M. A. Patten, C. H. Totty, Waban Rose Conservatories, Eber Holmes, Wm. Sim, Bassett & Washburn, the Chicago Carnation Co., W. H. Elliott and others.

On Friday morning there will be an opportunity to inspect the college ranges and a description of the instruction work at the colleges will be given by E. A. White, also an outline of proposed experimental investigations along floricultural lines. After this an observation trip will be taken to the large rose ranges of the Montgomery Co., East Hadley, and to the commercial range of H. W. Field, Northampton.

Freeport, Ill.—John Bauscher will install a modern system of electric lighting at his greenhouses early in the spring.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Business dropped off a little more than was anticipated with the opening of the lenten season and for a short time stock accumulated more than at any time this year; weather conditions also helped to bring along stock a little more rapidly, which resulted in a cut in prices all around. Carnations for once were plentiful and from reports there will be enough to go around from now on. In fact, there was no shortage of any stock at any time, with the exception of American Beauties.

Various Notes.

Wm. Zimmermann's delivery automobile got in a bad mix-up last Friday and from reports drew the short end of the deal. This firm reports business as keeping up well ever since Valentine's day.

Currie Bros. Co. was kept busy all day Sunday with funeral work. It was a surprise that one funeral which was to have taken place Monday was, owing to the inclemency of the weather, postponed until Tuesday.

At J. M. Fox & Son's store a general run of business has kept them busy for the last fortnight.

Milwaukee was visited by the worst blizzard of the season February 25 and 26. By Monday night there were so many snowdrifts that traffic was next to impossible; city cars were out of commission and the steam roads did not fare much better. "We had more trouble during that snow storm to get the express companies to call for and deliver goods than we have all winter," was the report that came from the G. Rusch Co. on Monday night.

C. C. Pollworth's greenhouses are now cutting a fine lot of carnations; their large cut of Easter lilies of late has been just the thing for funeral work orders.

At the range of Holton & Hunkel Co., on Humboldt avenue, the pot plants for Easter are coming along in good shape, while the lilies look especially promising at this time.

A visit to the Mueller & Schroeder Co., February 25, revealed as pretty and clean a batch of carnations as one would want to see. All benches are a mass of buds in different stages, while the young plants are in prime condition.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., called on the trade to satisfy their wants in Easter supplies. Another visitor was M. B. Lassen, Racine, Wis. E. O.

MITCHELL, S. D.

February 1 one of the city's largest industries, the Mitchell Greenhouses and Nurseries, was converted from a private partnership into an incorporated business. The greater portion of the stock has been distributed among Mitchell people and the organization has now been completed by the election of directors and officers.

The following stockholders were elected directors: C. E. Newbury, S. E. Morris, Lewis Shuster, W. W. Reams and Ernest F. McKillips. C. E. Newbury was elected president and general manager, Ernest F. McKillips, vice-president and treasurer, and W. W. Reams, secretary.

The reorganization of the enterprise was through the efforts of Ernest F. McKillips and W. W. Reams. The Newburys capitalized their business recently at $100,000, and the new promoters of the plant issued stock to the amount of $75,000, of which they hold $28,000.

With only twelve city lots with which to lay the foundation of this present business, the Newburys have steadily grown, until now there are 100 acres, with 55,000 square feet of glass covering twenty-one greenhouses, making it the largest horticultural establishment in the Dakotas. It has the largest heating plant in the city, and a complete water system of its own, operated by electric pumps.

Beginning with a small local trade, the Newburys not only cover the whole state with their shipments of flowers, but ship into all of the northwestern states. Not only this, but they wholesale greenhouse stock in every state in the Union.

The nursery department has developed even faster than the greenhouses and they now ship all kinds of nursery stock within a radius of hundreds of miles. The nursery department now not only does a retail but a wholesale business.

West Park, N. Y.—Andrew Mason, superintendent of Col. O. H. Payne's estate, has the new range, recently erected by Lord & Burnham Co., in good running order. He expects to build a wall garden for fruit trees this summer.

LENOX, MASS.

The Lenox Horticultural Society held a special meeting February 17, for the purpose of revising and adopting a schedule for the summer exhibition, to be held August 21 and 22. The schedule is still in the hands of the committee, but they hope soon to have it printed, for all concerned are most interested in the coming show, as it touches on nearly every branch of horticulture and is especially strong in the vegetable classes. So, with the liberal amount of cups and medals and money prizes offered, it is to be hoped that Providence will grant a good season and that we shall have a record show. W. H.

North Baltimore, O.—On account of the health of Mrs. Keller, C. A. Keller plans to dispose of the Keller Floral Co. and remove to a more congenial climate.

EASTER IS COMING SOON

Araucarias Our Specialty

No Arguments Needed

For Easter Day, next Easter Day,
Come fill your benches right away.
The Palms will grow, Azaleas bloom
Best in your house if purchased soon.

The Araucarias that I sell
Will dollars grow if treated well,
And all my Lilies healthy are,
Without one sickly leaf to mar.

What do you need for Easter Day?
Bulbs, Ferns, whatever else you say—
I've everything the people need,
All growing strong as any weed.

And oh, the beauty of them all,
The best of earth, both large and small!
Why, Godfrey Aschmann leader stands,
With all that's good from many lands.

We have an immense stock of EASTER AZALEAS, blooming at Easter or before. Mme. Vander Cruyssen, double pink; Simon Mardner, double pink; Deutsche Perle, double white; Niobe, double white; Helene Theleman, Professeur Wolters, Vervaeneana, double variegated; Apollo, red, and others, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Vervaeneana, Simon Mardner, Deutsche Perle, nearly in bloom, 75c to $1.00.

NOTICE

We have the finest LILIUM MULTIFLORUM in the market. All the Dutch and Belgian drummers, who visit all the noted growers in this country, say: "These are the best lilies we have ever seen in all our journey." No wonder we paid our growers in Japan $95.00 for selected 9-10 bulbs. The best is always the cheaper—this our motto. We offer them in 6-in. pots, 5 to 10 buds to a plant, 10c per bud; plants under 5 buds, 12c per bud. Plants have good foliage from bottom up, are of medium height, and the buds are just right for Easter sales.

We have to offer, in prime condition, a large stock of ARAUCARIA EXCELSA, 5½, 6 and 7-in, 4, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, 18, 20, 28, 30 to 40 in. high, 50c up to $1.25; ROBUSTA COMPACTA, EXCELSA GLAUCA, $1.00 up to $2.00.

FERNS.—SCOTTII, WHITMANI, BOSTON, SCHOLZELI and GIATRASII, 5½, 6 and 7-inch sizes, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

RUBBER PLANTS, 6 and 7-in. pots, 25 to 35 in. high, 35c, 40c, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

20,000 ASPARAGUS PLUMOSUS, 2½, 3 and 4-in., 3c, 5c and 10c; SPRENGERI, 4-in., 10c.

KENTIAS, BELMOREANA AND FORSTERIANA, single, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 25, 30 to 40 in. high, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. KENTIA BELMOREANA, made up, 60c, 75c to $1.00.

LATANIA BORBONICA, 7-in., 30 to 35 in. high, 8 leaves, 75c to $1.00; made up, 6-in., 30 in. high, 50c.

ARECA LUTESCENS, 4-in., made up of 3 plants, 15c, 25c; 5¼ in., 25c.

COCOS WEDDELLIANA, 3-in., 15c; 4-in., 20c.

PRIMULA CHINENSIS, in bloom. 4-in., 10c; 5¼-in., $2.00 per doz.

CINERARIA HYBRIDA, our well known strain, 5½ to 6-in. pots, in bud and bloom and for Easter sales, 25c, 35c, 50c and 75c; 4-in., to grow for Easter, 10c; 3-in., 5c.

CYCLAMENS

YOU NEED CYCLAMENS and we have them in fine shape, 4-in., 5-in. and 6-in., from 15c to 50c each,

150,000 GIANT CYCLAMEN SEEDLINGS.

We claim the finest commercial strain in this country. Mr. A. Hange, Birmingham, Ala., says, "I planted 100 of your seedlings last year (1910) in comparison with 2500 from so-called unrivaled, high-priced English strains, but yours outgrew them." Transplanted August seedlings, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.

GODFREY CALLAS bring 3 flowers to 1 of the common, and bloom from 3-in. pots; 3-in., $6.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE big blizzard that swept over the country February 21 again disorganized transportation and coal has come forward slowly in the last week. With a suspension of mining operations March 31 almost certain, it behooves every grower to put himself on the safe side in the next three weeks.

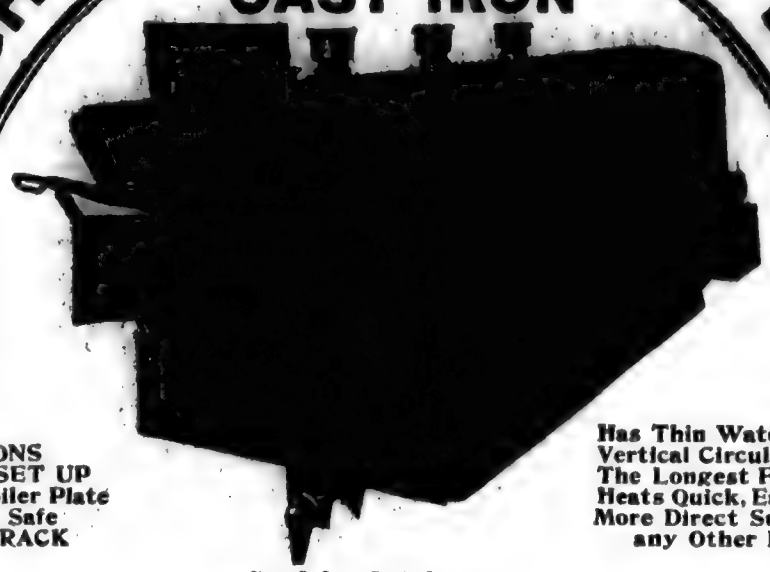
CEMENT WASH FOR PIPES.

Would it be all right to paint the heating pipes with a thin coat of lime and cement? M. B.

While there would be no particular objection to painting the heating pipes with cement or other similar washes, it would tend to rub off in time. A more durable wash can be made of lampblack mixed with equal parts of linseed oil and turpentine. If the cement and lime wash is used, it should be made quite thin, as otherwise it will be likely to scale off and it will also impede the radiation of heat.

QUANTITY OF FUEL.

In reply to the inquiry of L. M. M. in The Review of January 25, page 84, concerning the quantity of fuel per 1,000 square feet of glass, I will say that in St. Louis we are using about 1,300 bushels of screenings and 300 bushels of lump coal of mixed grades to heat 6,000 square feet of glass to 60 degrees. This equals sixty-four tons, or ten and two-thirds tons per 1,000 feet of glass.



We are using an internally fired tubular boiler with hot water under pressure and like that type of boiler for screenings, as it has relatively large heating power in the flues, which are cleaned every day, this being an important matter.

With 10 degrees above zero and a high broadside wind, it required twenty-two bushels in twenty-four hours to hold the temperature at 52 degrees, which was as severe as any weather we had, but we hold the temperature generally at 60 degrees. R. S.

THREE DETACHED HOUSES.

Please let me know the best way to pipe my greenhouses. House No. 1, which runs north and south, is 29x120, sixteen feet to the ridge and six feet to the eaves, with three feet of glass in the sides. In this house, which is to be used for carnations, I want a temperature of 50 degrees in zero weather. The boiler shed is at the north end of house No. 1. House No. 2 runs west from the north end of No. 1, but is separated from No. 1 and from the boiler shed by a passageway. This house is 16x100; it is eight feet to the ridge and has 4-foot walls. It is partitioned, making two rooms. The east room, the one next to the boiler, is forty feet long; the other room is sixty feet long. In

Gentlemen:-

Your #7 Kroeschell Boiler rated at 15,000 sq.ft. of glass is carrying my entire range of 17,000 sq.ft. of glass. It might heat more.

We maintain a temperature of 50° and had no trouble to keep the proper temperature in the coldest weather.

During the recent cold snap I fired every 3 hours during the night. I find it a saving in coal to fire often. I have the KROESCHELL BOILER six years, and the only expense is one set of grates.

NO OTHER BUT A PLATE BOILER FOR ME.

the 40-foot room I want 65 degrees and in the 60-foot room I want from 45 to 50 degrees. In this house all the returns will be on the side walls. South of No. 2 and parallel with it is house No. 3, which is 16x50, twelve feet to the ridge and five feet six inches to the eaves, with thirty inches of glass in the sides. It is to be used for propagating carnations. What is the proper temperature for a propagating house?

What size of hot water boiler will be required? We shall use a Burnham boiler. Will a 3½-inch outlet from the boiler be large enough? What size of expansion tank will be required, and what size of pipe should be used to connect it? Where should the connection be made? Our location is southern New Jersey. C. H. B.

The boiler to heat three houses of the size given should have a rating of 2,800 to 3,000 square feet of radiation, and there should be two 3½-inch flow pipes. One of these should supply house No. 1 and the other will answer for the other two houses. Although a smaller expansion tank would answer, it will be well to select one with a capacity of twenty gallons. Run the flow pipes downhill and from the highest part of each take a 1-inch pipe. Unite these and connect with the expansion tank with a 1¼-inch pipe. If convenient to do so, elevate the expansion tank ten or fifteen feet. However, five feet of elevation will answer, and even less might be used if necessary.

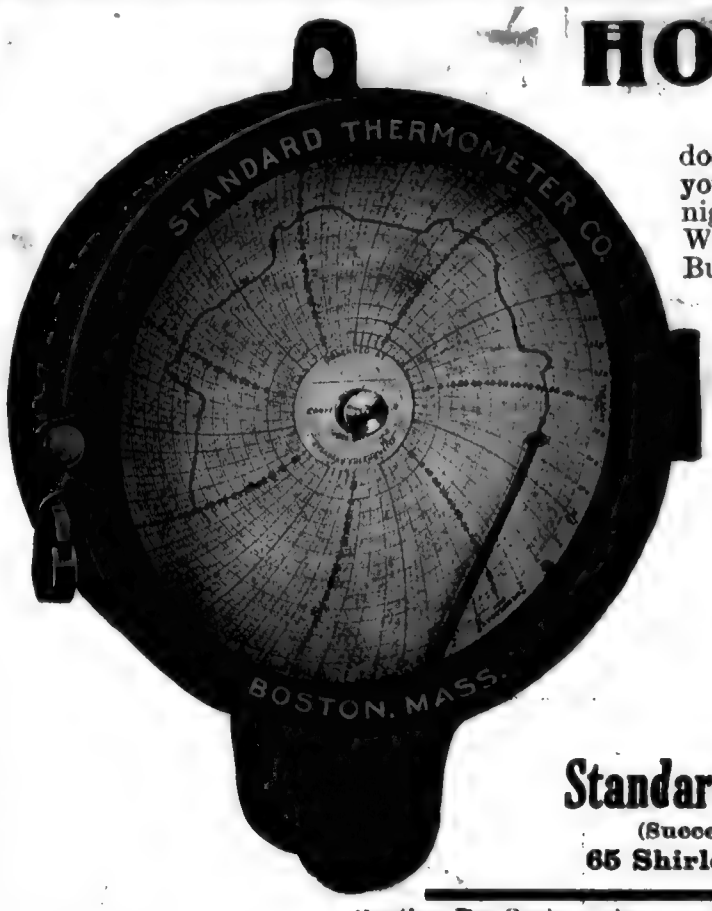
For the heating of house No. 1 to 50 degrees, use three 2½-inch flow pipes and twelve 2-inch returns. Run one flow under the ridge and the others under the purlins or upon the plates. Four of the returns may be upon each wall and the others under the benches, or in the walks if beds are used.



For heating house No. 2, several ways might be used. One of the simplest would be to run a 3-inch flow pipe through the house to the west end and bring back eight 2-inch returns. This would give a temperature of 50 degrees in both ends of the house. To give a higher temperature in the east end of the house, take off a 2-inch pipe from the overhead flow, which should drop down and supply four 2-inch returns running through the east end of the house. In case, however, it is likely that at any time only one end of the house may require heat, it will be better either to run a separate 2½-inch flow pipe for each room, or to run the 3-inch flow as suggested above, but, instead of having the returns run back through the east room, connect them to the boiler by means of one 2½-inch or two 2-inch returns after uniting them at the partition by means of headers. For heating the east room, take off a 2½-inch flow from the overhead 3-inch pipe, and supply with this twelve 2-inch returns.

For the carnation propagating house, 16x50 feet, which should have a temperature of 50 degrees with about 10 degrees of bottom heat, run two 2½-inch flows and ten 2-inch returns. The returns should be under the benches, which should be partly enclosed to hold the heat.

IN WESTERN OHIO.

I have been much interested in the information that I have found from time to time in The Review, with reference to the piping and heating of greenhouses, but none of the instructions have exactly suited my case. Please tell me how to pipe my two houses, both to be used for a general collection of plants, but one to be somewhat cooler than the other. The houses are each 15x50 and nine feet high to the ridge. I have a ten horse-power boiler. H. W. R.

The foregoing description does not give a clear idea of the construction of the houses, but if the walls are tight, without glass, and not more than five feet high, and if the roofs are also in good condition, it will be possible to pipe one house, 15x50, so that a temperature of 50 degrees can be maintained, by using one 2½-inch flow pipe about eighteen inches under the ridge, and six 2-inch return pipes. Three of these could be on each wall; or, if there is a bench in the middle of the house, two of the pipes could be carried underneath and the other pipes

DETROIT.

The Market.

The exceedingly heavy snowfall last week seems to have put a damper on business, in this city at least. For several days the car service was greatly impaired and since then the streets have been almost impassable, owing to the thawing of the snow. Another heavy snowfall added to the bad condition on Sunday evening, February 25. While the condition of the weather or streets does not usually have much of an effect on the sale of funeral work, even this old standby has been somewhat lacking, and as a result carnations, spring stock and lilies are in oversupply.

Roses are not too plentiful and remain well cleaned up at good prices.

Various Notes.

E. A. Fetters' delivery car was badly damaged by a fire in the Broadway garage on Friday evening, February 23. The body will have to be entirely rebuilt and it is doubtful whether Mr. Fetters will have the use of it by Easter.

Fred Graessle, of Schroeter's, spent several days in Columbus last week. There is a rumor that the wedding bells will soon ring out. Incidentally he visited the trade while in Columbus.

Breitmeyer's had some large azaleas in their window last week, bearing real cherries—candy coated—in place of flowers. A cherry tree in the foreground, with a small hatchet, was also suggestive of Washington's birthday.

A. Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co., intends to take a trip east next week and will visit New York, Philadelphia, etc.

William Dilger carried out the decorations at Harmonie hall last week for the annual masquerade and was highly complimented upon his work. He used many hundred birch poles to form a pergola, covering these with southern smilax.

Robert Rahaley, of the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange, has not been feeling well for several days, but it is hoped that he will be back on the job before this is in print.

Much business of importance is to be transacted at the meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, to be held on Monday evening, March 4, and every member should make it a point to attend.

Gentlemen: In reply to your letter of Jan. 27, will say that we have been using Fungine on lettuce for dry wilt, on roses for mildew, also on growing tomato plants. We are very much pleased with the success that we have had with it.

We use the Aphine for lice on lettuce instead of ——— [a nicotine preparation] and other mixtures. We also find this to be very successful.

Kindly advise us if you put this up in barrel lots; if so, give us prices, as we will be using more and more of this Fungine as the season advances.

The Market.

The week of February 12 was unusually active, and everyone seemed satisfied with results. The custom of sending flowers for valentines was carried further this year than ever before, and it was quite common for a lady to leave orders for deliveries to all her friends. Violets were the favorite and were in plentiful supply. American Beauties were scarce, and nearly all orders had to be refused. As usual, red carnations were away out of reach for Valentine's day and for Washington's birthday, but since then they have not moved as fast as other colors.

Long Beauties are coming in better now, and in greenhouses where they were cutting two or three a day last week, they are now getting a dozen or more. There are few of a medium grade, however. Tea roses are better, although there are not yet enough to supply the demand, especially in short stock, such as is used in funeral work. There have been several large funerals during the last two weeks, and roses that are at all salable have found a market.

The cut of carnations is at its height and consequently there is a surplus. The quality of stock is first-class. Enchantress is inclined to take its annual nap and frequent complaints are received because it has gone to sleep after having been cut only a few hours. Bulb stock is coming in heavily. There are some fine pots and pans of hyacinths, tulips and daffodils. Some elegant azaleas are to be seen. They are much better now than they were at Christmas time, but unfortunately do not bring as good prices.

Easter and calla lilies are abundant. A few bunches of pansies are brought in occasionally and are sold immediately.

There is no smilax within miles of us. All that Colorado Springs had has been cut and shipped and now we do not know where to look for it. Ferns are in great demand, and the weekly shipments received are sold quickly. There is no overabundance of Sprengeri, and practically no plumosus. Adiantum Croweanum is about cut out, and what is now coming in is short and inferior.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Robinson have bought the D. Marsh place at La Junta, Colo., where they will conduct a first-class flower store. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson were both with the Mauff Floral Co. for some time.

The Coterie of the Park Floral Co. was entertained February 13 by Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Valentine, at their home. It was a "Valentine" party, and some of the original valentines created much merriment. J. A. Jensen was admitted to membership, after having been subjected to a most rigid examination.

Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Long returned from the east February 12.

N. A. Benson has started work on five new greenhouses, in which he will grow roses the coming season.

Frank Fraser, of the Alpha Floral Co., has been quite ill for over a week.

Fred Meyer, a successful rose grower who has been with Emil Glauber for several years, has gone to Richmond, Ind., to accept a position with the E. G. Hill Co.

The decorations at the Cafe Martin, at its public opening February 24, were by Miss Pearse, of the Dutch Mill.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

YOUR RAIN

Is always ready if you have a

Standard Pumping Engine

THIS is the case whether you want the "rain" in the field or in the greenhouses Standard Pumping Engines are always ready for instant service, because reliability is the keystone of their construction. Either gas or gasoline can be used for fuel. The supply of water may be drawn from wells or cisterns, lakes or rivers, and can be pumped direct into the pipe lines for spraying, irrigating or applying liquid fertilizers, or the water can be pumped into elevated storage or air pressure tanks, if that system is preferred.

No laborious "hand power"—No waiting for favorable winds—No expense raising steam to get ready. Your expense for operation starts and stops with the engine. No extras.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

With the coming of Lent a damper has been put on the florists' business. However, there have been a number of funerals and transient trade has been fair, but Washington's birthday had no great effect upon business. Almost a week of mild weather, with some sunshine, has brought an abundance of bulbous stock into the market, and tulips, hyacinths and daffodils have taken a drop of a few cents on the hundred. Violets have been affected by the warm weather and are not quite as good as they have been, excepting Princess of Wales, which are much better.

Carnations are arriving in great quantities and are much reduced in price; nevertheless the quality is excellent. Beauties are indeed rare, for there are scarcely any coming into this market. Other roses are fair and in better supply. Cattleyas are somewhat scarce and the price has advanced. Gardenias also have gone up once more.

Valley is good and there is lots of it, and greens of all kinds are plentiful. The warm weather has brought on azaleas, lilacs and bulbous stock in great shape and large quantities of flowering plants are on sale at the various stores.

Various Notes.

The Bowling Club met last Tuesday evening, but they will have to go some to keep up with the Buffalo team.

George J. Keller is growing some excellent Primula obconica, which finds a ready sale.

Thomas Cogger, of McCarthy & Co., Boston, Mass., was in town last week. He reports that he likes traveling much better than the florists' business and is glad he made the change.

The Wm. Scott Co., of Corfu, N. Y., is cutting sweet peas of exceptionally good quality.

L. J. Brundage is going into partnership with C. G. James, of the firm of James & Son, of Hornell, N. Y. About April 1 they will begin the erection of 10,000 square feet of glass at Penn Yan, N. Y.

J. B. Keller Sons have an unusual window display in a landscape effect, with beds of hyacinths, primroses, daffodils, pussy willows, and a miniature fountain. The suggestion of spring draws large numbers to look at this window.

Mrs. William C. Barry, Sr., died suddenly at her home, 706 Mt. Hope avenue, February 20. Further particulars are given in the obituary column this week. The Rochester Florists' Association sent a beautiful floral tribute to the funeral.

George Boucher's window display last week was most attractive and consisted of Japanese crab apple trees in bloom, and white lilacs. E. C. A.
